For eleven weeks without stopping did the rain continue to moisten the dry places of Sydney some years ago, washing out most cruelly the brief, bright season of winter, when the Australian looks for living instead of existence and peace instead of pressure. And what rain! It shot from the clouds like arrows, and the whole world was a battlefield during that July. As the arrows darted into the earth the earth rose and dashed into the air, and rain and mud met and grappled with each other day after day, night after night, week after week. And the battle was neither to the rain nor to the mud. A strange and horrid situation arrived. Sydney ran clean out of galoches.

For two weeks not a galoche was to be had in the rain drenched city for love or money. Then a fresh shipload arrived from somewhere or other. And then—the rain stopped!—London Mail.

One Trouble After Another.

"I have just found out about the woman opposite me after two years of mystery and anxiety," said the flat dweller. "She is a pretty, fat, rolly poly woman with a white complexion who sits at her window half of her time doing nothing. She has a boy of about ten. Her life seemed so simple and still I didn't see how she lived. Evidently she didn't support a husband, but who supported her? The thing worried me, but last night I found how it was. Her husband is a violin player who plays all night long at some concert hall and sleeps the livelong day. I'd rather work for my living than keep the house quiet for a husband who has to sleep all day, then gets up just at the time you want to go out for a little rollicking and plays the violin somewhere."

Gathering Roses.

I've gathered roses and the like in many glad and golden Junes, but now, as down the world I hike, my weary hands are filled with prunes. I've gathered roses o'er and o'er, and some were white and some were red, but when I took them to the store the grocer wanted eggs instead. I gathered roses long ago, in other days, in other scenes, and people said, "You ought to go and dig the weeds out of your beans." A million roses bloomed and died; a million more will die today. That man is wise who lets them slide and gathers up the bales of hay. —Emporia Gazette.

Setting It Right.

"In your paper this morning, sir, you called me a 'bum actor.' I want an explanation."

"I shall be happy to explain, young man. That word 'actor' was inserted by the proofreader, who thought I had omitted it accidentally. I shall take care that it doesn't happen again."

Pumps.

"Women," declared she, "have bigger intellects than men."

"I won't dispute it," responded he. "A man can't wear footgear that has to be kept on by mental power alone."

Hairbreadth.

TRAPS FOR MARINERS

Some Points of Peril That Are Dreaded by Seamen.

MERCILESS KENTISH KNOCK.

This Real Davy Jones' Locker Is a Vast Cemetery For All Ships That Are Gripped by Its Relentless Sands. Sable Island's Fingers of Death.

The exact location of Davy Jones' locker is not shown on any ocean chart extant, principally because it is a state and not a place, but if any one ocean death trap deserves the title it is the Thames estuary. The British naval department has a chart upon which it marks the position of wrecks with a black dot. On this chart the Thames mouth tract is a solid black spot. So numerous have been the wrecks that the dots run together. The point where the black dots actually pile one on top of another is the Kentish Knock, and this is the place among all of the ocean's danger spots that deserves the title of Davy Jones' locker.

At the Kentish Knock it is not keel shattering rocks of piercing points of coral that wreck the ocean travelers. It is sand, treacherous, clinging sand, that grasps the doomed ship with a grip of steel and holds it firmly while the angry sea beats it to fragments. Many a vessel posted at Lloyd's as missing would be duly accounted for if the Knock sand would give up its booty. There is no hope for ship or man when Father Neptune asks toll at the Kentish Knock, for the nearest land is twenty miles away and the nearest lifeboat at Margate, thirty miles away.

The sands of the ocean are far more dangerous than the rocks. The sand banks extend over more space, therefore offer more points of contact than the rocks, which usually rise in one slender pinnacle. The waters flow over them in smooth waves, and there are no warning breakers.

Next to the Thames mouth tract in point of danger is the Hugli, the salt water river on which Calcutta stands. The most trying part of a large vessel's voyage from New York to Calcutta is the last few miles of this calm river. In this strange river in windless weather and flat, calm water vessels have been lost, dashed to pieces on the ever shifting sand banks by the force of the tides. The sands grasp the keel of the marked vessel, and she stops, but the tide moves on with relentless force, and the helpless ship is carried over on her beam ends. She careens over and founders with all on board. One of the worst shoals in the Hugli bears the name James and Mary. It was the name of a great Indian merchant shipwrecked on the sunken sand banks.

Another danger point dreaded by the master mariner has neither sand nor rocks, but a great submarine waterfall. In the English channel there is a point just beyond the Shambles banks where there is a sudden drop in the sea bottom. The channel tides sweep over the banks and down this sudden drop, creating rapids equal in fury to those of Niagara. The American ship Georgian foundered in Portland race, the name by which this danger point is known, and all hands went down with her.

Ships bound to New York from Europe pass quite near a deadly hidden shoal which runs out from Sable island, lying off Sable cape, in Nova Scotia. The shoal runs out far miles in five directions like the fingers of a great hand reaching out for what it can destroy. When the gales blow, heavy seas boom upon the shoals with sufficient force to shatter the stanchest vessel afloat, and when the wind ceases the beaches are strewn with wreckage and the bodies of those who have perished. The distance from the shore is too great and the surf too heavy for the life savers to reach a struggling vessel, and few lives are saved at this point. Ten vessels have been wrecked in this trap in a single day.

The rocky danger points in the ocean have nearly all been tagged, and lighthouses have been erected on the most dangerous—all except one. There is no lighthouse on the Virgin rock, and there never will be. Out in the mid-Atlantic a giant pinnacle rears its head up from the ocean floor and endeavors vainly to reach the surface of the sea. It is too short by about eighteen feet. There it stands with its sharp point hidden by the ocean waves, waiting to pierce the bottom of some unsuspecting vessel and send it down to join the pile of ships' ribs and dead men's bones that litter the floor around its base. The waves seem to be in league with the rock, for if a vessel of light draft tries to pass over its head the waves shoot it down into a trough at the bottom of which the point of the rock is waiting to rip out her keel.

These danger spots, however, are but annexes to the real Davy Jones' locker, the Kentish Knock, that cemetery of ships and men where dripping ghosts of master mariners and their men dit over the ruins of their vessels.—B. R. Winslow in Los Angeles Times.

Bridge Builders.

We read of the heroes of the battlefield, the ocean and various other callings, but there is another class of men whose work is also heroic, but who are seldom heard of—men who face death high in the air. They are what the engineer calls "riggers" and are the creators of the world's big bridges and the huge skyscrapers of American cities. Without their bravery and skill the towering structures which span the world's great rivers and gorges could not be put together.—Wide World Magazine.

SHORT CUTS.

If You Take the Long Way Round You Never Arrive.

Let women who have swallowed wholesale the proverb that short cuts are sometimes longest forget it. This is a day of short cuts. If you take the long way round you never arrive.

Cuts to be short need not be poorly done with a blunt knife. The cleverest surgeon is he who can perform the biggest operation with the shortest gash.

Learn to do things quickly, but well. Pottering is a word tabooed in the up to date lexicon.

In this hustling world the woman who does not "get there" on an air line never has a chance to rest.

Take to conversational short cuts. She who rambles beats about the bush, proses, bores her hearers and uses up her own nervous energy. If terseness were a habit doctors would never have to order for their women patients periods of Trappist silence.

Be a housekeeping short cutter. Avoid nonessentials. Spend on labor savers rather than on frills. Get down to a system and hold every one else in your household to it. This way lies the solution to the eternal servant problems.

Hunt short cuts with the needle. Many women wear their lives out with constant stitching. Fine hand work is a luxury. Take to a machine for steady wear.

Digging is for the specialist, the scholar. The average busy man or woman to read at all must seek short cuts. Reviews and abstracts are not admirable, but they are better than total ignorance. Literary culling is not the old way. It seems to be the only way in these days of varied interests.

Be a short cutter in business. Learn details, then study to eliminate them if you would have time and strength for bigger things. The swiftest road to success has the fewest curves.

CARING FOR MILK.

A Few Maxims of Value to the Young Housewife.

Tuberculosis kills 5,000,000 people annually. It may be carried through infected milk.

Select a milkman who has clean hands, clean clothes, clean wagon, clean cans and clean bottles.

Do not select a milkman because he sells milk cheap.

Refuse milk that shows a deposit of dirt in the bottom of the bottle.

Do not forget that dirt in milk is a menace to health.

Do not forget that dirty milk may kill the baby.

Always keep pasteurized milk cool. Use at once. Do not forget that germs multiply more rapidly in pasteurized milk than in any other.

Do not leave the milk uncovered anywhere.

Do not leave milk in a warm room or unchilled icebox. Protect it from flies. Do not leave it out of doors in the sun or exposed to cats and dogs.

Do not use the milk bottles for anything but milk.

Wash and scald milk bottles as soon as emptied. Return clean bottles to the milkman. Buy only bottled milk, if possible.

While these "maxims" may horrify some good housekeepers who would never think of being guilty of the negligence implied, there are homes without number, nice homes, too, where sanitary and hygienic rules are violated constantly. In some of these it is because the housekeeper is young or inexperienced; in others, where the care of the kitchen and marketing are left entirely to servants ignorant or constitutionally careless.

To these housekeepers let us whisper that that attention to the meanest detail in housekeeping is not ignoble. It is not only woman's duty, but her great privilege. A man cannot make a home. He may build the houses.

Halls and chambers, roofs and domes,
But the women of the earth, God knows—the women build the homes!

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

In choosing a grape fruit see that it is heavy in proportion to the size. A dry fruit is very light.

To polish a looking glass first rub it with a duster wrung out of cold water and dipped in whiting and then polish with a dry cloth.

If canned fruits are opened an hour or two before using, the excluded oxygen is regained and the flavor improved. Turn out of the jar at once.

As soon as a salt ham or tongue is cooked remove it from the boiling water to a pan of cold water for a few seconds. This will loosen the skin, which may be easily peeled off.

To prevent cabbage boiling over saves time both in stirring the cabbage down and also in cleaning the stove afterward. If a piece of lard about the size of a walnut be dropped into the cabbage pot it will not boil over.

To clean candlesticks, whether of enameled or plain metal, fill them with boiling water. Do not allow the water to stand any time, but pour it away and thoroughly dry the candlestick with a cloth. In this way dirt and grease are removed without doing damage to the color or substance of the candlestick.

To dry clean lace heat some flour and in this put the lace, covering it entirely. Leave it an hour or two, then rub it lightly and shake it well. Unless it has been really very much soiled it will then look like new once more. Valuable lace that cannot bear rubbing may be covered with French chalk and laid aside, wrapped in blue paper, between the pages of a book for a day or two. The chalk will absorb any grease and leave the lace looking fresh and clean.

A FLYING MACHINE.

Directions For Making a Pretty and Amusing Toy.

A feather flying machine is a very simple thing to make, but it will only fly up, as there are no wings to support it when flying horizontally. The motive power is furnished by a whalebone bow, which causes the aerial screws to revolve as it unbends.

For this model you will need eight feathers. They should be carefully selected of the same size and shape. The best are good stiff wing feathers. From them form two screws by sticking them in corks, as in the illustration. One must be arranged to revolve to the right, the other to the left, because the bowstring turns the upper in one direction, while the reaction tends to turn the lower in the opposite way, and if both screws were right handed or left handed they would work against each other and produce little or no effect.

The upper screw is fastened to the spindle, while the lower is attached to the bow. The spindle turns in a hole bored through the bow and into the cork. It moves freely because it simply rests in the hole and is not fastened to the lower screw. The bowstring is tied to the spindle near the top.

When finished, hold the lower screw in one hand and turn the upper with the other until the string is wound on the spindle. Now let go the upper screw and toss it gently into the air, when it will fly until the bow straightens.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A GRAIN OF MUSK.

Perfume Diffuses Odor For Years Without Losing Weight.

Wonderful stories are told of the number of years that some of the old Egyptian perfumes last, but we need not go to Egypt to find a thing like that. We have it here in the common perfume, musk, says Chicago News. It is said that a grain of it will diffuse an odor through a room for twenty years, and you know, perhaps, that all perfumes give off their odor by sending their particles through the air—that is to say, by giving off all the time little parts of their own substance. How small, then, must these particles of musk be when after a continuous diffusion of them for twenty years the original grain has suffered no diminution of weight.

But you can find an illustration of this wonderful divisibility of matter nearer home. Ask a scientist about a drop of blood that falls from your cut finger, and he will tell you that it is a drop of liquid in which are floating a million red globules and that these give it its color. And these million globules may be divided into smaller globules still. Finally, take the familiar illustration of the thread spun by the spider. It is so fine that 25,000 miles of it would weigh only eight ounces, and yet it is made up of a thousand filaments.

Discovery of a Planet.

The glory of discovering the big planet belongs to two men. An astronomer in Cambridge and another in Paris, each quite ignorant of what the other was doing, applied themselves to the task simultaneously. Each independently declared that if the laws of motion and gravitation were true there must be at a certain spot in the heavens a certain mass of matter hitherto unknown to astronomers. The presence of such a mass of matter in such a place would account, they said, for the disturbances that had been noticed in the movements of Uranus. When the telescope was turned to the point indicated the planet which we now know as Neptune was discovered. This brilliant piece of work was done by Leverrier and Adams on the 23d day of September, 1846.

Conundrums.

If a man should give 15 cents to one son and 10 cents to another, what time would it be? A quarter to 2.

Why don't they collect fares from the policemen on the street cars? Because you can't take a nickel from a copper.

When are prisoners like gas? When escaping.

When are houses like books? When they have stories in them.

When is a step like a great burden? When heavy.

What is that which goes from Philadelphia to New York without moving? Answer—The railroad tracks.

The Clever Yankee.

There was a man in Yankeetown,
And wondrous wise was he.
For with an ax and many whacks
He once cut down a tree.

And when the tree was wholly down
He worked with might and main
And straightway took another one
And cut it up again.

Vertibrate Propeller for War Use

(Times Special)

New York, Oct. 12.—Three undred feet above busy Broadway yesterday afternoon, on the roof of No. 42, a group of yachtsmen, marine engineers and others witnessed what they all agreed was a startling demonstration of the latest thing in marine propulsion—the American vert brate propeller, the principle of which has been described before.

It consists of three flat metal blades, each measuring 6 by 11 inches, hinged to the stern, and which operate under the middle of the boat with a fish tail motion, in a trough or sluice formed by twin keels which extend fore and aft to within a short distance of the stem and stern.

In a tank that is 101 feet long, 42 inches wide and holding water 22 inches deep floated a model of a battleship 13 feet long, 16 inches beam and about eight inches draft, equipped with the new propeller. A half-horsepower motor, installed in the boat alongside the engines, was supplied with direct electric current by six little wheels travelling on three overhead copper wires, connected and controlled by a switch at one end of the tank.

At a signal the engineer turned on the power. Instantly the boat gathered headway, traversing the one hundred foot tank in just nine seconds. Then the astonishing thing happened. By the simple turn of the switch she stopped as if a brake were applied, and in a moment, with her engines reversed, she was speeding back to the starting point—something that would have been impossible with an ordinary propeller, engineers say. Those who are behind the new invention believe that an ocean liner equipped with this device located amidships would not only be free from vibration, but the propeller, working always in solid water, would drive her at phenomenal speed, with no danger of "racing."

1-2 Inch of Ice, Robins Whistle

(Times Special).

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Major J. W. Collins of this city, who was spending the night at Markham, brings news of a strange mixture of winter and summer at that town this morning. Last night they had a pretty heavy frost out there, and this morning there was half an inch of ice in some pails. Yet when Major Collins awoke this morning he heard the robins singing away in the trees, just as though it was the middle of summer.

These red-breasted fellows rather give the lie to the old nursery rhyme, which goes;

The north wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow,
And what will the robin do then, poor thing?

He'll sit in the barn
To keep himself warm.
And hide his head under his wing, poor thing.

Mother Goose will have to get out a new edition to read something like this;

He'll sit in the trees,
Enjoying the breeze.
And whistle to keep himself warm, bold thing!

The Observatory reports frost as general throughout Western Ontario last night. Toronto had four degrees, while Parry Sound enjoyed quite a touch of winter, with twelve degrees. Port Stanley had six degrees of it.

In Eastern Ontario the thermometer just hit the freezing point, and no frost was experienced. The weather man promises warmer weather today.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

September Shipments High Record

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—The biggest movement of wheat in the history of the Canadian West in one month has been recorded for September, when 11,883 cars of grain were inspected at Winnipeg. Of this total 6,680 cars were handled by the C.P.R., and 2,805 cars by the Canadian Northern Railway. This movement of wheat alone means that 20,320,800 bushels was forwarded, or in other words, about one-eleventh of the estimated total to be marketed.

Game is Scarce, Wolves Plentiful

(Times Special).

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Major J. D. Moodie, who is in charge of Northwest Mounted Police posts in the Hudson Bay district, in a report to Col. Fred White, comptroller of the N.W.M.P. and governor of the unorganized territories, says that owing to the lack of game and the prevalence of wolves, great destitution exists among the natives. Some have died of starvation and others have been rescued from starvation by the efforts of the police.

Major Moodie says that at Churchill a chapel was built through to the harbor on Jone 15, but owing to continuous easterly and northerly winds the ice for some time never got far enough into the bay to get out of the river current, and traveled in and out with the tide. The ice, however, was loose and in "needles" and a good steamer have no difficulty in working through it. Major Moodie reports that despite the conditions which have prevailed no serious crimes have been committed in the far North since his last report.

Fat is Out of Style

To paraphrase Caesar's remark, the directoire gown came—was seen—and has conquered. So fat ladies are produced, so to speak, to the necessity of either reducing at a very rapid rate or eliminating themselves from public view until the fashion dies out. Otherwise they risk being ridiculous.

Since many fat ladies will not eliminate themselves, however, but per contra, will insist on wearing the curveless gown, no course is open to this well-meaning scribe other than to tell them how they may eliminate the fat.

What is there, then, that reduces fat safely? What pleasant inexpensive article is there on druggists' shelves that can reduce a pound a day without causing wrinkles or stomach ache? What can the pharmacists offer as an improvement over scanty victuals or ten mile walks without breakfast? Is there anything pleasant to take and inexpensive to buy that will reduce one uniformly quickly and innocently thirt pounds a month? Here is the answer; Either write the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., or ask your local druggist for Marmola Prescription Tablets, and for 75 cents they or he will give you one large case of these safe fat reducers, containing so generous a quantity of tablets that sometimes one case only is needed to produce the desired results. Can you match that for a simple solution of your problem?

Field Crops Yield of the Dominion

(Times Special).

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—A bulletin on the estimated yield and quality of field crops in Canada was given out by the Census and Statistics Office yesterday. The returns are based upon actual threshing results, so far as these have been obtained. The average yield of wheat is estimated at 17 1-2 bushels per acre, indicating a total production of 115,631,000 bushels; oats, 33.7 bushels per acre, total production 267,651,000 bushels; barley, 29.0 bushels per acre, total production 50,723,000 bushels; and rye, 18.8 bushels per acre, total production 1,689,000 bushels.

The yield of peas is estimated at 7,178,000 bushels; beans, 1,182,000 bushels buckwheat, 7,365,000 bushels; mixed grains, 19,113,000 bushels, flax seed 1,575,000 bushels, and corn, for husking, 21,007,000 bushels. Potatoes average 145.4 bushels per acre, with total production 73,228,000 bushels, turnips and other roots, 209.7 bushels per acre, total production, 84,075,000 bushels.

Hay and clover are estimated at 1.4 tons per acre, the total yield being 11,642,000 tons, and fodder corn 10.9 tons per acre, total production 2,835,000 tons.

BELOW FORMER ESTIMATE.

The yield of wheat as estimated from the condition of the crops at the end of August is not maintained by the threshing results, the total yield of wheat as now estimated being 3 1-2 bushels per acre less, or a diminution in the total production as then estimated, of 9,000,000 bushels; but the drop is almost entirely due to the returns from the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where climatic influences appear to have had greater effect upon the yield than were indicated by the appearance of the crops at the end of August. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the estimated yield of wheat is 95,818,000 bushels; of oats, 105,451,000 bushels; and of barley, 26,382,000 bushels.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

The Plow Woman

By ELEANOR GATES,
Author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl."

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

jerked the share out of the sod. Each time Dallas patiently circled the team and steered it back into place again, for her arms were not strong enough to swing the plow on the whiffletrees. And each time Simon caught sight of her red flannel petticoat, and faint, half awakened objections stirring beneath his sprouting horns came back to challenge the goading color and butt her crossly in the skirts.

Just before dinner time and halfway of the plowed strip, going east, Dallas suddenly lifted her shoulders to tighten the slack of the reins, let go the horns and brought the mules to a stand, and then as they halted with lowered heads she caught sight of the distant figures between her and the horizon, recognizing them as men, mounted and on foot, with wagons hanging at their rear.

She stepped to the head of the team and shaded her eyes for a moment. As she did so a part of the advancing body detached itself and approached more swiftly, only to retreat again, and the sun, climbing toward the center of the sky, flashed back upon bright objects carried at the front of the group.

"Soldiers for Brannon, I reckon," she said aloud to Simon, who had given over his butting and was thoughtfully sniffing the air. "Still," she added, "they're coming slow for soldiers."

Simon rubbed a red shoulder against her arm confidingly and gave a defiant sideways toss of the head.

"You know, don't you?" Dallas said, scratching the star in his curly forehead. "Well, I would, too, if I had your nose." She glanced at the mules and noted their lack of fright. "They're not Indians anyhow," she went on, "so I guess we'll do some more plowing."

When the sun was so high that Simon's shadow made but a small splotch upon the ground under him, Dallas again stopped to look toward the east. The men and horses had traveled only a short distance and were halted for their noon rest. Close to the wagons the smoke of burning grass twists was curling up from under the midday meal.

"They ain't soldiers," she said decisively. "If they was they'd go on to the ferry. And what can they be, headed this way?" She took off her hat and swung it at her father to attract his attention, then pointed toward the men and teams.

Lancaster was sitting before the shack, his crutches across his knees. Seeing her signal, he got up and hobbled hastily around the corner, from where he blinked into the gap. And, unable to make out anything but a blurred collection of moving things, he called Marylyn from her dinner getting.

"Come an' see w'at y' c'n make out off thar on th' prairie, Mar'lyn!" he cried. "Ef it's antelope, bring out th' Sharps."

Marylyn hurried to him and followed the direction of his gaze. "Why, it's men, pa," she said.

"Certainly, it's men," he agreed pettishly, "but w'at kin' o' men? Thet's w'at Ah kain't see."

Marylyn shook her head. Then, as she beat her look inquiringly toward the far away camp, a horseman suddenly left it and started on a gallop toward them. "One's coming this way fast!" she exclaimed and rushed back into the shack for her bonnet.

Lancaster and his younger daughter commented excitedly as the rider approached. One troop of cavalry had remained at Brannon throughout the summer to give protection to the wives and children of officers and enlisted men. The remaining troops belonging at the fort were away on Indian service. They were to return soon, and the section boss believed he saw in the nearing traveler the herald of the home coming force. Marylyn, however, was just as certain that Indians were about to surround them and hastily brought out the gun, but Dallas wasted no time in conjectures. She touched up Ben and Betty and finished her round of the plowed land. Not till the stranger was close did she stop at the eastern end of the field and wait, leaning on the cross bar.

He came forward in a sharp canter, keeping a regular tap upon the flanks of his mount with the end of a lariat. His careless seat in the saddle and the fact that he wore no spurs told Dallas that he was not a trooper, though across the lessening distance now between them his dress of blue shirt, dark breeches and high boots, crowned by a wide, soft hat, was not unlike a campaign uniform. At his approach Ben and Betty became lazily interested and raised their long ears to the front. Simon advanced a little and took a determined stand beside Dallas, who hung her lines on the plow handles and prepared to greet the horseman.

The instant he reached her he halted abruptly beside the mules and bared his head. "Good morning," he said, with cheery politeness, but his swift glance over team, plow and girl showed a surprise that was almost pity.

She saw his look, and the color swept up under the tan of her face. "How d' y' do?" she answered.

"I'm John Lounsbury from Clark's," he began. "I've been supplying that crowd back there with feed and grub for a couple of weeks." He nodded toward the distant men and horses. "May I ask—I—I didn't know any women folks had settled"—

She faced him squarely for a moment, and he met her eyes. They were gray, with tawny flecks, wide open, clear and comprehending. "My father's Evan Lancaster," she explained.

"Lancaster—oh, he's traded at my store."

"That's him over there with Maryln."

Lounsbury turned in his saddle and looked toward the shack. "Maryln!" he said. "What a pretty name! Sounds like Maryland. How'd she"— He paused questioningly.

A Discovery of Great Value

Because a Cure was Found for Inflammatory Rheumatism.

There are many types of rheumatism, but none worse than inflammatory.

It was this kind that almost killed Mrs. Edward Warman, of Kent Jct., N.B.

Every known remedy she tried, different doctors gave their advice, but the disease increased.

Weak and despairing she was at her wits' end when the remarkable cure of Thos. Cullen was published. This gentleman was cured of rheumatism by "Ferrozone." Consequently Mrs. Warman used the same remedy. Here is her statement;

"For years I have been rheumatic. I tried various forms of relief without success. The disease increased, settled in my joints and muscles; these swelled, caused excruciating pain and kept me from sleeping. My limbs and arms stiffened, my shoulders were lame and prevented me from working. Week by week I was losing strength and despaired of finding a cure. It was a happy day I heard of Ferrozone. Every day I took Ferrozone I felt better; it eased the painful joints, gave me energy and a feeling of new life. Ferrozone cured my rheumatism, cured it so that not an ache has ever returned. Even damp weather no longer affects me."

Ferrozone has power to destroy Uric Acid, neutralize and enrich the blood, and therefore does cure the worst cases. Mrs. Warman's statement proves this.

By removing the cause of the disease and building up a reserve of energy Ferrozone is certain to cure. Sufferer, isn't it about time to stop experimenting? Ferrozone is a cure. We guarantee this. Sold by all dealers. 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50. Remember the name—"Ferrozone."

Winnipeg Terminus

Ottawa, October 13.—The Transcontinental Commission yesterday considered the various tenders submitted for the construction of factories, locomotive sheds, etc., at the Winnipeg terminus. The choice of the Commission will not be known for some time. Construction will be continued during the whole winter. The amount up to the present paid by the Commission in connection with the construction of the road amounts to over $40,000,000.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same Calaveras Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and good development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me, my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to St. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at St. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic. I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

RAWHID-DULZUR

1 CENT A 2 SHARE

Send us your name as a member in this new company, with your remittance for as many thousand shares as you can take at $5 per thousand.

This is a short-time offer on a hurry-up proposition. Our vice president is up at Rawhide now putting the miners at work. We want to raise the necessary funds for development as quickly as possible. Therefore, we offer the first block of stock at $5 a thousand shares. This subscription must be all cash. We want the money in hand. We mean to work without let-up, and we have made it an ironclad rule not to run in debt. Cash counts now.

Our prospectuses are out. Send for one.

Make reservation of stock. If you do no more. But, remember, this present offer of stock at Half a Cent a Share is now open, and will be closed as soon as enough cash subscriptions are in hand. Don't wait, or you will get left.

The gold mining property owned outright by the company consists of 7 claims, 5 in the Rawhide district of Nevada, and 2 in the Dulzura district of Southern California.

The Rawhide district to-day is more famous than Goldfield, Tonopah, Bullfrog, or Searchlight were at the same stage of exploration and development. The Dulzura discovery is one of the most sensational in the history of California.

Ten samples of ore which were among the first assayed, ran as high as $7,461.87 to the ton, and all ten averaged over $1,500 a ton.

In both camps we located early, and our locations are choice. Our own officers will superintend the mining.

First Sea Voyage 2,000 Years Before Solomon

Recent Discovery Made

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Professor James S. Breasted, of the University of Chicago, announced to-day his discovery in Sicily this summer of a portion of a tablet covered with inscriptions, showing that Solomon did not make the first sea voyages. He says that the translation shows that the builder of the first pyramid made a journey with fleets ships across the Mediterranean to Lebanon for cedar. This, he says, was two thousand years before Solomon's time. Professor Breasted has been excavating in the Orient for three years.

Saw Street Car for Firs Time

Winnipeg often entertains prominent financial heads, globe trotters, and others from the crowded centres of the United States and Europe, but not often is there coming to the city such a visitor as James Bagge, of Norway House in the Hudson's Bay district, who had the pleasure of seeing a street car for the first time last week.

He has been constantly stationed in the north for the past 12 years and in his position as mate of a schooner plying between Churchill and York Factory on the Hudson's Bay, Mr. Bagge was able to speak authoritatively on the possibilities of the new Hudson's Bay route.

He said: "Navigation is open on an average from June to November, and large steamers that will pass the Straits could reach Fort Churchill much later in the season, as they could easily break through the early ice that occurs after November first."

He spoke of the excellent harbor there and that the going in of the surveyors on the new Hudson's Bay railway was causing much comment in the north country.

Eastern League Baseball

Montreal, Oct. 7.—It is nip and tuck as to whether the city of Montreal will have Eastern League baseball next year. Two franchises is for sale. An offer has been made by a local syndicate, but up to the present the price is not high enough to suit the gentlemen who are looking after all the fine points, and who desire, to have the baseball game on the creditors.

It is said that the offer by the local syndicate, which would keep the franchise in Montreal, is ten thousand dollars.

The people looking after the business till the actual liquidators come into power, seem to think that they should have at least fifteen thousand dollars.

One of the officers today said; "The company which backed the club will go into liquidation, but you can state positively, that if the creditors will only be a little patient, they will receive one hundred cents on the dollars for every just claim."

DOMINION ELECTIONS

— To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big moneylender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but, what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the brutal millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was falling to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the abject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance, I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Dr. Flick, director of the Tuberculosis Congress to be held in Washington, made the following hopeful statement.

"I assure that in fifteen years or less tuberculosis will be wiped out. All that is needed is a wider knowledge of how to prevent its spread. If we could teach every one the simple methods of preventing contagion we could immediately stop all further progress of the disease, and in a few years it would be gone. Their wide educational value is the reason for holding the national conferences. Thus we intend to reach as many people as we can through the papers, through exhibits and through popular lectures."

Story with a Moral

The other day a man travelling on a shore line train noticed, protruding from an overhead rack, a dress suit case which he recognized as belonging to a friend. He knew that his friend always got off at the station which they had just passed, and as he was not in the seat the conclusion was inevitable that he had jumped off the train and forgotten it.

The man called the conductor and explained the case to him. After some discussion, and a mild protest on the part of the conductor, that it was not a part of his duty, the suit case was put off at the next station, with instructions to send it back on the first tarin the other way.

The man, feeling that he had done an able and friendly act, settled down for the rest of his journey.

But not for long! The face of his friend—who had been in the smoker, and who happened on that particular afternoon to be going on to New London to attend a dinner party—loomed before him.

The moral of this is, of course, quite evident.

Be sure you're right and then mind your own business.

PAIN

Pain is the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—erases blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful, Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Rub on your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Legs Stuck Out

Mrs. Hicks was telling some ladies about the burglar scene in her house the night before.

"Yes," she said, "I heard a noise and got up, and there from under the bed, I saw a man's legs sticking out."

"Mercy!" exclaimed a woman. "The burglar's legs?"

"No, my dear; my husband's legs. He heard the noise, too."

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bonafort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be treated with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influences, with the Government, and in the world offinance and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 100 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 28 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years o Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $1,891,709, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the lakes and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolf street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the increase accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquiremen of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Bellville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing centre, that advantage exists with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appointed the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market. And, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If my favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

Turkey Gets the Aid British Battleships

Powerful British Warships Sail for the Mouth of the Dardanelles — Try to Overawe Excitable People

Valetta, Island of Malta, Oct. 9—A British fleet will leave here this evening for the Aegean sea. Its actual destination is believed to be the Turkish island of Lemnos. The sailing orders are sealed.

The fleet will consist of four battleships, four cruisers, and four torpedo boat destroyers, and it will be under the command of Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenburg.

Lemnos is an island of the Grecian archipelago, about 50 miles west of the entrance to the Dardanelles. It belongs to Turkey. The population mainly is Greek.

AT TURKEY'S REQUEST.

London, Oct. 9.—The foreign office and the Admiralty have confirmed the press tablegram from Malta saying that British warships have been ordered to the Aegean sea.

It is explained that these vessels are sent out simply to watch events, but it is understood from other sources that Turkey intimated she would welcome the appearance of the British fleet as likely to calm the population and put an end to the agitation of the empire.

MILITIA TAKES OATH.

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 9.—The members of the new government took the oath of loyalty to Greece yesterday, as did also the officers of the gendarmerie and the militia.

The consular body protested in principle against the declaration of union, but will confine itself to submitting the matter to the four protesting powers, Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy.

Crete's withdrawal from Turkey's suzerainty is the latest development in the Balkan situation, for though Crete is not in the Balkans herself, being an island, in the Mediterranean, she accepts impulses that have their origin in that turbulent land. It would appear from this distance that in the case of Crete Turkey could afford to take no action, beyond calling the attention of Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy to the extraordinary move on the part of the rebellious little island. Crete is an autonomous province under Turkish authority, but since 1896 the Ministers at Rome of Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy have directed her foreign affairs, and have been responsible for her foreign policy. In the language of the street, it is "up to" them to deal with Crete. Turkey's correct attitude would seem to be one of grieved passivity.

AN ISLE OF MYTHOLOGY.

How Crete came to be a Turkish province is a story that began some hundreds of years ago. It has been Crete's fate to always belong to some powerful neighbor. The island's earlier history is lost in mythology. Probably the Keftu of the Egyptian inscriptions and the Caphtor of the Old Testament are identical with the Crete, or Candia, of to-day and with the kingdom over which Minos, the son of Zeus, reigned. In Homer's time the island was famed for its fertility, and was thoroughly settled by Greeks, who had succeeded the Phoenicians and Egyptians, who were its first historical tenants. Because of its friendship with the Sicilian pirates Crete got into trouble with Rome, and was captured in 68 B. C., after two years' stubborn resistance. When the Roman Empire was dismantled Crete was thrown in as a make-weight for the Byzantines, who held it until 823. Then a swarm of Arabs fresh from conquests in Andalusia settled down on it, and held it for a hundred and forty years.

WHEN TURKEY CAME.

They were driven out, and the island recaptured by the Byzantines. They held on until the Latin Empire of the East was established, when Crete was given to Boniface of Montferrat. Boniface sold out to the Venetians. In 1669 the Turks, after a siege of 21 years, captured the fortress of Candia and proceeded to conquer the land. By 1715 the last vestiges of Venetian occupation had been removed, and Crete settled down to the existence common to Christian communities under the Sultan's rule. A mere statement of the racial divisions of the population tells the whole story. By the Cretan census of 1900 there were 297,000 Greeks out of a population of 301,373, the others being Mussulmans and Jews. The Christian percentage, overwhelming as it is now, was even greater in the earlier years of Turkish conquest. Insurrections were frequent, especially about the middle of the nineteenth century.

A PERIOD OF CONFLICT

In 1866-68 a prolonged and desperate uprising arose from the Sultan promises of reform. These remained unfulfilled until 1878, when, spurred on by the Treaty of Berlin, he gave Crete a charter, and appointed a Christian Governor-General. As he appointed at the same time a Moslem military governor, in whose hands remained the real authority, the Cretans felt that they had been tricked. So once more, in 1889, they rebelled, and once more was the rebellion crushed, but for five years the country was in so sullen a mood that a military occupation was necessary. Then the powers intervened, and the Sultan made more promises, also unfilled. In 1896 another rebellion broke out. This time the Greeks, who had long looked with compassion on the sad lot of their compatriots in Crete, turned in and landed troops on the island.

Inventor Prefers Criminal Life

With inventive genius unsurpassed by a dozen machinists in the world, John Edwards, now in Philadelphia prison, prefers a criminal life and glories in his exploits as a burglar rather than lo his many remarkable and useful inventions. The police records of the country know this man as John Svetak, Kingsley, Stores, Reeves and many other aliases. In trying to escape from the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia, on Aug. 26, he fell from the prison wall, a distance of thirty feet, and broke his leg. He has more than ten years of prison life before him, taking no account of detainers from cities in all parts of the United States.

Edwards is a machinist of really marvellous attainments, and has perfected a device that he claims will remove all the present objections to electric automobiles. He has also perfected and disposed of an attachment which not only increases the speed of the operator, but reduces the cost of operation. He says that a shoe manufacturer near Boston has agreed to buy a device of his with which to make shoes for the government. Edwards says this device will reduce the cost of making a pair of shoes fully 20 per cent.

EARLIEST INVENTION

Some of the claims made by Edwards are extravagant, but all of his devices are improvements upon machines invented by other persons. The fact that his patents covered only betterments he always found it to his advantage to sell his plans to those in control of the basic patents, and thus get his reward in a lump sum, instead of in the form of royalties. His earliest invention was a device for splicing carpet rags. This instrument was not unlike a knife blade, and with its use a child of ten or twelve years could prepare ten pounds of rags for weaving while an experienced sewer would be busy sewing two pounds. He then perfected two or three minor attachments for bicycles, but failed to produce a chainless wheel of real commercial value. He admits that he drew the plans for his chainless wheel while serving a term in a western penitentiary. He developed a clutch or hook which is now used as an attachment to steam shovels, and he also perfected a sewing machine attachment which is in general use.

ALWAYS BEING HUNTED

Any one of these inventions would have made Edwards a rich man had he been able to sell them as patented devices are usually sold, but as he was always being hunted and 'pounded' by the police he was always compelled to sacrifice his inventions and to divide the proceeds with innumerable agents who negotiated their sale.

Edwards says he has draughted the plans for a device that will turn railway switches from the cab of the engine regardless of the speed of the locomotive. The records of the patent office show several such devices, but Edwards claims that his plans have not yet been submitted. He asserts positively that working models have been made and used, and that he will live to see the railroads utilize his device.

BEAUTY'S BACKGROUND.

Lady Auckland Has a New Notion About House Furnishings.

Lady Auckland, who has opened an antique furniture shop in London, has a theory that a woman's beauty depends no more on her skin, hair, bearing or even dress than it does on her background, her surroundings. She must have her house furnished to match her complexion.

"The paintings of the old masters are the best guide to artistic furnishing," says Lady Auckland. "They never made the mistake of picturing a woman with a background that didn't suit her coloring. Most modern portrait painters are wise enough to consider the sitter's type when devising the background. In a portrait of a woman I know all the settings are of soft brown velvets and tawny furs, just lighted by the gleam of the gold chair she sits in and of a tall copper vase at her side. It brought out and yet harmonized with her eyes and hair. Yet that woman has the ill taste to have her drawing rooms furnished in blue. They don't exactly quarrel with her coloring, but they make her just commonplace. In the picture she is distinguished simply because of those tawny browns about her.

"The woman who has Titian red hair must have a Titianesque background of soft ruby and gold velvets. The pastel girl, with her pale golden hair and light blue eyes, would be extinguished in a room of warm colors. Settings of pastel blues, pinks or greens, on the contrary, bring her out and make her lovely and alluring. It is perfectly marvelous that women don't consider their coloring more in furnishing their homes. That's why they need beauty specialists to do it for them."

"But what are people to do," asked a listener, "when there are daughters who differ in their complexions? Shall papa furnish the drawing rooms to suit the pastel daughter or the Titian daughter? Shall he buy draperies to 'go with' the blond or the brunette?"

"That would be a problem," replied the beauty specialist.

DESIGN FOR DOOR PANEL.

Made of Lace Braid on Net in Marie Antoinette Effect.

Door panels or curtains of lace add much to the attractive appearance of entrance doors, and, though the initial cost of the lace panels may be somewhat more than silk curtains of similar size, the purchase is justified by the fact that the lace will long outwear the cheaper material and, with ordinary care, will look well to the end of its existence.

This large oblong panel is easily made by a woman fond of fancy work

AN OBLONG PANEL.

It measures twenty-six inches in length and is just half a yard wide, but both length and width can be considerably increased by letting the net extend from six to eight or even ten inches around beyond the outside row of braid. The little lace roses and sprays of flowers and leaves may be made by the hand before being basted on the pattern, right side down. After all the braid is carefully basted in place the net is basted smoothly over the pattern and sewed down to the braid, as in the well known Marie Antoinette work.—Delineator.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

A bilious attack may soon be overcome by taking the juice of one or two lemons in a goblet before retiring and in the morning before rising.

Some people wash their hair with soap after an egg shampoo, but plain egg is very cleansing and leaves the hair much softer than if soap is used with it.

The white of an egg when beaten with milk and drunk night and morning is of service in mild cases of dicks. When beaten with sugar and a very little water, it will make the voice stronger and clearer.

To all suffering from ringworm, the part with vinegar that onions have been pickled in. It has never failed to cure the worst cases, but must be bathed with it several times a day. The flavor of the onion kills the germs.

The particular woman never uses sachet of one odor, a soap of another, powder of a third, and so on, but either buys her soaps and powders all scented or else has them of the same scent as her sachets and perfumes. There must be no conflicting of odors.

Enlarged pores very often need special treatment, as well as external, as they are principally caused by indigestion and constipation. Sip a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and drink plenty of cold water between meals, a little at a time. For external treatment apply this lotion with a piece of old linen or a bit of absorbent cotton: One dram of borax, four ounces of distilled witch hazel

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

THE ACT OF DYING.

Reasons For Believing That It Is an Easy Matter.

The mere ultimate process of dying may be a relatively easy matter. Any person who has been long ill probably suffers more on any given day of his life than he will suffer in the act of departing from his body. It is probable that a broken bone, a delirious fever, a disordered vital organ, may cause more anguish than the final struggle. I have my doubts whether the last pang is as bad as it seems, declares Elizabeth Stuart Phelps in Harper's Bazar. We are told by surgeons that chloroformed patients may give apparent evidence of acute agonies which they do not feel. Death itself is often an anaesthetic so merciful that people call "living trouble" is obviously a worse matter.

I, for instance, who have never fainted and never been anaesthetized in my life, have twice become from serious causes unconscious for a short time, and I have often wished that I could make over to some recoiling soul whose name has been heard ringing upon the last roll call the unspeakable comfort which that brief experience has given me. There was no pang, no terror, no time, no chance, for either. One seemed to glide gently and swiftly down a warm abyss, flower scented, grass grown, safe and beneficent, into unutterable content. One melted into peace. One drifted into ecstasy beside which the deepest joys of consciousness are poor, pale things.

If one in truth should evade the body in such a moment, death would stand chosen as the supreme delight of living.

HIS THREE WIVES.

They Were All in One Picture, but Did Not Stay There.

Allan Cunningham in his "Lives of British Painters" tells a story of Copley, the father of Lord Chancellor Lyndhurst, which reveals what a portrait painter endures from the vanity and eccentricity of his sitters.

A certain man had himself, his wife and seven children painted by Copley in a family piece.

"It wants but one thing," said the man on seeing the finished picture, "and that is the portrait of my first wife. This one is my second."

"But," replied the artist, "she is dead. What can I do? She must come in as an angel."

"Oh, no; no angels for me. She must come in as a woman."

The portrait was added, but several months elapsed before the man again called at Copley's studio, and when he did a strange lady held on to his arm.

"I must have another sketch from your hand, Copley," said he. "An accident befell my second wife. This lady is my third, and she has come to have her likeness included in the family picture."

The painter introduced the likeness of wife No. 3, and the man expressed himself satisfied with the portraits of his three spouses. But the lady remonstrated. Never was such a thing heard of. Her predecessors must go. The artist painted them out. Then the man disputed the price. Copley sued him, and his son, the future Lord Lyndhurst, signalized his call to the bar by gaining his father's cause.

A Bad Dream.

It is not likely that any English speaking people understand so keen and punctilious a devotion to the niceties of language as that which characterizes the French grammarians. We may help ourselves to understand it perhaps by reading a story told of M. Lamany.

One night he awoke and sprang out of bed with a wild cry. His wife came running. He was in alarm and despair.

"Why, what is the matter?" she gasped.

"I dreamed," said the professor. "Oh, I had a horrible, a heartrending dream!"

"What was it?"

"I dreamed I was talking, and I distinctly heard myself utter a sentence which had a grammatical error in it!"

Couldn't Miss the Chance.

One scarcely looks for humor in an undertaker, but that this, like most rules, has its exceptions was proved recently in Scotland. A tract distributer had affixed this text to a tree on the highroad, "It is appointed to man once to die." This was too good an opportunity to be missed by the local purveyor of coffins, who promptly added the following announcement: "Funerals economically furnished by Blank."

Honor.

"What they call 'honor' is a mighty curious thing," observed Uncle Jerry Peebles. "I know a man who would cheerfully starve himself to pay a gamblin' debt, and he still owes the preacher that married him twenty-seven years ago."

Art in the Soup.

The artist's wife leaned over and looked at her husband's soup after she had handed it to him.

"Oh," she cried, "look at the scroll the fat has made in your soup. Isn't it artistic? Don't eat it. It is so beautiful."

Forced Economy.

"Poor Tom, it cost him a terrible lot to give up his sweetheart."

"Then why did he?"

"Because it would have cost him a great deal more if he hadn't."—London Tatler.

You have only got to owe a man money to appreciate what a small place the world is.—Lloyd's Weekly.

SEEING AND LISTENING.

Nearsighted Man Wears Glasses In Talking, but Not In Reading.

"Here's a sort of queer thing," said a nearsighted man. "I am very nearsighted. Strong glasses are indispensable to me for ordinary, general seeing in my goings about, but when I sit down to read I take off my glasses and bring the print up to within the natural focus of the eye. It seems to me that reading with the natural eye I read with a more intimate and a clearer understanding.

"So much for my reading without spectacles, and now here is the thing that is queer to me. If when I am reading thus, with my glasses off, somebody comes along to speak to me, why, then, to get a clear understanding of that question I must have on my spectacles.

"So I say, or I would say if this happened at home where I know the people, 'Wait a minute till I get on my spectacles,' and I would put them on and then say, 'Now go ahead,' and really, with my spectacles on, with my power of seeing at its best, with the sharpest definition of things in general to the eye, I get the clearest apprehension of things said to me.

"So in reading I do best with my glasses off, but in understanding things said to me, in listening, I do best with my glasses on. There is one modification to this—where there is no light, as in a dark room, where I can't see, I can understand equally well with or without glasses."

QUEER TITLES.

Bestowed on His Favorites by an Emperor of Haiti.

Among the whimsical titles which appear on the pages of national history few are more apparently frivolous than the Duke of Marmalade, the Count of Lemonade and the Earl of Brandy. They are or were, however, real titles bestowed by a genuine monarch on three of his favorites, and that, too, during the last century.

In 1811 a revolution occurred in Haiti, and Christophe, a negro, declared himself emperor. Through conspiracy and plot, his life often attempted, he retained power till 1820, preserving to the last the pageantry of a royal court and creating a numerous nobility. Among them were the three already mentioned, and the oddity of the titles has suggested to many writers the frivolousness of the African character.

In fact, however, all three names were those of places, the first two being originally plantations, but latterly towns of some importance. This not being generally known, a misapprehension has arisen with regard to the titles themselves, which, however absurd, were scarcely more so than some which were bestowed in France and Germany during the middle ages.—Pearson's Weekly.

Liberty.

The spirit of liberty is indeed a bold and fearless spirit, but it is also a sharp sighted spirit. It is a cautious, sagacious, discriminating, farseeing intelligence. It is jealous of encroachment, jealous of power, jealous of man. It demands checks, it seeks for guards, it insists on securities, it intrenches itself behind strong defenses and fortifies itself with all possible care against the assaults of ambition and passion. It does not trust the amiable weaknesses of human nature, and therefore it will not permit power to overstep its prescribed limits, though benevolence, good intent and patriotic purpose come along with it. Neither does it satisfy itself with flashy and temporary resistance to illegal authority. Far otherwise. It seeks for duration and permanence. It looks before and after, and, building on the experience of ages which are past, it labors diligently for the benefit of ages to come.—Daniel Webster.

The Blue Sky.

The blue sky which reveals itself as the hemispherical vault of the firmament in the absence of clouds is the far depths of the air sending back to the observer some part of the solar illumination which they receive. The light thus returned to the eye is "blue" simply because the particles of the air are of such exceedingly diminutive size that they can effectively deal with only the smallest of the luminous vibrations—that is, with the "blue" undulations. There are a few faint interminglings of the other colored rays in the blue of the sky, but they are in such trifling quantity that the blue swallows them up.

The Cricket's Chirp.

The variation of speed in the chirping of crickets depends so closely on temperature that the height of the thermometer may be calculated by observing the number of chirps in a minute. At 60 degrees F. the rate is eighty chirps a minute, at 70 degrees F. 120 per minute, and the rate increases four chirps to the minute with a change of one degree. Below a temperature of 50 degrees F. the cricket is not likely to make any sound.

PUBLIC PUNISHMENT.

The Days of the Whipping Post, Stocks and Branding Irons.

Up until the end of the war and a little while after the whipping post and stocks stood not far from the northwest corner of the courthouse and between that building and the present postoffice, and there the last whipping took place, though as it began it was sought to be stopped by a federal officer. The sheriff was, however, simply carrying out the mandate of the old court of pleas and quarter sessions.

In those days the stocks and the whipping post, too, were special attractions, notably to boys. The latter were allowed to ridicule people who sat in the stocks, which held their hands and feet, but not to throw anything at them.

Of course this deprived the boys of some degree of pleasure, yet they contrived to get a good deal of fun out of the thing anyway. It seems odd now even to think of such scenes as these must have been. Figure to yourself passing by the courthouse green at Charlotte or Raleigh and seeing a gentleman held by the ankles and wrists by wooden bars lying there in the sunshine for all the world to look at.

Those were the days of the branding iron too. A set of gyves of iron, in use for holding the ankles or wrists, are on exhibition here, but of branding irons there are none. These were used here in January, 1865, for the last time.—Raleigh Cor. Charlotte Observer.

VANITY OF CONVICTS.

The Way Some Men Spruce Up In the Penitentiary.

"The vainest lot of men I ever did know are behind these walls," remarked a convict in the penitentiary. "For fastidious dressing and cleanliness I have never seen anything like it. Those who have been accustomed to sleeking up on the outside grow much worse in here, and those who never even combed their hair on the outside have it as cleanly parted as they can. I know of a hundred instances where convicts have risked being paddled or having time taken away just for the sake of shaving. They get hold of a razor or improvise one and keep it in their cells. They all have mirrors in their cells along with the calendars.

"I know of one instance of a trusted prisoner who begged for weeks to be allowed to wear a hat instead of the prison cap because he thought he did not look well in it. Whenever they get an opportunity they press their trousers. They save collars for Sundays and appear very clean and neat and nice in chapel. I guess it is all because they have time to think about themselves more than ever. If a man has nothing but himself to think about he takes more pride in himself. Or maybe they want something with which to pass away the time in their cells."—Columbus Dispatch.

Blankets of Bark.

In Ecuador, one of the South American republics, the bark of a tree which grows on the slopes of the Andes is utilized for the making of blankets. The blanket is over six feet long and over five feet wide and is as soft and pliable as though it were made of flannel. It is about the thickness of a good flannel blanket and can be rolled up and put in a strap without hurting or injuring it. This tree or bark blanket is merely a strip of bark cut from a section of the trunk of the blanket or demajagua tree. The Indians make a cutting around the trunk to get it, and they prepare it by soaking it in water until it is soft. It is then pounded so that the rough outside can be stripped off and the inside alone left. The inside is of fine fibers so joined together by nature that it makes a beautiful blanket, warm enough to be used as a cover and soft enough for a mattress.

A Clock Case Made of Pennies.

A novelty in clockmaking consists of a timepiece whose case is made of English pennies. The coins, of which there are ninety-six, all bear the date 1797 and were beaten out to almost double their original size and then riveted together, while the figures were made of small strips of copper cemented on to the face. The clock stands fourteen inches high and is eight inches broad at the base. That "time is money" is an adage with which we all more or less agree, but this is a case in which the saying might be reversed and still remain true. The clock is owned by a resident of Laurel Bank, Ilkley, Yorkshire, England.

The Family Dog.

An Edinburgh clergyman says: "Every family should have a dog. It is like a perpetual baby. It betrays no secrets, never sulks, asks no troublesome questions, never gets into debt, never comes down late to breakfast and is always ready for a bit of fun."

To Save Time.

The Parson—I intend to pray that you may forgive Casey for throwing that brick at you. The Patient—Mebbe yer riv'rence 'ud be saving toime if ye'd just wait till Oi get well and then pray for Casey.—London Fun.

Hard Luck.

Wife—What luck? Husband—None whatever. Wife—Were there no servants at the intelligence office? Husband—Yes, lots of them, but they had all worked for us before.—Saturday Sunset.

What Willie Saw.

When Willie saw a peacock for the first time he said to his mother:

"Oh, mamma, you should have seen it! Electric lights all over the ferns and a turkey underneath!"—Delineator.

WHIMS IN WILLS.

Curious Desires Have Actuated Many Testators.

The dryness of the law is sometimes alleviated by the freaks and whims that appear in wills.

Some persons have used their wills as means of paying off old scores. In 1770 Stephan Swain of the parish of St. Olaves, London, left "John Abbott and Mary, his wife, 6 shillings each for a halter for fear the sheriff should not be provided." In 1793 Philip Thicknees willed that his right hand be cut off and sent to his son "in hopes that such a sight may remind him of his duty to God after having so long neglected the duty he owed to a father who once affectionately loved him."

Lieutenant Colonel Nash got even with his wife by leaving the bell ringers of Bath abbey £70 a year on condition that they muffle the bells of said abbey on the anniversary of his marriage and ring them with "doleful accentuation from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m." and on the anniversary of his death to ring a merry peal for the same space "in memory of his happy release from domestic tyranny and wretchedness."

Jasper Mayne, who died in 1620, must have been a person of humor. He left his servant an old valise, stating that it contained something that would enable him to drink. When the valise was opened it was found to contain only a red herring.

Occasionally a testator exhibits an original idea as to the disposition of his body. Sieur Benoit, whose will was probated in Paris in 1877, ordered that he be buried in his old trunk to save the expense of a coffin. He added that he was attached to the trunk, it having gone around the world with him three times.

FAKE PAINTINGS.

The tricks of the picture dealer? They are not to be counted. Here is one that was played quite recently. A dealer ordered from an artist a tavern scene in the old Dutch style signed in the corner with a facsimile of Jan Steen's signature. When the smoky look of age had been given it the dealer eyed it with approval.

"Splendid!" he said to the needy artist. "It's a pity you shouldn't have the credit of it. Pray sign it with your own name. It may make your reputation."

The poor artist, delighted, painted over the signature of Jan Steen and set his own name there. Three weeks later the picture started for New York, consigned to a Fifth avenue merchant of paintings. But by the same boat went an anonymous letter to the custom house officials warning them that an attempt was being made to smuggle in a chef d'oeuvre of the Dutch school worth $40,000. The picture was seized. Experts were called in. They scraped off the signature of the artist and found underneath that of Jan Steen. The importer had to pay a fine of 50 per cent—that is, $20,000—and in addition $8,000 duty. Three days later, however, he sold his Jan Steen (guaranteed by the United States government) for the round sum of $50,000. Thus he made a fair profit, for the original cost of the picture was $14—70 francs paid to the poor devil of an artist.

The Sneeze Inopportune.

"Of all the embarrassing predicaments, the one that I was in was the worst ever," said a prosperous downtown business man, addressing his partner in their office on the fifteenth floor of one of the Broadway skyscrapers.

"I got in the elevator a few moments ago," he continued, "and the draft as we shot roofward caused me to sneeze. I felt it coming, and as I opened my mouth for a hearty 'achu' out popped my $150 set of false teeth. Say, when that car full of silly stenographers began to snicker I could have gone through a keyhole without touching sides, top or bottom!"

Forces a Discharge.

"The Japanese servant has many curious traits," said the man who keeps one, "besides his constant habit of eating raw fish, but he is inordinately polite, as a rule. For instance, he never will give you notice that he wishes to leave you. Instead his work will grow steadily worse and worse till you can't stand it any longer, and so you fire him. It's always done purposely to avoid the necessity of telling you outright that he is tired of you and wants to quit."

Social Analogy.

Mrs. Subbubs—That Mrs. Newcome just moved into the Dudley's old house on Saturday, so I called today. Mr. Subbubs—Well, well, how like poker this social game is! Mrs. Subbubs—How do you mean? Mr. Subbubs—Why, in poker you also "call" when you want to see what the other person's got.

The Missing Feature.

"That meadow scene looks far from natural," declared the stage manager.

"What can ail it?"

"Begosh, I believe it's the absence of advertising signs!"

Sneaky.

Magistrate—Sneaky sort of man? What do you mean, sir? Witness—Well, sorr, he's the sort of man that'll never look ye straight in the face until your back's turned."

There's no phosphorescence in flowers to speak of, but they may lighten up many a darkened spot in life.—Manchester Union.

The Board of Health will meet in the city clerk's office this morning at 9.30 o'clock. A couple of important matters will be taken up.

Miss Boreland's Funeral

The funeral of the late Miss Boreland who died last week, and for whom the friends were unable to secure a burial certificate, was held on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, and interment took place in Little Lake cemetery.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the sneeze stage, to head off all colds. Box of 48—25c. For sale by all dealers.

Funeral Wednesday

The funeral of the late Mrs. John McWilliams will be held from her late residence on Roger street on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

Athletic Club's Meet

Judging by the entries that have been received and the interest that is being taken in the event, the success of the athletic meet under the auspices of the Otonabee Athletic Club, in the Brock street rink on Wednesday night is assured. Local athletes are enthusiastic over the prospects and have been working hard to get into shape, with the result that there should be a grand night's sport.

Entered Contest

Entered in the Earl Grey Dramatic Competition, the conditions governing which have already been published, will be the Peterborough Amateur Operatic Company, under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Dewey. Just at present it has not been decided what opera they will present, but it will be one that will be given this winter in Peterborough. The taking part in the competition depends largely on the support of the public of Peterborough.

Y.M.C.A. Conference to be Held Here

The third annual autumn conference for older boys of the Y.M.C.A.'s of Ontario, will be held here on Nov. 7th, 8th, and 9th, at the local Y.M.C.A. This conference was held at Brantford last year, and at Hamilton the year before, and has been a great success. It is expected that there will be over 100 delegates from the different Y.M.C.A.'s in the province, and it will give the members of the local association, some idea of the work that is going on in the other institutions. This conference will be something new for the local Y.M.C.A. and the Peterborough public, and no doubt it will be the means of giving the work among the boys a big lift, and will no doubt be a great benefit to them.

Obituary

JOHN IBBISTER.

Lakefield lost on Friday one of its most respected and most influential residents in the person of Mr. John Ibbister. For forty years or more Mr. Ibbister had lived in Lakefield, where he was known to everybody. He was one of the "village blacksmiths" of Lakefield until some months ago, when he became ill. He was born in the Orkney Islands, to the north of Scotland, and came to Canada while a young man. He had resided in the Lakefield district ever since. Mr. Ibbister is survived by his wife, six sons and a daughter. The sons are David and John of Vancouver, William of Davidson, Sask., and James, Thomas and Anderson of Lakefield, and the daughter, Mrs. Fred McKae, of Selwyn. His brother James, of Woodstock, was in Lakefield Sunday for the funeral, which was held in the afternoon to Lakefield cemetery. It was in charge of the Foresters of Lakefield and is said to have been the largest ever held in the village. It was under the auspices of the Canadian Order of Foresters, Court Lakefield, in which Mr. Ibbister was one of the charter members.

FERRY BOAT AND STEAMER COLLIDE IN A DENSE FOG

(Special to The Times)

Windsor, Oct. 13.—Ploughing her way through a dense fog the ferry Berlai, running between Walkerville and Detroit, was struck by the teamer Energy, which was upbound, in mid-stream. The bow of the reighter ran into the port side of the ferry, stoving in the ladies' abin, which was well filled with women and girls on their way to work. It was a violent collision, and the passengers were thrown into a mass. Some of the women fainted, and there was a wild scramble to each safety. Broken glass was sent flying in all directions. One girl, Vera Fortin, of Walkerville, was seriously cut about the face by broken glass.

The deck hands soon got the ferry in shape, and it proceeded on its way to Detroit. Miss Fortin was taken back to Walkerville for surgical treatment.

The steamer Energy was considerably damaged, and will have to go in the dry dock for some time. The cause of the accident is said to be due to a misund rstanding of signals and an investigation will be held to ascertain where the fault lies.

Chicago Wins Third Game of Series from Detroit for the World's Championship

Ball Grounds, Detroit, Oct. 13.—The fourth game of the world's series between Cubs and Tigers was played today at Bennett Park, with interest renewed as a result of Detroit's victory in Chicago yesterday. The Tigers realized that today's game was the pivot of the series, and went on the field determined to make an even break with the dreaded Cubs. They were out early in the bright sunshine of the noon hour brightening up their batting eyes and otherwise preparing for the struggle to come. If the Tigers win either today's or tomorrow's games, which are to be played in Detroit, the teams will have to go back to Chicago for another game on Thursday; and should the game be tied on the series, another game will be played on grounds to be selected by the National Commission.

The crowd today were late in arriving. All reserved seats were sold out early. The bleachers were soon packed, and the circus seats in center and left field were fairly well occupied when the game started.

Mullin and Cobb were given a great ovation today from the crowd, who were in rare good humor, and eager for another win from the Cubs Umpire Connolly officiated at the plate and Klem on the bases. Brown and Kling were the battery for Chicago and Summers and Schmidt for Detroit.

Score by innings—

Chicago ... ... 002000001—3 Detroit ... ...000000000—0

Batteries:—

Chicago—Brown and Kling. Detroit—Summers and Schmidt.

Umpires—Klem and Connolly.

Arc Lamp at Dr. Gray's Residence will be Moved

A short session of the Fire, Water & Light Committee was held last night when Ald. Johnston was in the chair. The other members present were. Alderman McIntyre, Butler and Mayor Rush. Only two or three urgent matters were disposed of and the others, such as wiring inspection, etc., will be taken up later.

The first thing taken up was the removal of the arc lamp from in front of Dr. Grey's residence. It will be remembered that Dr. Grey created quite a sensation at the Committee of the Whole Council the other night when he protested strongly against the light being interfered with. The doctor will be given a 32 candle power incandescent lamp in front of his place, which it is thought will be satisfactory.

Moved by Ald. McIntyre and Mayor Rush that the arc lamp in front of Dr. Gray's, be moved to the corner of Aylmer street, and that it be put out on an arm, and that the chairman be authorized to place two or more incandescent lamps on Sherbrooke between Aylmer and George streets.—Carried.

Moved by Mayor Rush and Ald. McIntyre that two additional incandescent lamps be placed on Weller street.—Carried.

HEATING CONTRACT.

Tenders were received and opened for the installation of additional heating to be placed in the new fire hall.

McGregor & Reid	$ 90
Barcaneau	107
Adam Hall	110
Adamson & Dobbin...	96

It is necessary to get the heating into the firemen's sleeping apartments as soon as possible, and it was moved by Ald. Butler and Mayor Rush that McGregor & Reid be given the contract as their tender was the lowest.

Championship Wrestling Tournament

It is possible that Peterborough will be honored by having the C.A.A.U. amateur wrestling championship tournament held here this spring. If so it will be conducted under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. W. Collings, the energetic physical director of the local institution, is doing all in his power to have it brought here, and should receive the unqualified encouragement and support of the Board of Directors. The Board meets to-night and, at the meeting the matter will come up for consideration.

From an athletic standpoint the tourney is a most important one and would beyond a doubt, prove quite profitable in a financial way. Besides it would be a great deal for the enterprise of the physical department of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A.

A Thanksgiving Supper Nov. 9th

A special meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's church was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. Moore, Aylmer street, when it was decided to hold the annual thanksgiving dinner in the school house adjoining the church on Thanksgiving night, Nov. 9th. This is an event that is looked forward to with much pleasure by many and no doubt it will be a great a success as usual.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and on to the Kidneys. OVERPOWERED A GIRL, GOT $1,000 WORTH OF JEWELS

(Special to The Times)

New York, Oct. 13.—Representing himself as a real estate agent, well dressed young man gained admission to the home of Sunderfield McLean, a wealthy Brooklyn publisher, and while Miss B. Maden, a younger sister of Mrs. McLean, was showing him around the house, overpowered her. He bound her arms and legs with wire and placed gag in her mouth and then ransacked the house. He got away with about a thousand dollars worth of jewellery and valuables.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PROTESTANT HOME HELD YESTERDAY

Reports of Secretary and Treasurer were Read —Year Has Been a Successful One--Lack of Public Support is Regretted

The annual meeting of the Protestant Home was held at the home yesterday afternoon about 3.30 o'clock, when a good many of those interested were present. Rev. J. H. Keith of Knox church, conduct d the opening devotional exercises.

The Protestant Home occupies a place in this city which is not realized by the average citizen. It is maintained by the income from the endowment fund and by the government grant as well a small sum from the city for board of inmates, and from the inmates themselves. The directors of the home regret very much the lack of public support and also the delay on the part of the City Council in providing a House of Refuge or some such place for the care of indigent old men. This has prevented the Protestant Home enlarging their work, and devoting all their time to the care of old ladies.

The year has been an uneventful one. Everything has run smoothly and there has been no extra drain upon the institution.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Mrs R. F. McWilliams, the secretary, read the following report which was adopted;—

At the time of presenting the annual report of last year, it was hoped that when the time of an other report should come around the Board of Management would be able to announce that this home had been relieved by the civic authorities of the care of indigent old men and would be prepared to undergo the care of the aged Protestant women of this city. This hope has not been realized. The council of last year requested your board not to admit any more men to the home. For a year that request was carefully followed. But as it now appears that the city is no nearer the possession of a House of Refuge for old men, and as a part of the home is now usually devoted to male inmates as long as there remain any in the home, your board has decided to fill these rooms again as proper demand for them arises. There are now four men in the house and thirteen women, this low number almost filling the available accommodation for women.

In the main the year has been an uneventful one. Trials have been the usual change in our register of inmates. Three have died, one your board was regretfully compelled to send to Mimico, and three have found other homes. We have during the course of the year admitted seven new inmates.

In the work of making the home life of the inmates happy the board has received much valuable aid for which sincere thanks are due. But your board cannot but regret that in the matter of the maintenance and possible extension of the work, practically no public support or interest has been forthcoming.

Thanks are especially due to the

TWO BROTHERS MURDERED, HEADS WERE BATTERED IN

(Special to The Times.)

Oswego, N.Y., Oct. 13. — When Charles Wood, surprised at receiving no response to his knock at the home of his neighbor, John and Peter Bohli, at Engalls Crossing, this county, he broke in the door this morning, and entered. Upon investigation disclosed the fact that the brothers were both dead upon the kitchen floor. Both had several bullet wounds in their bodies and their heads had been battered in with an axe. Burglary was evidently the motive and tramps are suspected

Leslie Miller Burned to Death in a Disastrous Fire in Steddlar, Alta

(Times Special).

Steddler, Alta., Oct. 13.—A disastrous fire broke out here early this morning. It originated in a bowling alley adjoining the Grand Union Hotel. Twenty stores and buildings, including the Grand Union Hotel, the National Hotel, Merchants' Bank and post office, and a lumber yard were wiped out.

Leslie Miller of Grand Rapids, Ont., a clerk in Riggs & White's store, who was sleeping on the premises was burned to death.

The loss caused by the fire is very heavy, but is mostly covered by insurance.

Brussard was Preston Man

(Times Special).

Preston, Oct. 13.—Chief Levan today wired the Chicago police that Cornelius Brunsard, who was found floating in the Chicago drainage canal after being murdered, was an employe of the Canadian Office and School Furnishing Company until last May. He has a sister living in Patterson, N.J.

Ralls was Committed for Trial

(Special to The Times).

Cobourg, Oct. 13.—Ralls, who is accused of stealing the Conservative campaign literature from the mails, was up for trial today. Several witnesses were called, who stated that they had not been offered the letters.

Ralls took the stand on his own behalf and said that he did not make behalf and said that he did not make use of the letters with any intention of crime. He says that most of the letters were offered to the parties, but were refused and were thrown into the waste paper basket. His counsel, Mr. S. C. Hewick, K. C., asked for a dismissal of the case, but the magistrate refused. He considered that there was sufficient evidence to commit him for trial at the December Sessions. Bail was granted.

Suffragists Storm House of Commons by the Thousands

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 13.—The climax of the suffragists's campaign was reached tonight, when an enormous mob of women, stormed the parliament, and blocked all traffic leading to Westminster. For more than three hours the crowd scuffled good naturedly with the police, interfered with the theater goers, broke windows and disorganized things generally in the center of London.

Mrs Travers Symons, formerly secretary to James Kier Hardie, socialist and independent member of parliament, who rammed the door of the House of Commons by strategy, while the house was solemnly debating a bill to prevent children smoking cigarettes, dashed past the doorkeeper and took up a position immediately in front of the speaker's chair and shouted shrilly, "Leave off discussing children and talk for a while of women."

Three officials seized Mrs. Symons and carried her out bodily. She was then taken to the outdoor and dismissed. As a result of the coup an order has been issued that in future women must not be admitted to the building under any pretense whatever. In future the historic grill will not screen women spectators.

The appeal issued by the suffragists a few days ago for 50,000 people to help storm the parliament buildings at 7.30 o'clock tonight, was the most successful yet, as last has then twice that number responded to the call. Nine-tenths of these were young people who gathered to see the fun. There were also many sympathisers and unemployed.

Parliament is in a state of seige. A triple line of police are on all sides of the square in front of the building, while the yard between the gates is swarmed with police. Two hundred more guard the terrace in the rear against an assault by water which was twice attempted. All the mounted police of London and the suburbs have been mobilized here and stacks of hay have been unstacked in the streets for the horses. The entire police force of London, has been kept busy restraining the masses about Trafalgar Square. The police kept the streets adjoining the House of Commons clear and elsewhere to the best of their ability kept the people moving. The crowds sheered, sang songs and booted, giving voice to all the sarcastic remarks that a London mob is so capable of doing.

A delegation of thirteen suffragists which approached the police cordon and were refused admission to parliament, attempted to make a football rush, but were repulsed with the least possible roughness. The police were pelted with sprinkles and stones in minor skirmishes, but no one was seriously injured.

Twenty-four suffragists and twelve unemployed were arrested. Many women fainted, and some were trampled on in the crowd.

Mrs. Pankhurst, Miss C. Pankhurst and Mrs. Lawrence were summoned to court yesterday for inciting a breach of the peace. This morning they coolly refused to obey the summons, but agreed to appear at the police court this evening, which they did and spent the night in the Bow street station. The suffragists and unemployed have kept practically the whole police force on duty continuously for the past 48 hours.

CONTERFEITERS CONFESSED UTTERING BOGUS MONEY

(Special to The Times.)

Oakville, Oct. 13.—Thos. N. Cronier of Toronto, charged with uttering counterfeit bills, has confessed. Further evidence bearing on his case and also that of his son Milton Cronier, who is also charged with the same offence, has been found, and both were remanded for a week. They will appear in the police court in Milton at three o'clock on Monday. They were photographed before appearing in the court today.

In his confession the elder man told Inspector Parkinson of the Dominion Secret Service, and Chief of Police McCreary of Oakville, that he passed bills in Oakville, Toronto and Buffalo. He still claims that he did not pass the two Farmers' Bank $10 bills at the Toronto Exhibition. He also made other disclosures which the police refused to disclose. He made his confession after being arraigned in the court, and had been on the brink of doing so for some days.

Last week a further search of the house at No. 9 Gerrard street, Toronto, was made and a note book was found containing four entries which the police say are the number of bills made.

Small Damages Allowed for Death of Young Child

(Times Special)

Toronto, Oct. 13.—In charging the jury at the assizes here today in an action for damage against the Toronto Street Railway, Chief Justice Falconbridge said that children in their early years are not an assistance, but a burden to their parents, so that computing on a hard cash basis, the damages must be small. "I have heard of no case in which damages were recovered for so young a child, so return no extravagant sum, for it will not aid the plaintiff. Once I gave judgment for $400 to the father of a 7-year-old boy in the village of Markham, and that award was criticised by a judge of the higher court, who held that he would not have allowed so much."

This was a case where the father of Thos. McEwen, 4 years old, was suing the Toronto Street Railway for $5000 damages for killing his child on April 9th last.

The jury brought in a verdict allowing the parent $300, stating that the motorman was negligent in not keeping a lookout. A child of so tender years could not be negligent. The jury also reported the fender all right.

Girls' Guild Made Presentation

The Girls' Guild of St. John's church held a most successful meeting Monday evening at which a large number were present. A committee was appointed to elect officers for the coming year. The committee is composed of Misses Caniff, Horsefield, and Hinchcliffe. Advantage was also taken at the meeting last evening to present Miss Polly Clinton with a handsome carving set, the young lady, a member of the Guild, to be married shortly.

Allen Cannot Wed in Jail

(Times Special).

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Joseph Tybro, a young Swede, who was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for stealing $200 from George Pettit of Hull, arranged to be married to the young girl he was to have wed on the evening of his arrest. Father Dubault, the parish priest, however, refused to perform the ceremony. The law forbids an alien being married in jail.

Pugsley Must Make Mayes Prove Charge

(Times Special).

St. John's, N.B., Oct. 13.—The St. John's Globe (Liberal), in its issue today, says Pugsley must make Mayes either prove his charges or retract them, or himself resign.

It is stated that the $2000 went to Pugsley in 1905, before he became a cabinet minister at Ottawa.

A Splendid Program Rendered

A very successful and enjoyable session of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of St. Andrew's church, was held last night. The annual thankoffering was taken up and it amounted to a good sum. During the evening the following program was rendered;—

Several members of the Willing Workers' Mission Band sang a chorus.

Miss Grace Evans gave a missionary reading on thanksgiving.

Miss Bella King sang as a solo, "Only Waiting."

Rev. J. G. Potter gave an address on "More than Coronets," basing his remarks on Lord Tennyson's line "Kind hearts are more than coronets." He outlined the use of coronets and the honor and dignity in wearing it and the striving and aspirations in obtaining it. In the practical application he showed the nobility of the service in which the young ladies were engaged.

Several new members were taken in and at the close of the evening refreshments were served.

Game is Scarce, Wolves Plentiful

(Times Special).

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Major J. D. Moodie, who is in charge of Northwest Mounted Police posts in the Hudson Bay district, in a report to Col. Fred White, comptroller of the N.W.M.P. and governor of the unorganized territories, says that owing to the lack of game and the prevalence of wolves, great destitution exists among the natives. Some have died of starvation and others have been rescued from starvation by the efforts of the police.

Major Moodie says that at Churchill a channel was broken through to the harbor on June 15, but owing to continuous easterly and northerly winds the ice for some time never got far enough into the bay to get out of the river entrance, and travelled in and out with the tide. The ice, however, was loose and in "needles" and a good steamer have no difficulty in working through it. Major Moodie reports that despite the conditions which have prevailed no serious crimes have been committed in the far North since his last report.

Fat is Out of Style

To paraphrase Caesar's remark, the directoire gown came—was seen—and has conquered. So fat ladies are reduced, so to speak, to the necessity of either reducing at a very rapid rate or eliminating themselves from public view until the fashion dies out. Otherwise they risk being ridiculous.

Since many fat ladies will not eliminate themselves, however, but, per contra, will insist on wearing the curveless gown, no course is open to this well-meaning scribe other than to tell them how they may eliminate the fat.

What is there, then, that reduces fat safely? What pleasant inexpensive article is there on druggists' shelves that can reduce a pound a day without causing wrinkles or stomach ache? What can the pharmacists offer as an improvement over scanty victuals or ten mile walks without breakfast? Is there anything pleasant to take and inexpensive to buy that will reduce one uniformly quickly and innocently thirt pounds a month? Here is the answer; Either write the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., or ask your local druggist for Marmola Prescription Tablets, and for 75 cents they or he will give you one large case of these safe fat reducers, containing so generous a quantity of tablets that sometimes one case only is needed to produce the desired results. Can you match that for a simple solution of your problem?

Field Crops Yield of the Dominion

(Times Special).

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—A bulletin on the estimated yield and quality of field crops in Canada was given out by the Census and Statistics Office yesterday. The returns are based upon actual threshing results, so far as these have been obtained. The average yield of wheat is estimated at 17 1-2 bushels per acre, indicating a total production of 115,681,000 bushels; oats, 33.7 bushels per acre, total production 267,651,000 bushels; barley, 29.0 bushels per acre, total production 50,723,000 bushels; and rye, 16.8 bushels per acre, total production 1,589,000 bushels.

The yield of peas is estimated at 7,178,000 bushels; beans, 1,182,000 bushels buckwheat, 7,265,000 bushels; mixed grains, 19,113,000 bushels, flax seed 1,575,000 bushels, and corn, for husking, 21,607,000 bushels. Potatoes average 145.4 bushels per acre, with total production 73,228,000 bushels; turnips and other roots, 309.7 bushels per acre, total production, 84,075,000 bushels.

Hay and clover are estimated at 1.4 tons per acre, the total yield being 11,642,000 tons, and fodder corn 10.9 tons per acre, total production 2,835,000 tons.

BELOW FORMER ESTIMATE.

The yield of wheat as estimated from the condition of the crops at the end of August is not maintained by the threshing results, the total yield of wheat as now estimated being 3 1-2 bushels per acre less, or a diminution in the total production as then estimated, of 9,039,000 bushels; but the drop is almost entirely due to the returns from the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where climatic influences appear to have had greater effect upon the yield than were indicated by the appearance of the crops at the end of August. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the estimated yield of wheat is 95,518,000 bushels; of oats, 165,461,000 bushels; and of barley, 36,382,000 bushels.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Sheep, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ous's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. alt is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Sheep's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Vertibrate Propeller for War Use

(Times Special).

New York, Oct. 12.—Three undred feet above busy Broadway yesterday afternoon, on the roof of No. 42, a group of yachtsmen, marine engineers and others witnessed what they all agreed was a startling demonstration of the latest thing in marine propulsion—the American vertebrate propeller, the principle of which has been described before.

It consists of three flat metal blades, each measuring 6 by 11 inches, hinged together, and which operate under the middle of the boat with a fish tail motion, in a trough or sluice formed by twin keels which extend fore and aft to within a short distance of the stem and stern.

In a tank that is 104 feet long, 42 inches wide and holding water 52 inches deep floated a model of a battleship 13 feet long, 26 inches beam and about eight inches draft, equipped with the new propeller. A half-horsepower motor, installed in the boat alongside the engines, was supplied with direct electric current by six little wheels travelling on three overhead copper wires, connected and controlled by a switch at one end of the tank.

At a signal the engineer turned on the power, instantly the boat gathered headway, traversing the one hundred foot tank in just nine seconds. Then the astonishing thing happened. By the simple turn of the switch she stopped as if a brake were applied, and in a moment, with her engines reversed, she was speeding back to the starting point—something that would have been impossible with an ordinary propeller, engineers say. Those who are behind the new invention believe that an ocean liner equipped with this device located amidships would not only be free from vibration, but the propeller, working always in solid water, would drive her at phenomenal speed, with no danger of "racing."

1-2 Inch of Ice, Robins Whistle

(Times Special).

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Major J. W. Collins of this city, who was spending the night at Markham, brings news of a strange mixture of winter and summer at that town this morning. Last night they had a pretty heavy frost out there, and this morning there was half an inch of ice in some pails. Yet when Major Collins awoke this morning he heard the robins singing away in the trees, just as though it was the middle of summer.

These red-breasted fellows rather give the lie to the old nursery rhyme, which goes;

The north wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow,
And what will the robin do then,
poor thing?

He'll sit in the barn
To keep himself warm.
And hide his head under his wing,
poor thing.

Mother Goose will have to get out a new edition to read something like this:

He'll sit in the trees,
Enjoying the breeze,
And whistle to keep himself warm,
bold thing!

The Observatory reports frost as general throughout Western Ontario last night. Toronto had four degrees, while Barry Sound enjoyed quite a touch of winter, with twelve degrees. Port Stanley had six degrees of it.

In Eastern Ontario the thermometer just hit the freezing point, and no frost was experienced. The weather man promises warmer weather today.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

September Shipments High Record

Winnipeg, Oct. 10.—The biggest movement of wheat in the history of the Canadian West in one month has been recorded for September, when 11,818 cars of grain were inspected at Winnipeg. Of this total 6,480 cars were handled by the C.P.R., and 3,896 cars by the Canadian Northern Railway. This movement of wheat alone means that 10,299,260 bushels was forwarded, or in other words, about one-eleventh of the estimated total to be marketed.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

The

Plow Woman

By ELEANOR GATES,

Author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl."

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"Mother's name was Mery Lynn," she answered, her voice lowered. "So she just put it together."

"And yours?"

"Mine's Dallas. I was born in Texas."

He leaned back against his high cantle and smiled. "I could 'a' guessed that," he declared.

Again she colored sensitively and hastened to swing the team around until Betty stood in the furrow. "My father's coming," she said.

Instantly Lounsbury was all regret, for he saw that she had misunderstood him. "You don't look Texas," he said earnestly. "It's just the name. And—and I think Dallas is pretty too."

The implied jest on her native state did not do away with her displeasure. She nodded gravely and, turning, put the lines about her shoulders. The mules started.

"Now I've got you down on me," he said penitently. "Honest, I didn't mean"—

She paid no heed.

He clapped on his hat, whipped his horse and followed alongside, waiting for her to look up. Opposite the shack Lancaster and his other daughter were standing by the furrow. Here she drew rein. "This is Maryilya," she said as the storekeeper leaned to grasp her father's hand.

Lounsbury again lifted his hat and looked down, long and admiringly, upon the younger girl. Her fair hair, framing in soft waves a pale, oval face and her blue eyes watching him in some confusion, were strongly in contrast with the straight, heavy braids—brown, and showing burnished tints in the light—and the unwavering eyes of her sister. Looking at her, he was reminded of girls he had seen beyond the Alleghanies—girls who knew little or no toil and who jealously guarded their beauty from sun and wind. Answering Lancaster's blunt questions that followed close upon each other he paid her prettiness constant and wondering homage, and she, noting the attention, retreated a little and was quiet and abashed.

"Who's you' party?" the elder man demanded, indicating the distant camp with one crutch and leaning heavily upon the other.

"Surveyors," replied Lounsbury.

"Surveyors!" There was alarm in Lancaster's tone. He suddenly recalled how, slighting Dallas' advice, he had delayed a trip to the land office for the purpose of filing on the claim. "W'at they doin'?"

"Something right in your line, sir. They're laying out a railroad."

"A railroad? You don' say! How'll it come?"

"Why, right this way."

Lancaster caught the other by the boot strap. "Shore?" he asked.

"Sure," repeated Lounsbury. "Sure as death and taxes. It's bound to run somewhere between the coulee and Medicine mountain, and it'll stop—at least for a few years—at the Missouri. With those sloughs in the way at the south end of the gap, it can't reach the river without coming over your land. First thing you know, you'll have stores and saloons around your house. There's going to be a town on the bend, sir."

The elder man scanned the younger's face. Lounsbury was smiling half teasingly, yet undoubtedly he was in earnest.

"W'y, Lawd!" breathed the section boss, realizing the whole import of the news. A railroad would mean immeasurable good fortune to the trio of settlers who, like young prairie chickens that fear to leave the side of their mother, had chosen quarter sections near the guarding fort. And to him, penniless, with motherless girls, it meant—

"The ferrying 's so good right here," went on the storekeeper. "Why, it's a 10 to 1 shot the track 'll end on your claim."

With one accord all looked across the level quarter, where the new green was creeping in after the late rains.

"A railroad! An' a town!" The section boss pulled at his grizzled goatee. "They'll make this place worth a heap!"

"They will," agreed Lounsbury. "But road or no road, seems to me you've got about the cream of this side of the river."

"You' right," said Lancaster. But the girls were silent, except that Dallas gave a sigh deep and full of happiness.

Lounsbury glanced at her. "You like the place, don't you," he asked, "even if"— He suddenly paused. Her palms were open and half turned upward. Across each lay a crimson stripe—the mark of the plow handle.

For the second time she read his meaning. "Yes, I like the prairie," she answered, "if I do have to plow." And she stepped from the furrow to the unturned sod.

As she stood there Lounsbury caught the clear outline of her firmly drawn face. Beside her Maryilya, slight and colorless, was for the moment eclipsed. The hat of the elder girl was brushed back, displaying a forehead upon which shone the very spirit of the unshackled. Her hands, large, yet not too large for the splendid figure of which they were the instruments were clasped upon her breast. Watching her, it seemed to Lounsbury that she must have sprung as she was from the plains one day—grave, full grown and gallant.

Her father's voice broke in harshly. "Ah didn' want she should plow," he protested. "Ah figgered t' git some one on tick, but seems like Dallas she"—

"We like it here," she interrupted, "because the air is cool and there's lots of grass." Then, after bending to gather a purple flower, she stepped back to the plow.

"You're planning to stay, then," said Lounsbury.

"Stay!" burst forth the section boss. "Don' it look like it?"

Lounsbury made no reply, only smiled genially.

"Maybe y' reckon we-all ain't safe?" continued Lancaster. "Waal, th' nesters roun' Fort Sully's safe 'nough."

The storekeeper pointed across the river to where a flag was flying at the center of the post quadrangle. "You're in sight of that," he said simply.

The other snorted. Then, stifling a retort, he searched Lounsbury's face with his milky blue eyes. "Ah'd like t' ast w'y y' didn' tell me 'bout th' track when Ah seen y' las'," he observed suspiciously.

The storekeeper gave a hearty laugh. "And why didn't you say you had daughters?" he demanded.

Instantly a change came over the elder man. He darkened angrily. His breath shortened as if he had been running. Visible trembling seized him, body and limbs.

Mystified, Lounsbury turned to Dallas and saw that her eyes were fastened upon her father imploringly. "No, no, dad," he heard her whisper; "no, no."

The storekeeper hastened to speak. "Joking aside," he said, "the reason is this: The railroad company wants the right kind of people to settle on the land along the survey. It doesn't want men who'd file just to get a price, so the story hasn't leaked much."

Lancaster was fumbling at his crutches. "Ah see; Ah see," he said sullkily. Then, with an attempt at being courteous: "Come up t' th' shack, Lounsb'ry. Y' bring good news. Y' got t' hev you' dinner."

Natalie of the Neighborhood House.

By CECILY ALLEN

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Neighborhood House was Natalie's charity by inheritance. Her mother had founded it and had met the deficiencies in its exchequer from time to time. Natalie was not sentimental, but her mother's pathetic anxiety about Neighborhood House during her last illness had touched the girl, whose life had been devoted to the pursuit of pleasure.

Why Natalie should turn to the Neighborhood House in her hour of hurt pride only Providence could explain. To her the working girls toward whose comfort, education and pleasure her checks had contributed might as well have been in Persia or China, so little did she know them. In a vague sort of way she thought of them as moles who came out of their holes at night and blinkingly, even dully, enjoyed such pleasure as women of her kind provided for them.

So when she came upon Maggie Connolly face downward in the pillow of a cosy corner on that hot June Saturday, when all the rest of the Neighborhood girls had gone picnicking, she stood looking down upon the tearful one with strange, brooding eyes.

"My dear girl," she began, with that gentle air of patronage which is the refined cruelty of the rich toward the sensitive souls among the poor, "what has happened? Have you hurt yourself? Have you lose your purse?"

Maggie was nothing if not democratic. She did not ask Miss Natalie Burgess who she was or what she was doing there.

"Tom Devery's gone to the beach with that bleach blond at the next machine, Polly Maguire. Get that, will you?"

"But you must know lots of other young men who would be glad to take you to the beach. I saw them hanging on the cars like flies."

Maggie, who had wiped her eyes, now turned her scornful gaze upon her would be comforter.

"I don't want to go with those fellows. I want just Tom."

The sudden break in her voice, the sudden gathering of mist over her blue eyes, brought revelation to the petted daughter of millions.

"I want just Tom."

It was like an echo from the night before.

Not that she had put it into words. Not that she had so much as admitted to herself that she wanted to see one Thomas Witherspoon Brainard. But suddenly, like a flash of lightning across a dark landscape, she saw the panorama of her own heart.

She wanted Tom; the other tall, clean cut Tom, and she had always wanted him.

"What came between you and—Tom?" she asked.

"What came between us? What comes between every girl like me and what she wants—trouble. Working overtime till I'm that ugly you can't even your fingers at me, and the two children sick at home, and mother talking all I earn—I know she can't help that—and me so shabby in clothes no man would want to take me to the beach, and Tom in that particular. And Polly Maguire—she can spend all her wages on herself. She's got a new automobile that you can see through to the pink silk silk. Oh"—

"But if she's wearing that to the beach she is dressed in very poor taste," said Natalie severely. "And a man who will forget you because your clothes are shabby is really not worth fretting for."

Maggie sat up very straight.

"What do you know about wearing clothes? I bet you've got a dress for every day in the year, and when he comes you have an awful time thinking which one he'd like best, 'cause you've got so many. But when you haven't one good dress to your name and things go wrong at the factory—and, well, I said a few things and he said some, and he threw me down."

For a few moments Natalie Burgess sat calmly stroking the head of her newly acquired acquaintance and who had once more retired to the questionable comfort of the cushion. Then very gently she said:

"Don't cry any more, Maggie. I guess being thrown down is something most women have to bear some time in their lives. It was not a question of dress with me, and I am quite sure I had said nothing. We never had a word. He just left town and never even said goodby."

Maggie stared at her, speechless with wonder. Her own troubles were forgotten. Some man had "thrown down" this radiant creature in soft gray silk and shimmery plumes!

"We are going to my house, Maggie, and find a dress for you that will quite outshine Polly's organdie, because it will be much more appropriate, and then we are going to the picnic, and you are going to mingle with the young people as if Tom Devery did not exist, and when he comes to make up with you, as he surely will, you are going to meet him halfway. Do you understand?"

Talk about Cinderella and the ball! Her experiences were as nothing when compared to Maggie Connolly's trip that afternoon. The wonderful rows of clothes—presses which open when Miss Burgess' maid touched a button, the many linen frocks from which it was hard to select just the trimmest one for Maggie, and then the selection of shoes and hats and gloves, for the two girls were nearly of one size.

And at last the spin to the beach in Miss Burgess' car, the routing of Polly Maguire and the recapture of Tom Devery! In her excitement Maggie almost forgot her benefactress.

But Natalie did not forget Maggie and traced her through the Neighborhood House to her home.

Maggie's Tom had come back, and Maggie loved the whole world! So when Miss Burgess questioned her about working girls and their privations Maggie glowed and dilated on the good the Neighborhood House had done them all.

From the Neighborhood House and its privileges it was a short step to the need of a vacation hotel for girls, and almost before Maggie knew what happened she and Tom, now her abject slave, were whirled away one Saturday in Miss Burgess' machine to look over a neglected hotel estate in a once fashionable seaside colony.

Natalie Burgess knew the value of her money, and she also knew the value of a shrewd assistant like Maggie, who understood girls and their problems. So it happened that the Neighborhood House opened a summer annex at West Shore, and Maggie Connolly resigned her post at the factory to become Natalie's representative in the new establishment.

"Natalie of the Neighborhood House," her friends called her now and laughed at her caprice. And at the summer annex of the Neighborhood House Thomas Witherspoon Brainard found her one lovely fall day, shortly after his return from Vienna, where he had gone abruptly to complete his medical studies.

The idea of Natalie, the self centered, hobnobbing with factory girls rather tickled his fancy.

Maggie was packing the summer fittings. Natalie was sitting in an open window, swinging her trim feet and laughing at Maggie's enthusiasm. But she had been helping, too, and her sleeves were rolled up, her eyes bright, her cheeks flushed, as she turned to meet Brainard.

Feminine intuition told Maggie that this was the psychological moment for her to pack up what few groceries were left in the storeroom. What happened during her absence is not necessary to set forth here, but as she slipped back to remind her patron that twilight was falling and the car was waiting to take them back to town she heard Thomas Witherspoon Brainard say contritely:

"Can you ever forgive me for imagining that you were a vain, selfish, useless sort of doll that could never understand or help a struggling physician? I don't deserve you, dearest. I was a thick headed fool"—

Maggie went out on the porch and sank upon the top step.

"Does the man live who throws you down that can't be won back?" she asked herself happily, for how could Maggie know that the glorious Natalie had won happiness through her humble self?

Still Searching.

He was young and debonair and was seen about the water front looking for an old sailor, says the Philadelphia Ledger. "Any old sailor will do," he remarked confidentially to a big man, to whom he stated the object of his quest, "because all I want is to have some tattoo marks taken out of my arms."

When the tug man informed him that these India ink punctures would stick closer to him than a blood relation and would be on his arm when his death certificate was filed the young fellow was aghast.

"What in the world can I going to do?" he asked in despair. "There's a heart and two arrows and a girl's initials on my arm, and I want to get them off. I've got to get rid of them before any way. The girl ran away last week with another fellow, and they're enjoying their honeymoon now. I must get another girl, and I don't want to sleep with a married woman's monogram just above my elbow."

The man was truly a pitiable one, and the generous heart of the tug man was touched.

"I'll tell you what you've got to do," he exclaimed as a happy thought struck him. "You must find another girl to fit these initials."

When last seen the tattooed man was in search of a damsel who could answer to the initials "H. A. L."

QUALITIES OF THE AYRSHIRE.

C. M. Winslow, secretary of the Ayrshire association, says: "While an Ayrshire cow should be shapely and handsome to look at as she stands or walks, she should when handled reveal much looseness of vertebra, flatness of rib and width between the ribs, indicating large dairy capacity. The Ayrshire is a tough, hardy cow, with a vigorous appetite, and not too particular what she eats. She is always hungry, eats greedily and chews her cud rapidly. You can rarely see an Ayrshire cow when not taking in food or chewing what she has already gathered. While at pasture she does not wander around looking for sweet patches of grass, but goes to work rapidly gathering what is most convenient, either of grass or browse, and when full lies down to chew her cud, with no time wasted, and when going to and from pasture will chew her cud while walking and often continue to chew when started into a run.

"The general appearance of an Ayrshire as you look at her is striking. She is alert and full of life and reserved energy. She is a healthy cow, rarely having ailments of body or udder, and you seldom see an Ayrshire cow that does not have four healthy quarters in her udder, yielding a uniform quantity of milk from each. She is a very persistent milker, giving a uniform quantity well up toward calving, and many of these are dried off with difficulty.

"She is very intelligent, quick to learn and of a retentive memory, easily taught to take the same place in the stable and, if required to change, will in a few days readily take the new place. She is quiet and pleasant to milk, not easily disturbed and will, as a rule, yield her milk as readily to one milker as another and does not seem disturbed by any amount of noise in the stable.

"As a dairy cow she is particularly adapted to the production of milk for the milkman and for table use, as her medium size, vigorous appetite and easy keeping qualities make her an economical producer, while her even, uniform production makes her a reliable supply, and the richness of her milk in total solids places it above suspicion from city milk inspectors. Her milk is particularly adapted to transportation, as it does not churn or sour easily, and when poured back and forth a few times will readily mix the cream back into the milk, which will not again readily separate, giving it a uniform quality until the last is sold or used. It has a good body, is rich looking and never looks blue. The milk itself, being evenly balanced with casein and butter fat, is a complete food, easily digested, nutritious and is particularly adapted to children and invalids. Stomachs that are weak and unable to digest other milk find no trouble with Ayrshire cows' milk."

Keep Stock Separate.

There used to be a theory that everything could run together in the barnyard—the colts, the calves, the cows, pigs and chickens should all have access to the same yard. After the farmers began to keep better stock they saw the advisability of giving each class a yard for itself. It is hardly right to keep the cows and the calves in the same lot for evident reasons. The colts and the cows will not harmonize because the exuberance of the former tends to irritate the latter and lessens the milk flow. The chickens and the pigs should not be kept together because there is a chance that the hogs may get to eating hens. Every farmer has had experience with all of these things. The only peaceable plan is to have a yard for each kind of stock. If you want to run the pigs in the barnyard, do so for a time each day, but not when the calves and hens are there. It is just as advisable to keep stock upon the farm separate as it is to use separate fields for the crops.

Clover For Winter Feeding.

The question is asked if clover can be ensiled for feed next winter instead of corn silage. Clover may be ensiled and will make a good feed if it is correctly handled, but it requires more care in the handling than does corn. It should be cut when in full bloom. If allowed to get old and woody it is apt to overheat and mold or the stems and leaves little feeding value. If ensiled with the usual additions on, as either a shower or heavy dew, it is apt to become more acid than is desirable. The material must be well distributed in the pit and should be thoroughly tramped and covered to exclude the air. Clover silage is apt to silmon if not well packed when put into the silo. —L. W. Lighty.

Variety is Spice For Stock.

Animals relish a variety of food and will give better results when they have it. A feed of corn stover now and then and a basket of salt lying in the yard, with four or five shovels cut out between the hogs so that they can always help themselves, is a good thing.

THE ROAD TO WEALTH.

It Is the First Thousand Dollars That Counts.

"The thing that counts," said a man of independently large means, accumulated by hard work, saving and wise investments, "is the first thousand dollars. When you've got that amount together you are beginning to get somewhere, and with that start you will want to keep on. The red ink interest entries that you see put down in your savings bank book twice a year will strike you very pleasantly indeed. As interest on your thousand dollars you'll get $35 or $40 in a year. Your money has begun earning money for you.

"You've got an income now, and you'll want to add to it. You will leave that interest in the bank, to be added to your principal, and now your interest will begin to draw interest, and, to be sure, you will keep right on adding to your principal, too, and every six months you'll see those red figures growing bigger and bigger, pretty figures to contemplate, and you'll keep right along saving. But the thing that really counts is the first thousand dollars. Get that and you're all right, and you'll always be glad you saved it.

"For there really is nothing like financial independence or like having at least some money laid by. Then if you want money you've got it. You don't have to go to friends to borrow and take the risk of being refused, the risk of being compelled to go without what you need. If you've got money in the bank you can go there and get it. There might come a time when you would need money for your family or for yourself very much. It's a grand thing to have it where you can get it.

"There's nothing mean about being saving and accumulating money. On the contrary, it is every man's duty to make himself financially independent. I don't mean at all that a man wants to set out to accumulate great wealth. There is no great fun in that. But what he does want to do is to get together enough to live on modestly."

DODGES OF COAL MINERS.

They Have Many Ways of Adding Extra Pennies to Their Wages.

In coal mining, as in other trades, there are many tricks played. Seams below three feet are paid extra tonnage, generally a penny per ton extra for each inch in the reduction of the thickness of the seam. Certain days are set apart for the purpose of measuring, and many schemes are resorted to by the miner to make the measurement as low as possible. Thus, according to the inequalities or irregularity of the floor and roof, a place may measure 3 feet one day and the next only 2 feet 9 inches. The miner takes advantage of this fact by letting his place stand for a whole shift, and sometimes a day, when he comes to a reduction in the thickness of the coal seam, and it pays him, too.

In other cases stone bands run in the seam of coal, and they vary in thickness also, but the miner is paid extra tonnage for the increase in the thickness of the band. Thus, you see that it means a considerable addition to his income to obtain an increased measurement.

A popular trick among mine managers is to work the near and most accessible coal in the mine, with no regard to system so long as they succeed in obtaining a large output of coal. Having worked all the best districts, they look out for another situation, and you will understand the position of the next manager and the enormous difficulties and expense to work the mine.

Dis-Composing.

The sports had been a great success, and Colonel Proudem, delighted to be recognised as a magnate in the Midlands, had puffed out his chest with pride when he presented the prizes to their winners.

Eagerly the next morning he picked up the local newspaper, to see if his speech had been reported. A smile spread over his face as he read the preliminary remarks about his glorious services to his country, his many active engagements with the enemy; but suddenly he stopped:

"This battle-scared warrior——"

But the colonel could read no further. In a furious rage, he drove off to the newspaper office, and demanded a public apology. This was immediately promised, and regrets tendered for the mistake.

The next morning his feelings may be imagined as he read:

"We regret that through a printer's error, yesterday we styled Colonel Prondem as a 'battle-scared warrior.' We should have said 'bottle-scared.'"

Vegetable Stones.

"There are vegetable stones," said a geologist. "Stones, that is, that grow in vegetables.

"Here is a tabasheer. It is found in the joints of certain kinds of bamboo. It is always round and brown, like this. Here is the cocoanut stone. You find it in the endosperm of the Javanese cocoanut. Round or pear shaped, it has always this milk white luster, like a pearl. The smaller stone, with its pearly luster is a little tarnished, is found in the persimmon. It is pure carbonate of lime. These stones are formed from effete ore and calcareous juices circulating in the plant organism. They are the result of a diseased condition. Man himself, you know, occasionally puts forth stony growths, and they must be removed or the human stone grower dies in excruciating pain."

The Human Finger Bowl.

"The fiend of the table d'hote," said the table d'hote fiend, "that they are ruining the manners of the people. The other night I saw the prettiest girl at a table across from me, so pretty I could hardly keep my eyes off her. She was dressed all white, with a big white hat covered with a white veil, and had lovely blue eyes, and when she had finished eating her pear she licked every finger she had on both hands."

Baby's Birth a Trying Time

Made Easy if the Mother Prepares Her System with a Bracing Treatment of Ferrozone.

Women immediately experience a real gain in power and strength from using Ferrozone.

It is a true nerve and blood tonic and effects permanent cures unparalleled in the history of medicine.

Ferrozone supplies the essentials of life that are exhausted by overwork, worry, indigestion or high living. It contains just what every run-down woman and girl requires.

By instilling new strength into the blood, Ferrozone benefits the whole body.

Digestion improves, the eyes sparkle, the cheeks glow with girlish beauty.

Normal powers are restored to the reproductive organs, the nerves are recharged with energy, proving that direct benefit is resulting from Ferrozone.

There is no greater boon to suffering women than Ferrozone. It fills the system with the fire and snap of youth, builds up firm tissue, rounds out the form until perfect womanhood and vigorous health is attained.

Ferrozone is the one safe tonic for ladies to use, because it contains no alcohol or dangerous drugs. Growing girls, young women, expectant mothers—every female will derive unquestionable benefit from this grand restorative.

CLASH OR CONCERT?

War talk in and about the Balkan continues. There is cause for the talk, and there is, unhappily, danger of war. It would be preferable, no doubt, to have the whole dispute settled peaceably in an international congress or before a tribunal of arbitration, and in some particulars it may seem suited to such treatment. It involves the interpretation and maintenance of a treaty, and disputes over treaties are commonly regarded as arbitrable. But, on the other hand, it certainly and directly implicates the honor and integrity of some nations, and there are many who hold that disputes of that sort are not arbitrable, or, at any rate, are not necessarily and involuntarily arbitrable.

There is also much talk of a congress of the powers, at Paris, London or Rome, for the settlement of the trouble. There was a congress thirty years ago at Berlin which created the situation the disturbance of which has caused the present crisis. Why not reconvene that congress, or constitute its logical successor, to deal with the alleged infractions of the treaty which was then made? That appears on the face of it to be a reasonable and practicable demand, but there are some obstacles in the way of it. Such a congress can be called with any prospect of success only by common consent and with common agreement upon the issues which are to form its agenda. But such consent and agreement seem at present out of the question.

Austria-Hungary will not enter such a congress unless her title to Bosnia and Herzegovina is recognized in advance and all question of her right to seize those provinces is excluded from consideration. That is, she will not enter a congress unless the other powers agree to ignore the very thing to discuss which the congress is chiefly desired.

Russia will not agree to a congress unless it is empowered to consider a general revision of the whole Treaty of Berlin, including the clause which bars the Dardanelles to the passage of Russian warships.

Great Britain will not agree to a congress unless it is expressly stipulated that it shall not generally revise the Treaty of Berlin, but shall confine itself to the particular issues which have just been raised.

Of course, any or all of these powers may reconsider the position which they are now reported to have assumed and may "get together" in an harmonious concert. But at present the situation seems to be that Austria-Hungary will not agree to such a congress as either Great Britain or Russia wants; that Great Britain will not agree to such a congress as either Austria-Hungary or Russia wants, and that Russia will not agree to such a congress as either Great Britain or Austria-Hungary wants.

In case of serious disagreement or conflict, before an appeal to arms, the signatory powers agree to have recourse, as far as circumstances allow, to the good offices or mediation of one or more friendly powers. In questions of a legal nature, and especially in the interpretation or application of international conventions, arbitration is recognized by the signatory powers as the most effective and at the same time the most equitable means of settling disputes which diplomacy has failed to settle. . . With the object of facilitating an immediate recourse to arbitration, for international differences, the signatory powers undertake to organize a permanent court of arbitration, accessible at all times . . The signatory powers consider it their duty if a serious dispute threatens to break out between two or more of them, to remind these latter that the permanent court is open to them.

The signatory powers to that convention, it will be remembered, included Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Montenegro, Servia and Turkey. It will be interesting to observe to what extent these and the other powers seriously and practically endeavor to give to those solemn undertakings.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

Free Rural Mail Delivery in the Dominion of Canada, is an accomplished fact. True to his promise, made at the Laurier picnic at Niagara Falls a month ago, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster General, set about the work of establishing a rural delivery system with the least possible delay. It was then in the future. It is now a fact, for the first route was formally opened in the neighboring County of Wentworth on Saturday last, by Postoffice Superintendent Ross. There are thirty-seven boxes on this route, known as the Hamilton-Ancaster route, and every facility will be provided that the residents of that section may have all the benefits that can possibly be derived therefrom. The work of organizing and establishing other routes will proceed forthwith, and it will not be long before the agricultural portions of Peterborough County will be enjoying the same privileges in this regard as the people of Wentworth to-day enjoy.

THE LAND REGULATIONS

The Department of the Interior is issuing regulations to the Dominion land agents relative to conditions which beneficiaries under the volunteer bounty act of 1908 must comply with in locating their land grants of 320 acres in recognition of military services in South Africa. The most important feature of the regulation is the ruling of the department that a volunteer in applying for land signs an application form binding himself to enter upon the land and begin settlement duties within six months after his application is accepted. In this way the department overcomes the admitted error in framing the bill, which permitted a volunteer to locate his land without being obliged to begin settlement duties upon it before June 30, 1911. It is claimed by the department that this clause of the bill was entirely contrary to the Government's intention. The effect of the clause is that a veteran locating cannot hold his land until the middle of 1911 and derive the benefit of the increase in the price of land which he would undoubtedly obtain if the bill as constructed and passed by Parliament was complied with. The department, however, has made a concession to the volunteers in permitting a substitute to come on the land and complete the settlement duties after the volunteer has performed a reasonable portion of them.

INDUSTRIAL ARBITROTION IN ENGLAND

It is well known that the British Board of Trade, a department of the government, has by timely mediation and conciliation prevented some serious and great strikes. It is not generally known that these interventions were not extraordinary. A statement issued by Mr. Churchill, the present head of the department, shows that in 1906 the board intervened in fourteen disputes, settling them all; in 1907 in twenty cases, settling sixteen, and in 1907 in thirty-nine cases, settling all but seven. In the first eight months of the present year no fewer than forty-seven cases of intervention occurred, and nearly all of them have been satisfactorily settled.

The board, in thus tendering its aid to industrial disputants, is acting under a law which gives it power to appoint a conciliator and arbitrator in trade controversies at the request of both parties. Sometimes the head of the board proffers his help in an extra-legal and informal way, and the influence of the great office secures a favorable response to his appeal. At any rate, the work of the department in this new sphere has so increased that Mr. Churchill has decided to establish a standing or permanent court of conciliation and arbitration. He can do this without waiting for or asking fresh legislation, and his plan has been widely indorsed. Even opposition newspapers speak well of it as another guaranty of industrial peace with justice and honor.

The court will be composed of three or five members, at the discretion and preference of the parties. Its fees and expenses will be paid by the department. The court will be nominated from three distinct panels—one drawn from permanent men in the employer class, another from the trade union leaders and representative workmen, and the third from the impartial and eminent citizens who are not directly connected with industry.

The court will have the help, where necessary, of technical assessors from the trade affected by the controversy before it. These assessors will have no votes, but they will sit with the court and explain obscure or unfamiliar points in the controversy.

The law provides for no compulsion in thus facilitating arbitration, and the progress of arbitration in England has been due to voluntary recognition of public interest and the fairness of the board of trade. The setting up of a permanent court and the care taken to insure good judges should spell further advance toward industrial peace in England.

EDITORIAL NOTES

All Europe is talking of a new conference of the powers which took part in making the famous treaty of Berlin thirty years ago. One listens somewhat wearily to catch a suggestion that the court of arbitration provided at The Hague nine years ago, might now be utilized, but of that there is not a whisper. Instead there is a hum of diplomatic technicalities, of "fait accompli", of "uti possidatis," and other impressive phases of the doctrine of might makes right. Turkey protests, Servia calls on her reserves, Great Britain intimates the need of a conference, but Austria is reported to hold that her treatment of Bosnia and Herzegovina is not a violation, is indeed but a logical and necessary completion of the principles of the Berlin Treaty.

Naturally the first thing to be done in regard to a conference is to agree as to the matters to be submitted to it. If Austria refuses to lay the assimilation of Bosnia and Herzegovina before the assembled Powers, and if Germany approves of that course, the conference becomes practically either impossible or futile, so far as concerns the one question now under discussion. Subsequently all that will remain for the Powers to do is to try to agree what other changes can be made that will be reasonably satisfactory to all concerned. The work of the conference would probably be not to enforce the Berlin Treaty, but to arrange for further infractions of it. That is not a prospect encouraging to those who had hoped that the principle of mutual obligation in international relations had made real progress in the last decade.

It may be said that it is better to negotiate than to fight. But here is a crisis in which there is involved the very basis of all international negotiation, the binding force of treaties on all who sign them. After what has taken place, wherein would a new treaty be of any more worth than the former one dealing with like questions and signed by the same Powers? Suppose the conference to be assembled, Count Aehrenthal for Austria-Hungary, accompanied by the smiling Buelow, for Germany, lays upon the table the treaty of 1878, torn down the middle, and invites the Powers to replace it. What would logically be the term of existence of the new agreement? Clearly it would not survive the moment when one or two of the Powers got ready to rend it as its predecessor has been rent. That indicates the state of affairs which for uncertainty and confusion is not palpably better than actual conflict. Apparently it is the state to which affairs are drifting.

The statement made to the New York Academy of Medicine by Dr. Le Grand N. Denslow that he has effected cures in cases of locomotor ataxia by surgical methods suggests a most revolutionary departure in the treatment of that disease. The affection of the spinal cord known as tabes dorsalis, of which locomotor ataxia is a development, is one of the most distressing and deadly maladies to which humanity is heir, and if the published reports of Dr. Denslow's discovery have not been exaggerated he has performed a remarkable service to mankind in demonstrating that the remedy is not medicine in combination with hygienic practices, but in the employment of surgical instruments.

The published reports of Dr. Denslow's new method are, unfortunately, a trifle vague. He is said to have found that locomotor ataxia is not due to systemic poisoning or to inflammation acting upon the spinal cord, but to a lesion or erosion existing "in a certain tract or duct in the lower part of the abdomen. What this duct is and its relation to the spinal cord have yet to be specified. This lesion, he says, produces a series of abnormal nerve impulses, affecting the lower part of the spine, and causing there a zone of destructive irritation. The disease of the duct can be removed by surgery. Dr. Denslow says, and cases are given by him in which tures were so effected.

Until more can be learned concerning Dr. Denslow's method, opinion as to its efficacy must be reserved. It is certainly entitled to a thorough investigation by competent practitioners before it can be either accepted as a really valuable curative or dismissed as one of the many supposed "discoveries" which deceive even those who honestly advance them as of permanent value to science. If it be all that is claimed for it in the newspapers, the benefit of it to the world would be incalculable.

The White Plague

Dr. Flick, director of the Tuberculosis Congress to be held in Washington, made the following hopeful statement.

"I am sure that in fifteen years or less tuberculosis will be wiped out. All that is needed is a wider knowledge of how to prevent its spread. If we could teach every one the simple methods of preventing contagion we could immediately stop all further progress of the disease, and in a few years it would be gone. Their wide educational value is the reason for holding the national conferences. Thus we intend to reach as many people as we can through the papers, through exhibits and through popular lectures."

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter F. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I consulted everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

1 CENT A 2 SHARE

Send us your name as a member in this new company, with your remittance for as many thousand shares as you can take at $5 per thousand.

This is a short-time offer on a hurry-up proposition. Our vice president is up at Rawhide now putting the miners at work. We want to raise the necessary funds for development as quickly as possible. Therefore, we offer the first block of stock at $5 a thousand shares. This subscription must be all cash. We want the money in hand. We mean to work without let-up, and we have made it an ironclad rule not to run in debt. Cash counts now.

Our prospectuses are out. Send for one.

Make reservation of stock, if you do no more. But remember, this present offer of stock—Half a Cent a Share—is now open and will be closed as soon as enough cash subscriptions are in hand. Don't wait, or you will get left.

The gold mining property owned outright by the company consists of 7 claims, 5 in the Rawhide district of Nevada, and 2 in the Dulzura district of Southern California.

The Rawhide district to-day is more famous than Goldfield, Tonopah, Bullfrog, or Searchlight were at the same stage of exploitation and development. The Dulzura discovery is one of the most sensational in the history of California.

Ten samples of ore which were among the first assayed, run as high as $7,461.87 to the ton, and all ten averaged over $1,600 a ton.

In both camps we located early, and our locations are choice. Our own officers will superintend the mining.

Are Trained by Germans

There is good reason for believing that Germany is primarily responsible the crisis in the Balkan States. The immediate cause of dispute between Turkey and Bulgaria concerned the control of the Orient Railway. Now this railway is directed from Vienna and is largely the creation of German capital. Therefore the attitude of Bulgaria in the matter of the railway was dictated by the Austrian and German owners and directors. Germany and Bulgaria have identical interests in the Orient, and Turkey's interests are opposed to them. It is equally known that before the Young Turk movement the European power that was most influential at Constantinople was Germany. When the bloodless revolution occurred German influence vanished, because the reformers knew that they had nothing to hope from Berlin. On the other hand, Great Britain, as a known friend of freedom, was regarded as a well-wisher, and the British Government's message to the Grand Vizier provoked a remarkable outburst of Turkish enthusiasm. It need not be assumed that Great Britain and Germany chose their sides in the quarrel through distrust of each other, though it happens that they could find them opposed and their interests conflict.

TO DISCREDIT REFORM.

The generally accepted British theory of Germany's motives in the Balkan matter is that the statesmen at Berlin have stirred Bulgaria up to break away and thus help discredit the Young Turkish party. The Sultan may say to his people, "You see what happens when I am not at the helm. Here we have lost a great province through the bungling of these foolish young Turks." It is assumed that Germany wants the old regime restored for the simple reason that then her own influence will be regained at Constantinople. So far it has happened that her wishes and the desires of Bulgaria have coincided. When they cease to do so we need not expect Germany to move as a mere tool for the plotters at Berlin. The Bulgarians are a remarkable progressive and independent people. In the past twenty years they have made more material progress than any race on earth, with the possible exception of the Japanese. A writer in the London Daily Express calls the Bulgarians the Americans of the Balkans. But neither the United States nor Canada can show such improvement in two decades as Bulgaria. It is a remarkable fact that all the while they have been subjects of the Sultan, and known nothing of real political freedom as is a commonplace with Anglo-Saxons.

THE BALKAN YANKEES.

In the early eighties, Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, was a collection of mean buildings and filthy streets. Now it is a modern city, with beautiful parks, fine buildings and a population of nearly a hundred thousand people. In the same period the foreign trade of Bulgaria has increased more than 1,200 per cent., the exports including grains, attar of roses, silk and tobacco. There is a Public Elementary school in every village, and a Secondary school in every town of ten thousand inhabitants. Sofia, and the other cities possess excellently equipped hospitals, and the State savings bank receives $40,000 in deposits every month. Credit must be given to Germany for much of Bulgaria's material progress in the past quarter of a century. The Orient Railway is an illustration of the influx of German capital. The whole land has been vitalized by a flow of German money, which has been pushing in when the capitalists of other lands hesitated to make investments in a country that was the very storm centre of the political universe.

THE SERVIANS ARE JEALOUS

So often have the Bulgarians been favorably contrasted with their Servian neighbors that it is not surprising to find the latter ranged on the opposite side in the present crisis. It is said that the Servians are talkers and loungers, the Bulgarians doers and workers. Bulgaria's dream is of a Slav empire that will include Macedonia, but Servia, which was for hundreds of years the greatest of Slav countries, naturally opposes the ambitions of its more thrifty neighbors. between a greater Bulgaria and a hungrier Austria, Servia can plainly foresee her fate, and although the Serbs, like the Greeks, and the Bulgarians, hate the Turks, they hate the Bulgarians more, and Servia would rather fight Bulgaria than Turkey. Her hostility to Austria, is, of course, notorious at the present juncture, when the Servians are demanding that war shall be declared upon the devourer of nations. All these international hates and jealousies are the cards of Abdul of Turkey has so skilfully handled for twenty years past to the end that the determination of the great powers to reform Macedonia has accomplished nothing. The unfortunate Macedonians remains crushed, looking wistfully to the Young Turks for pity.

A FORMIDABLE ARMY.

While their thrift and progress is conceded, the Bulgarians are not finding objects of sympathy. They are bloodthirsty and treacherous in the extreme, and neither better nor worse in this respect than the Servians. They are likely to prove dangerous fighters. They have an army of 350,000 men serving with the colors, and as they have adopted the German military system it can be taken for granted that the men are thoroughly trained and well disciplined. There is unanimity among foreign critics as to the efficiency of Bulgaria's army, and it would prove no mean foe for that of Turkey. The Turks far outnumber the Bulgarians, and equal or surpass them in courage, but in general efficiency there is no comparison between the two countries.

THE POWERS AND GREECE.

Greece had counted on the sympathy, if not the overt support of the powers, but found that her calculations were at fault. The powers did indeed intervene, but for the purpose of peacefully blockading Crete and persuading the Greeks to go home. They took the view that Crete should be autonomous, but they objected to Greek annexation. Greece insisted upon a fight, and so the powers stood aside. Then Turkey drove Greece out, and inflicted other damage upon her. At the end of the war the powers stepped in and the Sultan was obliged to agree to a Cretan constitution that gave the little island more liberty than she had enjoyed for centuries. Crete was permitted to elect a High Commissioner and a National Assembly. Prince George, son of the King of Greece, was chosen Commissioner, and ever since Greek influence has been supreme, although Greece officially denies that she was aware of the contemplated action of the island in leaving the Turkish household. The chief importance of Crete, from a military point of view, is her harbor in the Bay of Suda, which is one of the best in the Levant. In extent the island is 250 miles long, and from 6 to 35 miles wide.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Trade beautiful. Factories are becoming closed or curtailed in their operations. To the extent that we pay out money to the country for work should be done here we are taking to employ workmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than it took in. If it had no one under a protective government. Those millions which have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our people instead of idleness and want, and what is more, the money would have remained in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have borrowed to build railroads which serve to make the big moneyed men, the stock gamblers and the speculators rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the doors in the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and kidnapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the victims of a system which is displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to sink into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If the people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money in the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lenders of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in their own country and so they can invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain industrial over-expansion, the machinations of workgamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rent, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the abject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance.

I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a creeping poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—little by little though—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Here for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's label—and none in the medicine, else it must be so be on the label. And it's not only safe, but is said to be by those that know it best, a truly reliable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Legs Stuck Out

Mrs Hicks was telling some ladies about the burglar scene in her house the night before.

"Yes," she said, "I heard a noise and got up, and there from under the bed, I saw a man's legs sticking out."

"Mercy!" exclaimed a woman. "The burglar's legs?"

"No, my dear; my husband's legs. He heard the noise, too."

The steamship Innishowen Head, which was aground near Quebec, has been floated.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantage that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Beaufort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of south Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to travel to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Havelock, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents convenience to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and acquiring their perpetual maintenance, by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Monument bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Clarence's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by line residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactories, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the same furnace up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave, Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as in the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be requited of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I can given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, to the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with this Government, and in the world offices and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representatives and Government have contributed an important share.

He gives promises to the most prominent and most wide in beneficial sources of administrative function, the work of Great Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 21 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 142 miles completed, embracing in this distance seven to a thousand tonnage of steam boat, and there are 22 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years o Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,250,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,708, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lakes and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $50,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and insidedly of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 220 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If my favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

Ohio Woman Shot on Eve of Wedding

Wadsworth, Ohio, Oct. 12.—The police are endeavoring to unravel the mystery of the murder of Ora Lee, twenty-one years old, a factory girl, whose body, pierced by two bullets, was found early today on the road between Wadsworth and the hamlet of Custard Hook.

Guy Razor, the man whom Miss Lee was to have married to-morrow, is detained by the sheriff, pending developments. He denies all knowledge of the tragedy and says he can prove an alibi. Farmers who went to the scene after the body was found met Razor on the road, walking toward Wadsworth.

The police theory is that Miss Lee was killed while riding in a buggy with a man. Along the road where the murder was committed are plainly seen the tracks of a horse with one shoe missing. An examination of the stables at the Razor home discloses that one of Razor's horses has a shoe missing from a front foot. Miss Lee left Wadsworth last night ostensibly to prepare for her wedding.

Beyond a Question

Four year old Harry was spending the day with his aunt. Dinner was late and the child began to grow restless. "Auntie", he said finally, "does God know everything?"

"Yes, dear," answered his aunt.

"Every little thing?" he persisted.

"Yes; every little thing," was the reply.

"Well, then," he said in a tone of conviction, "God knows I'm hungry."

General in Russian Army Shot in Leg

(Special to The Times.)

Askabad, Turkestan, Oct. 12.—General Mistchenko, Governor-General of Turkestan, the well known Russian cavalry leader in the war with Japan, was wounded in the manoeuvres of the Turkestan army corps near here to-day. A revolutionist plot is suspected. The general, with his staff, was watching the operations, when he was struck by a bullet in the leg above the knee, but the ball did not touch the bone. An adjutant of Mistchenko was slightly wounded.

The manoeuvres were suspended and the weapons and ammunition of the troops examined. Ball cartridges and traces of bullets in the barrels of a number of rifles were found.

Election in Persia

Teheran, Sept. 13.—By order of the Shah, parliamentary elections will be held in Persia on Monday, to elect members of the new parliament, which will be convoked November 14. The new Persian electoral system has been patterned after the Russian and provides for representation by classes. Half of the members are to be appointed by the Shah, so the ruler is certain of maintaining his hold on the new parliament and forcing the members to do his bidding.

Hadn't Experimented

Publican—And how do you like being married, John?

John—Don't like it at all, sir.

Publican—Why, what's the matter with you, John?

John—Well, first thing in the morning it's money; when I goes home to my dinner it's money again, and at supper time it's the same. Nothing but money, money, money!

Publican—Well, I never! What do she do wi' all that money?

John—I dunno. I ain't give her any yet.

News Nuggets

New York, Oct. 13.—A prediction, made by Congressman James A. Tawney, before the Fire Underwriters' Association of the Northwest at a meeting in Chicago, that the Panama Canal would be completed in six years at a total cost of $356,000,000, was shown yesterday to Colonel Goethals, chief engineer of the work, who is attending the hearing in the Army Building. "That's true," said the colonel. "I expect the canal to be open to navigation by January 1, 1915, unless some unforseen contingency arises, the cost to be what the Congressman has named." Mr. Tawney pointed out that the sum necessary to complete the greatest engineering feat of modern times would prove to be less than the annual appropriation for the army and navy.

THEIR OWN DENTISTS.

With the arrival of the Panama liner Alliance it was learned yesterday that the Isthmian Canal Commission would have two dentists to care for the teeth of its employes. O. N. Reubens, who arrived on the Alliance, said he and another dentist had been appointed and would have quarters at Gorgona and Culebra.

Two dentists who practised in the canal zone were not under the jurisdiction of the commission and were able to charge whatever they chose. The new men will have to regulate their prices according to a scale fixed by the Isthmian Canal Commission. Mr. Reubens will purchase dental supplies in this city and return to the Isthmus within a few weeks.

VValetta, Island of Malta, Oct. 9—A British fleet will leave here this evening for the Aegean sea. Its actual destination is believed to be the Turkish island of Lemnos. The sailing orders are sealed.

The fleet will consist of four battleships, four cruisers, and four torpedo boat destroyers, and it will be under the command of Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenburg.

—Miss Vera YY.

Lemnos is an island of the Grecian archipelago, about 60 miles west of the entrance to the Dardanelles. It belongs to Turkey. The population mainly is Greek.

AT TURKEY'S REQUEST.

London, Oct. 9.—The foreign office and the Admiralty have confirmed the press sublegram from Malta saying that British warships have been ordered to the Aegean sea.

It is explained that these vessels are sent out simply to watch events, but it is understood from other sources that Turkey intimated she would welcome the appearance of the British fleet as likely to calm the population and put an end to the agitation of the empire.

MILITIA TAKES OATH.

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 8.—The members of the new government took the oath of loyalty to George yesterday, as did also the officers of the gendarmerie and the militia.

The consular body protested in principle against the declaration of union, but will confine itself to submitting the matter to the four protesting powers, Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy.

Crete's withdrawal from Turkey's suzerainty is the latest development in the Balkan situation, for though Crete is not in the Balkans herself, being an island in the Mediterranean, she accepts impetus that have their origin in that turbulent land. It would appear from this distance that in the case of Crete Turkey could afford to take no action, beyond calling the attention of Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy to the extraordinary move on the part of the rebellious little island. Crete is an autonomous province under Turkish authority, but since 1898 the Ministers at Rome of Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy have directed her foreign affairs, and have been responsible for her foreign policy. In the language of the street, it is "up to" them to deal with Crete. Turkey's correct attitude would seem to be one of grieved passivity.

AN ISLE OF MYTHOLOGY.

How Crete came to be a Turkish province is a story that began some hundreds of years ago. It has been Crete's fate to always belong to some powerful neighbor. The island's earlier history is lost in mythology. Probably the Kafto of the Egyptian inscriptions and the Caphtor of the Old Testament are identical with the Crete, or Candia, of to-day and with the kingdom over which Minos, the son of Zeus, resigned. In Homer's time the island was famed for its fertility, and was thoroughly settled by Greeks, who had succeeded the Phoenicians and Egyptians, who were its first historical tenants. Because of its friendship with the Sicilian pirates Crete got into trouble with Rome, and was captured in 68 B. C. after two years' stubborn resistance. When the Roman Empire was dismantled Crete was thrown in as a make-weight for the Byzantines, who held it until 824. Then a swarm of Arabs fresh from conquests in Andalusia settled down on it, and held it for a hundred and forty years.

WHEN TURKEY CAME.

They were driven out, and the island remastered by the Byzantines. They held on until the Latin Empire of the East was established, when Crete was given by Boniface of Montferrat, Boniface sold out to the Venetians. In 1669 the Turks, after a siege of 21 years, captured the fortress of Candia, and proceeded to conquer the land. By 1715 the last vestiges of Venetian occupation had been removed, and Crete settled down to the existence common to Christian communities under the Sultan's yoke. A mere statement of the racial divisions of the population tells the whole story. By the Cretan census of 1900 there were 297,000 Greeks out of a population of 312,000, the entire balance Mussulmans and Jews. The Christian percentage, nevertheless, was 20 to 80 less than it was even greater in the earlier years of Turkish conquest. Insurrections were frequent, especially about the middle of the nineteenth century.

In 1866-8 a prolonged and desperate uprising arose from the Sultan promises of reform. These remained unfulfilled until 1878 when, spurred on by the Treaty of Berlin, he gave Crete a charter, and appointed a Christian Governor-General. As he appointed at the same time a Moslem military governor, in whose hands remained the real authority, the Cretans felt that they had been tricked. So once more, in 1889, they rebelled, and once more was the rebellion crushed, but for five years the country was in so sullen a mood that a military occupation was necessary. Then the powers intervened, and the Sultan made more promises, also unfilled. In 1896 another rebellion broke out. This time the Greeks, who had long looked with comparison on the sad lot of their compatriots in Crete, turned in and landed troops on the island.

Another Way Out of It.

Nobody had ever had reason to accuse Abel Pond of being dishonest, but he was as sharp a man in a bargain as could be found in the county. When the building committee applied to him for a site for the new library he was ready to sell them a desirable lot, but not at their price.

"I couldn't feel to let it go under $200," he said, with the mild obstinacy that characterized all his dealings with his fellow men. "It wouldn't be right."

"You ought to be willing to contribute something for such an object," said the chairman of the committee. "If it's worth six hundred, why not let us have it for five hundred and call it your've given the other hundred?"

"H'm—no, I couldn't do that," said Mr. Pond, stroking his chin, "but I tell you what I will do. You give me seven hundred for it, and I'll make out a check for a hundred and hand it over to you, so's you can head the list of subscriptions with a good round sum and kind of wake up folks to their duty."—Youth's Companion.

A Real Apology.

"When the late Joel Chandler Harris was an editor here among us," said an Atlantan, "I called on him one day and found him very willing to correct an error about me that crept into his columns.

"We talked about newspaper contradictions, public apologies and the like, and 'Uncle Remus' took down a scrapbook and read me an apology that was an apology indeed. It had happened, he said, in a Transvaal paper. I'll never forget it. I agreed with Mr. Harris that it was the finest specimen of the public apology and retraction extant. It said:

"I, the undersigned, A. C. du Plessis, retract hereby everything I have said against the innocent Mr. G. P. Bandelhoest, calling myself an infamous liar and striking my mouth with the exclamation: 'You scandalous mouth! Why do you lie so?' I declare, further, that I know nothing against the character of Mr. G. P. Bandelhoest. I call myself, besides, a genuine liar of the first class.

"A. C. DU PLESSIS."

His Cough Cure.

"In my boyhood there came to our town," said a clergyman, "a gentle minister who, the very first Sunday of his incumbency, stopped effectually his coughing congregation.

"It was a congregation, too, singularly addicted to coughing. Rattling volleys of coughs ran over it every few minutes. The minister, indeed, that first Sunday could hardly make himself heard. He had rather a weak voice.

"Well, after his sermon had proceeded for ten or twelve minutes, now audible enough, now drowned under great waves of coughs, he took a resolution, and when the next outbreak was at its height he ceased preaching.

"At once the coughing ceased. There was a profound silence. The minister smiled.

"'My friends,' said he, 'it seems that when I stop you stop.'

"From that day in that church they coughed no more."

Penguin Battles.

The penguin, a notable diver among sea birds, wins his mate by right of conquest. The male birds fight for the possession of the females. These curious birds have regular duel grounds, where relics of innumerable combats in the shape of feathers lie scattered about. In the center is the fighting arena, clear of all debris. The penguins' feathers and blubber form an efficient shield against their opponents' beaks, so the weapon used is the short flipper, the only wings the birds possess. The fight begins with the two combatants walking round each other waiting for an opportunity to grip. Once this is done the flippers come into play. The fighters shower blow after blow upon each other. There is no record as to how these fights end, but it is a safe supposition to say that they are seldom fatal. The force of the blow from a penguin's flipper is such that three or four of them will draw blood from the human hand.

How Models Make Pictures.

"Do you grasp," he said, "the passionate grace of the girl's attitude, the warmth and the power wherewith the lover's white arms draw the young maid closer, ever closer? Well, I got that from my model, a shopgirl.

"But for my model's suggestion he'd have put the girl in a cold, cold gown, and the picture would never have been the masterpiece it is. But my model pointed out to me the absolute chasm which a girl, whether of high or low station, gives herself up to a kind caress. She illustrated the thing, and of by a male model, a young cabinet student. Yes, she made my picture.

"The fact is, models, male, will their valuable hints and suggestions, lots of pictures. There's many a masterpiece whose merit is due to the splendid pose that the model outplanned for the unthinking famous."—New [illegible]

A POUND OF FEATHERS.

It Is Really Heavier Than a Pound of Lead.

The favorite question with the school committeemen of olden time was, we are told, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of lead?" The first rash answer almost always used to be, "A pound of lead." Then, of course, from the older pupils would come the reply, "Both alike."

If this question was asked to-day the old time querist might receive a decided surprise, for the pound of feathers could easily be proved to be the heavier. A simple experiment is all the evidence needed.

With any accurate scales weigh out a pound of lead, using ordinary shot for convenience. Pour the shot into one of the pans of a balance. For the feathers a light muslin bag will be needed, and care must be taken that feathers and bag together do not weigh more than a pound. When the bag of feathers is put into the other pan of the balance the beam will, after a few oscillations, come to rest exactly level.

So far the verdict "both alike" seems to be proved. But place the balance on the receiver of an air pump, with lead and feathers undisturbed. Cover the whole with the glass bell jar and exhaust the air. Slowly the feathers sink, and the lead kicks the beam. The pound of feathers is heavier than the pound of lead.

The truth is that what we call a pound was not such in fact, for the atmosphere buoys up everything within it in proportion to the bulk of the object, and the feathers, being of greater bulk than the lead, are supported by the air to a considerably greater extent than the lead. Removed from this supporting medium, their true weight is made evident.

Charles Reade propounded a similar question in one of his novels. A Jewish trader is made to ask, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of gold?" After awhile he explains to the satisfaction of his audience of miners that the feathers are the heavier.

Gold, he explains, is weighed by troy weight, while feathers are weighed by avoirdupois, and as the twelve ounces in a pound troy contain only 5,760 grains, while the avoirdupois pound contain nearly 7,000 grains, the pound of feathers is, of course, 1,240 grains heavier than the pound of gold.

Some Costly Toys.

The presentation by President Fallieres of a costly toy railway to the Czarevitch reminds us that one of the first model railways, on anything like a large scale, was the most prized possession of the ill-fated Prince Imperial when a boy. It was constructed in the gardens of the Tuileries, and is said to have cost 50,000 francs. In the private grounds of Mr. T. H. Shriver, a wealthy resident of Denver, Colorado, is a still more remarkable miniature railway. On a circular track, 400 feet long, with a gauge of 8 3-4 inches, Mr. Shriver drives a train of eight Lilliputain carriages, carrying a dozen or more passengers. The Rev. H. L. Warneford of Windsor is the proud proprietor of "the Chicago and Jericho Railway," with its cuttings and tunnels, stations and signal-boxes; while a Manchester gentleman, Mr. P. H. S. Leigh, has (or had not long ago) in a specially-constructed room a similar railway, of 270 feet in length and 6 inch gauge, over which a £300 engine draws exquisite models of passenger and luggage trains.

Human Ostrich.

A remarkable case is under treatment at the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. In June a young postman was sentenced to nine month's imprisonment for appropriating small postal orders, and after his removal to prison he began to swallow all manner of things. First, he swallowed a portion of a blanket, then 94 iron pins, each about two inches long, a considerable number of stones, pieces of iron, and bits of a water jug which he smashed. When he told the prison officials what he had done they disbelieved him, but on being taken to the infirmary the various articles were located by the X-rays. A consultation was held by the doctors, but it was deemed advisable not to perform an operation. The patient is still confined to bed, though apparently quite well and normal in every respect, notwithstanding his extraordinary experience. In the infirmary he is known as the human ostrich.

Edison as Humorist.

The great American inventor, T. A. Edison, who is at work perfecting a motor powerful but small enough to bring the aeroplane within a measurable distance of success, is partly deaf in his right ear. In one way this an advantage, as it enables him to pursue his work undisturbed while surrounded by all the noise of a busy shop. When offered an infallible cure for his deafness, he once remarked, "Why should I try it? Think of the lot of stuff I'd have to listen to that I don't want to hear!" On another occasion a would-be wit said, in ordinary tones, "I guess he'd hear if I asked him to have a drink." The inventor looked the young man who spoke squarely in the eye. "Yes, perhaps I should," he said; "but no, not to-day, thank you!"

His Deep Concern.

The kind old lady noticed a small lad entering a cobbler's with a small package.

"What have you there, sonny?" she asked kindly.

"Ma's slipper," replied the lad. "You see, there is a tack out of place in it, and I want to have it fixed before ma notices it."

"Ah, what a considerate little boy! I suppose you are afraid the tack might hurt your mother's foot?"

"Well, it isn't exactly that. You see, the tack is sticking out on the sole, and this is the slipper ma spanks me with."

Paulton's Prisoner.

By W. F. Bryan.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Absurd as it may seem, Edith Mortimer had run away from happiness.

Realising that Guy Paulton was determined to marry her, she had looked into the commanding eyes and surveyed the determined chin and had fled in a panic to the mountains after artfully announcing that she was bound for the shore.

This was not because she did not want to marry Paulton. To the contrary, the prospect thrilled her with tender delight, but what she did want was another social season without ties of any sort. She did not want to retire to the ranks of engaged girls and wallflowers after only one year's triumph as the belle of the season.

Guy, on the contrary, seemed determined to be married at once, and as a last resort she had fled to escape his proposal. From babyhood Guy had had a masterful way, and Edith knew that if she stopped to argue she was lost.

Her old chum, Belle Manton, who was going to Beach Haven, forwarded Edith's mail and otherwise helped to maintain the polite but obvious fiction.

Loyally she strove to protect her friend's secret, and, though Paulton alternately begged and threatened, he could gain no hint of Edith's whereabouts. Edith smiled at the desperate letters he wrote, but she carefully saved them in her little rosewood traveling desk, and could Paulton have seen the tender light in her eyes as she reread them in the quiet of the summer nights he would have been content. The trouble was that Paulton could not see, and he was putting in a most uncomfortable summer.

Oddly enough, Edith was really enjoying her runaway vacation. She had stumbled on a quaint village far from the haunts of fashion. In simple gowns and with her hair in braids she rejoiced at the freedom from dress and social routine that had been her portion all winter. In her gingham sunbonnet she might have passed for the daughter of a farmer, and for the moment Guy Paulton took her to be such when he came upon her in the little woodland where Edith spent most of her time. Her back was turned to him as he parted the bushes and tramped down the ferns.

Edith started at the sound of his voice, but promptly drew the all concealing bonnet down in front and managed to stammer an answer to his question if she had seen any soldiers about.

For the first time she noticed that he was in uniform, and she immediately realised that the rough service dress was most becoming. Paulton was built in heroic mold, and, though he looked well in the conventional dress of a man of fashion, the heavy blue shirt, open to display his fine throat, and tight fitting riding trousers emphasized the good lines of his powerfully muscled figure.

Edith shook her head.

"You are certain that there have been no soldiers about," he asked again, "no chaps in brown uniform?"

"Haven't seen any," denied Edith in nasal tones. "You're the first soldier I've seen since the county fair. Is it a parade?"

"It's a game of war," explained Paulton. "They divided the militia into two armies. The browns must beat the blues to win, and of course we blues are anxious to see that they don't, I am supposed to be scouting."

"Like real soldiers?" she asked innocently.

"Of course," was the impatient reply. "That is the whole idea, to train us like the regulars."

Edith giggled in a very good imitation of Dolly Spence, the village flirt.

"I didn't know that real soldiers stopped to talk to girls when there was a war on," she suggested as she raised her hand to the bonnet the better to adjust its shade.

The movement was fatal to concealment. Paulton noticed that her hand was unusually white for a girl who worked about the farm, and the next instant he recognised the slight filigree band that circled one of the slender fingers. It had been his mother's, and how often he had suggested to Edith to wear it!

"We are like regular soldiers also because we are not above a pleasant little flirtation," declared Paulton smilingly. "I believe that a regular soldier would kiss such a pretty face as yours!"

"How do you know that it is pretty?" demanded Edith from the security of the sunbonnet's shade. It hurt her to think that Guy would flirt with any girl he met, but she was determined to carry the game as far as she dared.

"I'll take the face on trust," announced Paulton calmly. "All's fair in love and war, they say, so your face must be fair, since this is mimic war."

"Maybe it's only make believe fair, since this is make believe war," suggested Edith coquettishly.

"To the contrary, this is very real war," declared Paulton, "and I am obliged to place you under arrest."

"What for?" demanded Edith, not without some alarm. "You cannot draw country folks into your games."

"You are wrong," retorted Paulton. "It is the soldier's duty to take into custody those enemies of his country whose sentiments threaten the success of a campaign."

"But I am not your enemy," protested Edith. "I won't be taken prisoner."

"Perhaps," assented Paulton, "but a stern duty confronts me. I must take you a prisoner and hale you before a court martial unless"—

He paused tantalizingly.

"Unless?" She told herself that if he demanded a kiss as the price of her freedom she would never believe in men again.

"There is but one way out of it," continued Paulton. "Prove your loyalty to your country by marrying one of its protectors. There is a parson just beyond here. I passed a church not very long ago. We will slip over there and get married, and then I shall be certain that you are not an enemy to the country."

"And if I refuse?" asked Edith loftily, in her anger dropping her vocal disguise.

"In that case," answered Paulton, "I am afraid that you will be thrown into the guardhouse until you change your mind."

"I shall report you to the colonel," cried Edith angrily. "He will not tolerate such conduct."

"I am quite certain that the colonel will approve my conduct," said Guy placidly. "Coming up on the train he told me that I ought to marry, and I assured him that, through no fault of mine, bachelorhood was my lot. I am sure that he will be pleased at the promptness with which I have acted upon his suggestion when I bring my bride into camp."

"I won't be your bride!" stormed Edith. "You are rude and ungentlemanly to take unfair advantage of a woman."

"All's fair in love and war," reminded Paulton, "and this is both love and war. I am doing the loving and you have been doing the warring. Do you think it was fair to run away as you did and never give me a hint of your address?"

"You know me?" gasped Edith.

"Most assuredly," declared Paulton. "I was not positive until I saw that you were wearing the little ring I gave you and which you never would wear in town. Then I knew that perhaps there was a chance. Will you marry me, Edith?"

"Not now," protested Edith in sudden panic. "Guy, don't make me marry you right away. You have your scouting to do, and—I never did like the minister of that little church," she added inconsequentially. "Dr. Miron is much nicer."

"May I come back when this cruel war is over—next week?" asked Guy tenderly. "Then I'll ask Dr. Miron to marry us, and we'll have our friends up to see the prisoner of war marry her captor, just as they do in historical novels."

"I think that I'll just have to marry you," assented Edith. "You are such a persistent torment."

"All's fair"— Paulton began his favorite quotation, but the rest was lost in the pasteboard tunnel of the sunbonnet as he claimed a kiss.

The Larynx.

The larynx has been compared to a wind, a reed and a stringed instrument. The comparison of it to a violin gave rise to the not very accurate phrase "vocal chords" as the name of the two cushions which are its most prominent features. But no string so short as those vocal chords could produce a musical bass note. In fact, the comparison of the larynx to any instrument which produces only musical tones is inadequate to begin with. There is no instrument but the larynx which produces both song and speech, and as those comparisons view the larynx merely as a producer of musical sounds we have no further concern with them at present. Besides, the voice can be trained for speech, elocution and oratory without a knowledge of the physiology of the larynx.

We have the power of adjusting the larnyx, of varying the tension of its cords, cushions or ligaments, as they have been variously called. We can do these things without scientific technical knowledge of how they are done, without any knowledge at all of vocal physiology, and it is the work of the trainer of the voice to teach the pupils how to do them.—Chambers' Journal.

The Reward of Beauty.

"What a beautiful little girl!" said the woman.

"Yes," replied the man, "and some day it may be necessary for her father to pay millions in order to get some scrawny little foreigner with bowlegs and watery eyes and a receding chin to marry her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PICKPOCKETS OF EUROPE.

Make a Great Deal of Trouble For Unsuspecting Travelers.

"The American who travels in Europe and does not keep the closest watch on his valuables is almost sure to be relieved of his personal belongings by pickpockets," said a man who has just finished a two year tour of the world.

"The light fingered gentry are active everywhere from London to Cairo, but I will give the palm for boldness and dexterity to the professionals of Italy, where the plunder of pockets has been reduced to a fine art. I am a careful man and did not need to read the constant warnings against pickpockets, and yet in the great plaza of Venice I was robbed of my letter of credit for $10,000. There was an enormous crowd that had turned out to hear the band play, the day being Sunday, and I was jostled two or three times by a huge fellow with a big black mustache. Finally, seeing that he was doing it purposely, I lost my temper and addressed a hot remark to him, at which he exclaimed, 'Pardon, monsieur,' dropped his umbrella at my feet and in stooping to get it managed in some way to get my letter of credit, although it was in an inside pocket. It caused me a lot of trouble, the sending of many cablegrams and some money, but I managed to have the payment stopped, and the thief profited nothing.

"In Rome on last Christmas day I went out for a ride in the suburbs to see some rare paintings in an old church. Wishing to see the country, I took a street car that was densely packed. The air was pretty crisp, and I wore an overcoat closely buttoned. How on earth the rascal managed to get to my watch and make away with it will puzzle me to my life's end, but he did the trick, as I found on getting off the car.

"Had it been only an ordinary timepiece I would never have said a word of the loss, but it was an unusually fine one, and I valued it much more than the $300 it cost me."

THE BEETLE HUNTER.

He Gets the Cockroaches Drunk and Then Carries Them Off.

The trade of the rat-catcher is sometimes a lucrative one, but that of the cockroach-catcher or "beetler," as he styles himself, is said to be still more lucrative, if somewhat limited.

For the modest sum of half a crown the beetler will undertake to clear the most infested kitchen of cockroaches in an hour or two. All he requires is that the kitchen be given up to him entirely for a couple of hours after dark, and when he leaves he guarantees that not a beetle shall remain.

His method is a simple one. He mixes a certain potent drug dear to the palate of the cockroach, and adds a pint of rum to the mixture; then he pours the decoction into shallow basins and deposits them in the dark corners of the room. He retires and waits for ten minutes, and when he revisits the basins he invariably finds them full of struggling beetles in an advanced state of intoxication. The strong smell of the rum, combined with their favorite drug, penetrates to the uttermost corners of the flooring and entices the erring vermin to their undoing. They feast on the drugged spirits till they are unable to walk straight, and at intervals of ten minutes the catchers clears the drunkards away and waits for the next batch. Not a cockroach will remain at the end of an hour.

The catcher takes the beetles away in a sack, and when they have slept off the effects of their debauch he sells them at a penny a hundred to bird-shops, where the songsters thrive on beetles as long as they last.

A Versatile Old Lady.

The attention of the class in history seemed to be anywhere but on the subject in hand, and the young teacher was getting impatient.

"Children," she said, "you must pay better attention to what you are doing. You cannot possibly do two things at the same time. No one can do two things at once."

At this point a small boy raised his hand and waved it frantically in the air.

"Well, Willie, what is it?" she inquired.

"Please, teacher," said Willie, "my granny kin do two things ter one't. I seen her."

"No, Willie. I think you must be mistaken, but suppose you tell us what these two things are."

"Please, ma'am, she kin read an' soak her feet all ter one't."

Curious School Customs.

Mexican schoolmasters show their appreciation of a pupil's efforts in a curious manner. The diligent student is allowed to smoke a cigar during the lesson. When the whole class has given satisfaction, permission is given for a general smoke, and even the little Mexicans are allowed to light a cigarette for the occasion. Needless to say, the schoolmaster himself smokes a cigar of a size and quality proportionate to his superior position. But the scholars are not allowed to drink, this privilege being accorded to the master only. On his desk he always keeps a bottle of liquor, which, when empty, occasions much dispute among the parents of his scholars, as it is considered an honor to be able to fill the schoolmaster's bottle.

The Carnivorous Ants.

The subject of vegetarianism had occupied a great deal of attention in the family. One day the five-year-old was out walking with his elder sister, and he meddled somewhat too freely with the affairs of a large colony of ants. He deserted them rather suddenly and came back to his sister's side, rubbing his bare legs vigorously.

"What's the matter?" asked sister.

"Oh, nothing, only them ants ain't vegetarians," was the sententious reply of the youngster.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases, if we would properly investigate them; and in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action. The reason why it cures these and many other affections, is clearly shown in a little book of extracts from the standard medical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of unsolicited testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal, pelvic or uterine inflammation, painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements caused by weakness, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from the glyceric extracts of native, medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle-wrapper.

Mattress Factory Fire

The fire brigade had a run to Ashburnham at 11.28 yesterday morning, when an alarm was sent in from box 24. A blaze had broken out in the picking machine shop of the Peterborough Mattress Company, just east of the Brealey street bridge. The brigade made a speedy run to the spot and despite the fact that a section of the hose split, had the fire extinguished in a few moments. Little or no damage was done to the building or contents, so there will be no loss. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

Mass Meetings

At the opera house on Sunday there will be two mass meetings in the interests of temperance reform. The City Templars and Moral Reform League are taking advantage of a number of Toronto clergymen being in the city, and have secured their services. In the afternoon at 4.15 the first meeting will be held. Addresses will be given by Mrs. Hitchcocks, Rev. Mr. Lynen and Rev D. H. Spence. In the evening at 8.30, Rev. Mr. Spence will give an address which will be illustrated by stereoptican views, under the direction of Mr Dyer.

Chicago Is the Better Team

Mr. Fred Davidson, city, has returned from Detroit, where on Saturday he saw the first game in the World's Championship series between the Detroit Tigers and the Chicago Cubs, won by the latter by a score of 10 runs to 6. The game was a good exhibition, exciting all the way, and the Cubs, according to Mr Davidson, are the better team, playing inside ball all the way, while the Detroit infield seemed erratic. Detroit is baseball crazy, but the crowd at the game was not as large as the reports would indicate. Then newspapers kept many away by enlarging on the crowds, with the result that many fans remained at home believing they would be unable to get in.

New Bridge Has Been Opened

The splendid bridge which has just been thrown open to the public at Buckhorn is complete and modern in every detail according to a local man who recently saw it. Not only has it every appearance of strength, but its lines have been artistically proportioned and the whole design is one of beauty. Inspectors are now reported to be examining it, and so far have found it practically perfect even in detail. The contract was carried out by Mr. D. Conroy & Sons, who are said to have executed the work well. Not only is the bridge itself a splendid work, but the approaches are long and add to the appearance of the whole structure. The old wooden bridge is being torn down and also the coffer dam that was raised temporarily while the work on the new bridge was being done.

Weary, Worn Out Tired

If You Feel Poorly this Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys fail to work properly, health surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton, of Lewistown. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depression, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned off the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvelous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

The most powerful healer in the world is Zam-Buk, and we offer you a free trial box. Zam-Buk combines the knowledge of the ancients with the science of the moderns. The charioteers, gladiators, and wrestlers of ancient Greece seldom emerged from their contests without some gaping wound or severe bruise, and to anoint their injuries with secret balms was part of the day's program. In Zam-Buk you have the modern representative of these ancient healers. Ordinary ointments contain mostly rancid animal fat or poisonous mineral substances. Leave the lid off these ointments for a few days and note the result. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is absolutely free from any trace of animal fat or mineral poison. It is made from purely herbal essences, is so concentrated and purified that it is suitable for the delicate skin of children, and yet so powerful as to be equal to the most stubborn sore, ulcer, or chronic wound. Zam-Buk never goes rancid. It always keeps clean, fresh, and sweet.

Nature has given man the instinct to rub a place that hurts. She has also given him Zam-Buk, Nature's own herbal healer, with which to rub.

Apply Zam-Buk to a sore, a cut, a scratch, a poisoned wound, a patch of eczema, and at once the healing process begins. It prevents suppuration, blood poisoning, etc. It draws out inflammation, ends pain and smarting, and heals. The best test is a personal test. Send in for a free box and let Zam-Buk prove its own case. See coupon below.

ZAM-BUK

THE GREAT SKIN-CURE.

POISONED WOUND

COMPLETELY HEALED!

MR. WILLIAM MUMFORD of 12 Louise Street, Stratford, writes: "While walking about in sock feet I trod on a rusty nail, which penetrated the flesh deeply, leaving an ugly wound. I bathed this well and applied a lotion, but next morning my foot was in a shocking condition, very much inflamed and swollen, and I suffered acute pain. I had to lay off work, as I could not bear to put my foot on the ground. I feared blood-poisoning. For six days I suffered intense pain. Just at this time a friend brought me some Zam-Buk, and after using it a few days my foot was wonderfully improved. I persevered with Zam-Buk, and it soon worked a complete cure. It is a wonderful balm."

Zam-Buk heals sores, eczema, skin eruptions, ulcers, ringworm, itch, barber's rash, blood poison, bad leg, salt rheum, abrasions, abscesses, cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries and diseases. Of all stores and druggists, 50c box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

TRENTON MAN MURDERED IN CHICAGO

(Special to The Times.)

Chicago, Oct. 13.—The body of a young man, apparently murdered and thrown into the drainage canal, was found floating at Lemont, Ills., yesterday by the police.

A Chicago bank deposit book, and a memorandum book, both bearing the name of Cornelius Brussels, Trenton, Canada, were found in the pockets.

The man was apparently 23 years of age.

A fracture of the skull evidently caused death.

The body apparently had been in the water a week, and the police believe the man was murdered in Chicago, and the body floated down the canal.

New Way to Sell Tickets

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Sales of baseball tickets for future world's series games direct from the National Commission to the public probably will be the outcome of the method of selling tickets to the contest now being waged.

Letters and disgruntled baseballists poured into the newspaper offices yesterday, all with the same tale of being unable to buy reserved seat tickets from the club box office, but of being offered the coveted pasteboards at a premium from scalpers before the public sale began. The result has been an estimated loss in attendance of 15,000, the games played in Chicago, and an estimated loss in receipts of $25,000, the bulk of which would have gone to the players.

Many of the protests from fans went direct to the three members of the National Commission, Garey Herrmann, Ban Johnson, and Harry Pulliam. Then when a person high in authority and familiar with every detail of the arrangements reported to the commission that the count of tickets and receipts from Sunday's games had been delayed nearly an hour, until 885 reserved seat coupons, which had been "on sale," could be gathered together, returned and credit given to the local club, the members of the commission decided was to blame, and the only way to prevent a repetition of suspicions and charges of unfairness would be to undertake the stupendous task themselves, perhaps with the assistance of the contending clubs' corps of ticket-takers, but with all responsibility resting with the commission.

New Rich Vein at Otesse Mine

Toronto, Oct. 13.—Mr. W. Chapman, representing the E. D. Wilson Co., has just returned from the Otesse mine at Silver Lake, on the Montreal River, where a new rich vein of native silver has just been discovered. He brought with him large slabs of the silver which the indications are will run 20,000 ounces to the ton. A press representative this morning viewed some of these slabs at Warren Company's office in the Traders Bank Building.

The lot of ore is pronounced the best that has yet come from the Montreal River district.

The Otisse property now has 20 well-defined veins, 10 of which show very strongly in native silver. While Mr. Chapman was there a shot was put in at another point of the property hitherto not prospected, and a rich find of pure argentite was discovered, carrying eighty per cent. of silver. Mr. Chapman reports that the Otisse property presents a scene of great activity. The managing director, Frank Loring, is now on the property, and will remain there some time. Mining Superintendent Longley has a large force of men at work shipping veins and erecting houses for the men. As soon as these are built the number of employes will be increased as rapidly as possible. Sinking will be commenced this week on three veins.

Obituary

JAMES WEIR.

Miss Weir of the Collegiate Institute staff, received the sad news last night of the death of her father, James Weir, who passed away at his home in Forest yesterday. He was 85 years old. Miss Weir, who will have the sincere sympathy of a host of friends here, left this morning on the early train to attend the funeral.

MICHAEL DUNN.

Michael Dunn, aged 71 years of age, died at the House of Providence early last night. The deceased has been an inmate of that institution for a number of years, and during that time has been suffering from consumption. He was able to be around until yesterday afternoon, when he had a bad spell and went to bed. He sank rapidly until he passed away.

The funeral will be held on Thursday and interment will take place in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

SULLIVAN—HICKEY.

A pretty wedding was celebrated yesterday morning at St. Martin's church, Ennismore, when Miss Gertrude Hickey, daughter of Mr. Martin Hickey, was united in marriage to Mr. Leo Sullivan, son of the late Mr. Andrew Sullivan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, and was witnessed by many relatives and friends. Miss Josephine Hennessey assisted the bride and Mr. Cadogan was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan are both of Emily, where they are well known and have a host of friends.

Will Play in Senior Series Saturday

There is a senior series in the O.R.F.U., despite the failure of Kingston to remain in the running.

On Saturday at Rosedale Peterborough will meet T.A.A.C. in the first of their series of games for the senior championship, and on the following Saturday T.A.A.C. will play the Quaker City in Peterborough.

Dr A. W. McPherson is the man behind the gun in Peterborough, and the ex-Varsity star half claims that he will put a strong team in the field.

The local club will take no chances as they must win O.R.F.U. honors before they can challenge for the Dominion championship, and they will do their utmost to down the Quakers. McLennan and Robertson, two stars of a couple of years ago, will turn out this week, and in addition, it is hoped to have DeGruchy back in the game on Saturday.—Mail and Empire.

RUGBY

The prodigals have returned. Peterborough are back in the O.R.F.U., and the great football organization has a senior series. What is Peterborough looking for? Another chance probably to draw a big guarantee from a Canadian championship game. But alas! things are changed. Peterborough may beat T.A.C., and get a chance to challenge, perhaps. But Montrealers lost money on them last year, and Hamilton won't pay them anything like what they got in the east to put on a burlesque performance on the cricket grounds. They don't bank for burlesque in Tigerville. They like real tragedy.—Toronto Telegram.

There is a movement on foot in the west end of the town to organize a track team. Those interested and who are trying to bring this about, are mostly of men who are very enthusiastic about the matter. A meeting on all in sports, both young and old in the west end is called to Saturday afternoon at Boswell's Hill. No doubt the affair will be a success as Peterborough possesses a fine lot of sprinters.

Athletic Club Organized Last Night

A meeting was held Monday night in the parlors of the Park street Baptist church, for the purpose of organizing an athletic club. A large number of young men responded, and the outlook is very bright for the future of the club. A number of fine athletes having signified their intention of casting in their lot with the new enterprise. The chair was taken by Rev. W. C. Riddiford, who explained to the boys the purpose of the organization. After some discussion the name of the club was decided upon and is called the South City Amateur Athletic Association. The fees for the present will be 25 cents to join and 10 cents per month, and every young man who wishes may join. It is the intention of the trustees of the Park street Baptist church to give over the old church building to the young men for athletic pursuits just as soon as it is vacated. At present the club will meet every Tuesday and Friday evenings from 7.30 to 10 o'clock. The colors of the club will be blue and white.

The following patrons and officers were chosen;

Patrons—Mayor Rush, J. R. Stratton, Messrs V. Eastwood and W. E. Wasson.

Hon. Pres.—Rev. W. C. Riddiford.
President—Stanley Gillespie.
Vice-Pres.—Chas. Burris.
Sec.-Treas.—Herbert Reid.
Manager—Mr. A. Oliver.

All are invited to unite with the club, and all will find a welcome for reception of ten, color or creed. This club is not for a clique or a class, but for the mass.

Discussed Overhead Bridge Proposition with Mr. Robt. Stuart

Mr. Robt. Stuart of the Quaker Oats Co., of Chicago, has been in the city the past couple of days on business in connection with his various interests here. He was met by appointment by his worship Mayor Rush and a couple of the aldermen in connection with the overhead bridge proposition. Mr. Stuart and the Quaker Oats Co., are very much interested in this project, and they will do all they can to further it when the time comes. At the present time there is not likely to be anything definite done.

Mr Stuart and his firm are also greatly interested in the early completion of the Trent Valley Canal to Georgian Bay. When boats can run through to that water it will be a great advantage to the local concern.

CHICAGO CUBS WIN THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP

(Special to The Times.)

Detroit, Oct. 14.—Chicago won the world's championship for the second year in succession by defeating Detroit today in the fifth game of the series by a score of 2—0. The Cubs easily demonstrated that they were the better team, and richly deserved the honors. The Tigers played a better fielding game today than they have shown during the series. Brilliant double plays in the eighth and ninth innings on hard chances prevented an increased score. As on Sunday, Overall out-pitched Donovan, having ten strike-outs to his credit. Both teams played errorless ball. Score;

	R.	H.	E.
Chicago	2	10	0

Ball Park, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 12.—Detroit fans quit cold today, judging by the attendance at the fifth game of the series with Chicago. The stands were only half filled, and the open bleachers contained a few occupants. The general feeling was that the Cubs would win, and this accounted for the miserable attendance. The weather was the finest of the series, being fine and warm, and every condition was favorable for good baseball.

Umpire Sheridan officiated at the plate and O'Day on the bases.

Donovan and Overall, the pitchers of Sunday, worked against each other.

The Cubs scored a run in the first on three clean singles over the infield, a great stop by Coughlin, who touched Schulte going to third, preventing further scoring.

Overall performed the remarkable feat of striking out four men in the first inning with his drop curve, after giving a base on balls and being hit for a single. Rossman, however, reached first on his strike-out, the third strike being scored as a wild pitch, the ball bounding on the plate to the grand stand, thereby filling the bases. Schaefer, however, fanned on three pitched balls.

O'Leary made a wonderful catch in the fifth of Tinker's fly, between Crawford and McIntyre. He ran back thirty yards, and fell heavily as he caught the ball, rolling over and over along the ground. In this inning, two doubles and Byer's two-bagger gave the Cubs another run.

Detroit had a royal chance to score in the fifth, but Hoffman's great throw to the plate held Cougalin at third, and to cap it all, Crawford struck out, when a hit would have meant two runs. Crawford cut Chicago out of a run by a beautiful catch of Tinker's liner in the sixth with Chance on second.

Mr. Stratton's Meetings in South Monaghan

Hon. J. R. Stratton at Bensfort

There was a large and representative meeting of the people of South Monaghan, at the Sunday school hall at Bensfort, on Monday evening, and the indications of the electors were very favorable to the prospects of Mr. Stratton, who received a warm reception. The meeting was organized by the election of Mr. John Wood as chairman.

Mr. Thornton spoke at some length upon the great development of prosperity that had been accomplished under the operation of the policies of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and asked them to give their support to the government and to Mr. Stratton.

Mr. W. H. Meldrum of Peterborough, made an extended address. He said he had not always been on the Liberal side, but he supported the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier because he believed that its policy was best for the interests of the country, and he supported Mr. Stratton because he was the best qualified, the most experienced, and the most capable man before them, and best equipped to render service to the county as its representative.

Mr. Stratton concluded the meeting a speech criticising the utterance of Mr. Burnham at Bensfort in the previous week, and among other things ridiculed Mr. Burnhams statement that "There ought to be government in this country for everyone free of taxation." Said Mr. Stratton; That would be a happy day. It would be one of the most delightful days we had ever seen, when this Utopian dream was realized. Perhaps then the government would pay the butcher's bill, and the baker's bill also. But where did Mr. Burnham contemplate that the government was going to get the money to run public business when all the sources of revenues are abolished.

A vote of thanks was tendered to

Found Over $3,500 in Bogus Money and Some Plates

(Times Special).

Oakville, Oct. 14.—Inspector Parkinson of the Dominion Police, with Buffalo detectives, made a trip to Gowanda today, and visited the farm of Thomas Crosier, the man who confessed to uttering bogus bank bills. The officers discovered a lot of plates, engraving tools and $3500 in counterfeit notes. There were eight plates in the lot. The notes were on United States banks, the Crown Bank of Canada, Standard Bank, Imperial Bank, United Empire Bank.

This is the windup of the case against Crosier and his son, who are held here on the charge of issuing and passing bogus money.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive our Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Sheop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-em's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Sheop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

SCHOOL CHILDREN EATING CORDITE FROM CARTRIDGES

(Special to The Times).

London, Ont., Oct. 14.—Principal Wyatt, of St. George's Public school, discovered at noon today a number of the children eating the cordite from cartridges. One boy was so affected that he fainted. The reason given by the children for their action, was that they had read in the newspapers that Dr. Mori, the murderer of Sergt. Lloyd, was supposed to have eaten cordite from cartridges, and had gone crazy before he shot Lloyd. The children wanted to see what affect it would have on them.

The Corporation Wood Pile Caught Fire Last Night

Just a couple of minutes after 12 o'clock last night, a fire alarm was sent in from the corner of Murray and Stewart streets, by Louis Roberts, a barber as maker. The brigade responded in very quick time, and found that a fire was getting a nice start in the corporation wood pile. It was only a matter of a few seconds until the water was turned on and the flames were soon extinguished. There was only old lumber piled in the yard and very little damage resulted. The fire was evidently started by some one smoking.

Hon. R. L. Borden Has Two Meetings in Brockville

(Times Special).

Brockville, Oct. 14.—Hon. R. L. Borden addressed two rousing meetings here this evening. One was in the Opera House, which holds 1000 and the other was in Victoria Hall, which holds 1000 and both places were crowded to the corridors. The Conservative leader discussed the Halifax platform, and pointed out some of the maladministration acts of the government. In conclusion Mr. Borden said.—"I firmly believe that the people of Canada are determined that there shall be a change, and when that comes it shall be accepted not as a victory of the Conservative party, but as a victory of the people of Canada over the bad administration of the government in the past twelve years, and especially during the past four years, because it is only during the past four years that these men have become so intoxicated with power that they have thrown all discretion to the winds."

AN EXPLOSION IN TWEED, PRIN. BLACK EXPERIMENTING

(Special to The Times.)

Tweed, Oct. 14.—An accident with somewhat serious result occurred here this morning, in which Principal Black of the Public school and several children were cut and burned. Mr Black was conducting an experiment in the chemistry room, and while passing ozone through the test tube containing log wood in order to show its bleaching powers, the tube exploded and glass and acid were sent flying in all directions. Mr. Black was cut in about two dozen places, and several of the scholars were injured, although none seriously. Colin Helm, son of the local manager of the Bank of Montreal, received burns on the face and eyes.

A Warrant Has Been Issued

(Times Special).

Brantford, Oct. 14.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Wm. McGuire, a railway yard man who is said to be responsible for a violation of the rules which resulted in the disastrous wreck on the G.T.R., near Mount Vernon. McGuire's home is at Princeton, but he has not yet been located. The cause of the wreck was a freight train leaving the city before the return of the pilot engine from up the Mount Vernon Grade.

Campaign Notes

The candidates for Gaspe, Que., have been chosen. William Albert Edwin Flynn of Percy, Conservative; and Hon. Rudolph Lemaux, K.C., of Ottawa, Post Mate: General, Liberal.

Frederick Villeneuve has been invited to accept the straight Liberal nomination in Maisonneuve, against Alfonso Verville, and he will probably accept.

Died Shortly After Marriage

(Times Special).

Hamilton, Oct. 14.—Arthur C. Jones, a young Englishman, employed in the Canadian Westinghouse, died this morning after a brief illness. Young Jones left his sweetheart in England, and came out here about two years ago to make a home for himself. Seven weeks ago he sent for his sweetheart and they were married, but had hardly got settled in their home when he took ill.

Lecture on the Unwritten Law

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 14.—Police Magistrate Jelfs delivered an address here tonight on the unwritten law, in which he said that Harry K. Thaw and his friends had a misconception of the term. The speaker said it was "The law of God an of conscience."

Col. Matheson Makes Successful Issue of New Treasury Notes

(Times Special).

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Secretary, today, accomplished a valuable stroke of business for the Province, by negotiating in London through the Bank of Montreal, the issue of treasury notes to the amount of £800,000. These are for six months at 6 1-4 per cent. par, which is considered very favorable. Hon. Mr. Matheson was advised by financial authorities in London, that on account of the unsettled affairs in the near east, this was a bad time to float a loan, as had been intended, to cover the treasury notes outstanding for £400,000. On this account it was decided to issue a new series taking up old issues with the Province and applying the balance to the T. & N. O. Railway. It is stated that the amount of these loans included $6,000,000 issued in 1905; $3,000,000 taken up by provincial investors, and $4,000,000 of the present issue, in early make up the Provincial investment in the T. & N.O. Railway, which was about $13,000,000.

1st Meet of Otonabee Athletic Association a Sporting Success

From a sporting standpoint the first meet of the Otonabee Athletic Association was a big success. All the events were well filled and the time made in most of the events was fast. The Otonabee Athletic Association deserves much credit for undertaking such a meet and they should have had a larger attendance than was present. The gate receipts were small although it is said that the organization will clear expenses.

The events with the winners are as follows.

50 Yards, Junior—
1. R. Bowden, O.A.C.
2. F. Halpany, O.A.C.
3. G. Hogan, O.A.C.
Time, 6 2-5 secs.

50 yards, Senior—
1. F. McGrath, T.A.S.
2. V. Corkery, T.A.S.
3. G. Gauthier, T.A.S.
Time, 5 3-5 secs.

220 Yards, Junior—
1. R. Bowden, O.A.C.
2. C. Walsh, unattached.
3. F. Halpany, O.A.C.

220 Yards, Senior—
1. V. Corkery, T.A.S.
2. J. Bailey, unattached.
3. C. Holland, T.A.S.

One Mile, Junior—
1. J. Hughes, O.A.C.
2. C. Sullivan, T.A.S.
3. H. Burritt, O.A.C.
Time, 6.47 secs.

One Mile, Senior—
1. C. Thorpe, Harriers.
2. George Fowler, Harriers.

3. L. F. Fitzgerald, T.A.C.

Running Broad Jump—
1. J. Crough, T.A.S.
2. D. Evans, unattached.
3. P. McFadden, unattached.

Five Mile Race—
1. E. Wilson, Harriers.
2. C. Thorpe, Harriers.
3. H. Howard, T.A.S.
Time, 29 1-2 mins.

Beamsville Man Drowned while Shooting Duck

(Times Special).

Lindsay, Oct. 14.—A sad drowning occurred this morning at Ball Point, Sturgeon Lake, when a young man named L. Lawson of Beamsville, lost his life.

The particulars of the sad affair are somewhat meagre, but it appears that the unfortunate young man, in company with Messrs. W. A. Sinclair, Lewy and Culp, also of Beamsville, were engaged in duck hunting off the point early this morning. Lawson and Lewy occupied one canoe, and Sinclair and Culp the other. There was a high sea running on the lake at the time, and it is presumed that the canoe upset through some cause precipitating its occupants into the water. Both made a brave fight for life against tremendous odds, but poor Lawson, evidently chilled and exhausted after his struggle sank from view. Young Lewy clung bravely to the canoe and with the assistance of his companions was saved in an exhausted condition from a watery grave and brought to shore.

His companions lost no time in getting assistance from other campers near the spot. Young Culp procured a conveyance and drove to Cameron, a distance of three miles, and telephoned to Lindsay the news of the sad fatality. Dr. Blanchard, coroner, was notified of the affair, as well as Mr. Nugent, undertaker. No time was lost in getting steam up in Mr. Thos. Sadler's yacht Mona, and these gentlemen, together with several other citizens, left for the scene of the drowning. There was also grappling hooks and other requisities on board, and a search was instituted for the unfortunate young man.

The victim of the sad fatality, who was a druggist by trade, was about 29 years of age. He arrived in Lindsay in company with Mr. W. D. Sinclair last Monday evening, and registered at the Simpson House. That evening about eight o'clock they were driven to Ball Point by Mr. Wm. Workman, where they joined their companions at Mr. B. Newton's cottage, where they had been camping about three weeks. The young men were spoken of as being model young men, and were general favorites with those who knew them.

Up to the hour of going to press the body had not been recovered. The lake is said to be rough and choppy, and this would hamper the efforts being put forth by those who are searching for the unfortunate man.

Mr. Lawson, it is understood, was a married man, and his relatives in Beamsville have been communicated with. Mr. George Brady is well acquainted with Culp and Lewy.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON BALKAN AFFAIRS

(Times Special).

Constantinople, Oct. 14.—It was officially announced here tonight that all the powers interested, except Austria-Hungary, have agreed to the principles of a conference to settle the Balkan difficulties. No answer to the invitation has as yet been received from Austria-Hungary. Germany has accepted the invitation provided that the discussion be restricted. Austria declines to participate unless the annexation of Bosnia and Herzovonia be not discussed, but be accepted by the powers, and legalized without debate.

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 14.—A special despatch to the Times from St. Petersburg, says that the Russian government has sent a note to Servia and Monte Negro, promising to safeguard their interests at the conference and expresses the hope that this promise will induce them to avoid the adoption of a rash policy.

(Special to The Times.)

Jaffa, Palestine, Oct. 14. —A mob attacked the Austria-Hungary post office here today, and destroyed the mail carts and letter boxes. The trouble began upon the arrival of the Austrian mail steamer. The lighter men of the port refused to have anything to do with it. Several European powers, including Austria, maintain their own post office at Constantinople and other points in Turkey to insure the safe transportation of mail.

(Times Special).

Paris, Oct. 14.—It is believed here that the international conference on the Balkan affairs is now certain, and that it will be limited to the ratification of private arrangements. M. Vesnitch, the Servian Minister of Foreign Affairs, explained today that the purpose of M. Patchitchs' visits to the various capitals were to lay the case of Servia before the signatories of the Berlin treaty. He said, "We have decided to submit our claims to the powers. If we do not get justice our people will be desperate. Our very existence as a nation and a race is at stake, and as our country rests upon national and not dynastic consideration we expect general sympathy and particularly from America."

Ten Years in the Penitentiary

(Special to The Times.)

Windsor, Oct. 14.—Charles White was convicted by a jury at Sandwich on a charge of disfiguring and maiming Jos. Pierce, and he was sentenced to ten years in the Kingston Penitentiary. Some months ago the prisoner entered the home of Pierce and gave him an unmerciful beating. Mrs. Pierce was charged with complicity in the assault, but Chancellor Boyd took the case from the jury.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to pupoint out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bonsfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government excavation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offinesse and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 109 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 28 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years o Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,708, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the lake ports and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the present accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Ruckborn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as a bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and insensibly of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing centres, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If in favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

Dan McGillicuddy Replied to Lawyer

(Special to The Times.)

Calgary, Oct. 13.—Yesterday the preliminary hearing against Dan McGillicuddy, editor of the Calgary News, on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Herbert C. Edwards, the editor of the Calgary Eye-Opener, was again adjourned this time until Friday next.

Needless to say, the case is creating the greatest interest throughout Calgary and the West.

It was on Tuesday last that the Calgary News Mr. McGillicuddy's paper, came out with a double column letter on its front page, signed "Nemesis," and attacking Edwards. The charges were of such a character that action of some sort on the part of the city magistrate was imperative, and the charge of criminal libel against Mr. McGillicuddy followed on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. McGillicuddy was arrested and taken to the station, immediately on his return to the office a special edition of the News was issued, giving an account of the arrest and reprinting the two-column letter.

Next day Mr. McGillicuddy appeared in court, the case coming before Thos. Hume, J.P. Mr. Clifford Jones is acting for Mr. McGillicuddy and Mr. P. J. Nolan for Edwards, or in Mr. Nolan's absence, Mr. Tweedie. The prosecution asked for an adjournment until next day, when another adjournment was made. These adjournments have caused great disappointment to the large crowds.

RE-PRINTED THE LETTER.

On Thursday, the News in reporting the formal proceedings, quoted the information and complaint in full thus repeating practically the entire letter from "Nemesis."

The original letter, after making charges, promised further particulars in future letters. So far none of these has appeared, but the News in its editorial page is keeping up a raking fire in the true McGillicuddy style.

Thus it quotes from its morning contemporary, the Albertan, as follows:

"It is safe to say that no newspaper article published in Calgary for some time has created such a sensation. Without any previous warning, whatever, the slightest intimation in a double column front page anonymous letter signed "Nemesis," the News attacked in the bitterest language the Eye-Opener, the editor of it, referring scathingly to his antecedents, to his past, his present, his personality, his morality, and his appearance."

"THAT'S THE WAY TO DO IT."

The News adds the following comment, "Why certainly. That's the way to do real business. Don't wait for the other chap to call the editor a liar, and the newspaper 'The Morning Maniac' and then lie down like a dormat or crawl into the cyclone cellar."

CLAIMS 22,000 CIRCULATION

The Eye-Opener claims a circulation of 22,000, several thousand of which are in Toronto, where it has been sold by newsboys on the streets for some weeks. It is two or three years now since it first made its appearance in Calgary, and since then it has provided a species of diversion for the whole West.

Its attacks have not been confined to men of either party, and as the News is independent in politics there does not appear to be any political motives behind the present legal fight, the outcome of which will be watched with the keenest interest.

Jilted the Duke

Rome, October 14.—A story is current in high society that Miss Katherine Elkins, whose engagement to the Duke of the Abruzzi, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, which had been reported here and abroad, has jilted her royal suitor. One rumor is that Miss Elkins has refused to change her religion, which would be necessary in case she became the bride of the Duke. No official confirmation of the reported broken engagement can be obtained, but it is hinted that there will be an announcement of some fort ehortly.

News Nuggets

Wadsworth, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The police are endeavoring to unravel the mystery of the murder of Ora Lee, twenty-one years old, a factory girl, whose body, pierced by two bullets, was found early today on the road between Wadsworth and the hamlet of Custard Hook.

Guy Rasor, the man whom Miss Lee was to have married to-morrow, is detained by the Sheriff, pending developments. He denies all knowledge of the tragedy and says he can prove an alibi. Farmers who went to the scene after the body was found met Rasor on the road, walking toward Wadsworth.

The police theory is that Miss Lee was killed while riding in a buggy with a man. Along the road where the murder was committed are plainly seen the tracks of a horse with one shoe missing. An examination of the stables at the Rasor home discloses that one of Rasor's horses has a shoe missing from a front foot. Miss Lee left Wadsworth last night ostensibly to prepare for her wedding.

Askabad, Turkestan, Oct. 12.—General Mistchenko, Governor-General of Turkestan, the well known Russian cavalry leader in the war with Japan was wounded in the manoeuvres of the Turkestan army corps near here to-day. A revolutionist plot is suspected. The general, with his staff, was watching the operations when he was struck by a bullet in the leg above the knee, but the ball did not touch the bone. An adjutant of Mistchenko was slightly wounded.

The manoeuvres were suspended and the weapons and ammunition of the troops examined. Ball cartridges and traces of bullets in the barrels of a number of rifles were found.

Teheran, Sept. 12.—By order of the Shah, parliamentary elections will be held in Persia on Monday, to elect members of the new parliament, which will be convoked November 14. The new Persian electoral system has been patterned after the Russian and provides for representation by classes. Half of the members are to be appointed by the Shah, so the ruler is certain of maintaining his hold on the new parliament and forcing the members to do his bidding.

New York, Oct. 12.—A prediction, made by Congressman James A Tawney, before the Fire Underwriters' Association of the Northwest at a meeting in Chicago, that the Panama Canal would be completed in six years at a total cost of $256,000,000, was shown yesterday to Colonel Goethals, chief engineer of the work, who is attending the hearing in the Army Building. "That's true," said the colonel. "I expect the canal to be open to navigation by January 1, 1915, unless some unforseen contingency arises, the cost to be what the Congressman has named." Mr. Tawney pointed out that the sum necessary to complete the greatest engineering feat of modern times would prove to be less than the annual appropriation for the army and navy.

THEIR OWN DENTISTS.

With the arrival of the Panama liner Alliance it was learned yesterday that the Isthmian Canal Commission would have two dentists to care for the teeth of its employes. O. N. Reubens, who arrived on the Alliance, said he and another dentist had been appointed and would have quarters at Gorgona and Culebra.

Two dentists who practised in the canal zone were not under the jurisdiction of the commission and were able to charge whatever they chose. The new men will have to regulate their prices according to a scale fixed by the Isthmian Canal Commission. Mr. Reubens will purchase dental supplies in this city and return to the Isthmus within a few weeks.

Four year old Harry was spending the day with his aunt. Dinner was late, and the child began to grow restless. "Auntie", he said, finally, "does God know everything?"

"Yes, dear," answered his aunt.

"Every little thing?" he persisted.

"Yes; every little thing," was the reply.

"Well, then," he said in a tone of conviction, "God knows I'm hungry."

Publican—And how do you like being married, John?

John—Don't like it at all.

Publican—Why, what's the matter with she, John?

John—Well, first thing in the morning it's money; when I goes out to my dinner it's money again, and at supper time it's the same. Nothing but money, money, money!

Publican—Well, I never! What do she do wi' all that money?

John—I dunno. I ain't give her any yet.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Professor James S. Breasted, of the University of Chicago, announced to-day his discovery in Sicily this summer of a portion of a tablet covered with inscriptions, showing that Solomon did not make the first sea voyages. He says that the translation shows that the builder of the first pyramid made a journey with forty ships across the Mediterranean to Lebanon for cedar. This, he says, was two thousand years before Solomon's time. Professor Breasted has been excavating in the Orient for three years.

The Mormon Vote

Denver, Col., October 14.—It is within the bounds of possibility that the presidency in 1912 may be settled by the Mormon Church. Should the election be close, there is little doubt that nine electoral votes of Idaho, Wyoming and Utah, which are controlled by Mormons, will be a determining factor.

John Osborn, ex-Governor of Wyoming and in charge of the Democratic headquarters here, claims eleven electoral votes for Bryan, which he is fighting. These are five of Colorado and three each of Nevada and Montana. He avers that nine other electoral votes—three each of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming—are absolutely in the keeping of the Mormon hierarchy, and unless Bryan can show between now and the last week of October that he has the presidency won, he cannot hope to obtain the vote in any of the three States named. Should it appear reasonably certain, however, to the rulers of the Mormon Church can be depended upon to throw its influence with him.

Another Way Out of It.

Nobody had ever had reason to accuse Abel Pond of being dishonest, but he was as sharp a man in a bargain as could be found in the county. When the building committee applied to him for a site for the new library he was ready to sell them a desirable lot, but not at their price.

"I couldn't feel to let it go under $400," he said, with the mild obstinacy that characterized all his dealings with his fellow men. "It wouldn't be right."

"You ought to be willing to contribute something for such an object," said the chairman of the committee. "If it's worth six hundred, why not let us have it for five hundred and call it you've given the other hundred?"

"M'm—no, I couldn't do that," said Mr. Pond, stroking his chin, "but I tell you what I will do. You give me seven hundred for it, and I'll make out a check for a hundred and hand it over to you, so's you can head the list of subscriptions with a good round sum and kind of wake up folks to their duty."—Youth's Companion.

A Real Apology.

"When the late Joel Chandler Harris was an editor here among us," said an Atlantan, "I called on him one day and found him very willing to correct an error about me that crept into his columns.

"We talked about newspaper contradictions, public apologies and the like, and 'Uncle Remus' took down a scrapbook and read me an apology that was an apology indeed. It had happened, he said, in a Transvaal paper. I'll never forget it. I agreed with Mr. Harris that it was the finest specimen of the public apology and retraction extant. It said:

"I, the undersigned, A. C. du Plessis, retract hereby everything I have said against the innocent Mr. G. P. Beaudenhout, calling myself an infamous liar and striking my mouth with the exclamation: 'You mendacious mouth! Why do you lie so?' I declare, further, that I know nothing against the character of Mr. G. P. Beaudenhout. I call myself, besides, a genuine liar of the first class.

"A. C. DU PLESSIS."

His Cough Cure.

"In my boyhood there came to our town," said a clergyman, "a gentle minister who, the very first Sunday of his incumbency, stopped effectually his coughing congregation.

"It was a congregation, too, singularly addicted to coughing. Rattling volleys of coughs ran over it every few minutes. The minister, indeed, that first Sunday could hardly make himself heard. He had rather a weak voice.

"Well, after his sermon had proceeded for ten or twelve minutes, now audible enough, now drowned under great waves of coughs, he took a resolution, and when the next outbreak was at its height he ceased preaching.

"At once the coughing ceased. There was a profound silence. The minister smiled.

"'My friends,' said he, 'it seems that when I stop you stop.'

"From that day in that church they coughed no more."

Penguin Battles.

The penguin, a notable diver among sea birds, wins his mate by right of conquest. The male birds fight for the possession of the females. These curious birds have regular duel grounds, where relics of innumerable combats in the shape of feathers lie scattered about. In the center is the fighting arena, clear of all debris. The penguins' feathers and blubber form an efficient shield against their opponents' beaks, so the weapon used is the short flipper, the only wings the birds possess. The fight begins with the two combatants walking round each other waiting for an opportunity to grip. Once this is done the dippers come into play. The fighters shower blow after blow upon each other. There is no record as to how these fights end, but it is a safe supposition to say that they are seldom fatal. The force of the blow from a penguin's flipper is such that three or four of them will draw blood from the human hand.

How Models Make Pictures.

The artist gazed in rapture on "The Kiss," his latest picture.

"Do you grasp," he said, "the passionate grace of the girl's attitude, the warmth and the power wherewith her tense white arms draw the young man closer, ever closer? Well, I got that idea from my model, a shopgirl.

"But for my model's suggestion I'd have put the girl in a stiff, cold pose, and the picture would never have been the masterpiece it is. But my model pointed out to me the abandon wherewith a girl, whether of high or low station, gives herself up to a kiss' charm. She illustrated the thing, aided by a male model, a young medical student. Yes, she made my picture.

"The fact is, models make, with their valuable hints and suggestions, lots of pictures. There's many a masterpiece whose merit is due to the splendid pose that the model originated for the principal figure."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the cause of creating the cause, rather than the effect would come into practice. A tiny, inside, build it nerve says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is formed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

HORSES FOR THE FARM.

There are several types of horses that are excellent types for farm use. We are not going to undertake to say which is the very best type because we don't know, says a writer in Farmers Advocate. If some one else thinks he knows we have no quarrel with him. With some the so called general purpose horse is the favorite farm horse, while others reject this type with scorn. There is no agreement as to what is the general purpose horse.

TYPICAL COACH HORSE.

The writer is familiar with a certain community in Illinois where the French coach horse is bred and sold by farmers. Horse buyers go there from Chicago and other cities to buy these horses for the city markets as carriage horses. We know of a gelding from this community which was a first prize winner at the New York horse show. This fellow had been sold for $3,000 to go to New York. The farmers in that community have a right to be proud of their coach horses. And you couldn't convince them that the French coach horses are not general purpose horses. They are used for all farm purposes and fall in none. They weigh from 1,100 to 1,400 pounds. They are heavy enough to pull the plow in the field or a load of hay or grain to town. And, when it comes to hitching to the buggy or carriage to drive to town on any day of the week, surely no better horse can be found. Moreover, these horses are usually docile and breed unusually true to type. Who can dispute their title to being classed as general purpose horses? But that is far from saying that they are the best general purpose horses or the best farm horses. We have no quarrel with the man who is partial to them.

As for heavier horses, the Belgian, we are glad to say, is becoming increasingly common in this country. He is the extreme type of draft horse. He cannot be called a general purpose horse. There are some things he cannot do to the best advantage, but for the purposes to which he is adapted he is a very valuable horse. Even in draft horses there are several types. The Percheron is the most popular draft horse in this country, and he deserves about all that can be said in his favor. He is not quite so upstanding, has not always quite so impressive a "way of going" as the best Shires have. Neither, on the other hand, is he so massive, so wide, so close to the ground, not always so strongly muscled as the Belgian, but the Percheron is, of course, a true draft horse and deserves all his popularity and more. The Shires are attracting more and more attention at our great fairs and live stock shows, and their popularity is certain to increase.

It pays to raise the draft horse on the farm. But every man to his trade. Some men can handle one kind of horse and some another kind. Much depends on the kind of horse one has been trained to handle, and much depends also on one's taste in horseflesh. If you don't like the heavy horse, let him alone.

Dipping Sheep.

All sheep are troubled with external parasites unless thoroughly dipped at shearing time and again shortly afterward. Besides ticks, sheep are often seriously injured with lice. On account of the wool and the small size of the lice, it is almost impossible to see them. Many sheep are worried to death with lice when the owner has not the slightest idea of what the trouble is.

It is easy to dip sheep, and it is perfectly safe in the summer time. If they are thoroughly cleansed in warm weather they are not likely to become badly infected during the winter unless they are permitted to run with other sheep that have not been treated.

Very often showing sheep at the fairs will lead to trouble unless the exhibition stock is very carefully guarded and taken care of before mixing again with the home flock. There are so many advantages from dipping that every farmer should build a tank, a small, cheap affair for a few sheep and a larger and more convenient arrangement for a larger flock.

Waking a Deaf Person.

"To waken a deaf person who wishes to be called at a certain hour is about the hardest proposition a hotel clerk runs up against," said a member of that genial fraternity. "To ring the telephone is useless because the man couldn't hear if you rang until doomsday. Knocking, for the same reason, is equally futile. Now and then a guest who has lost his hearing suggests that he leave his door open all night so we can walk right in and shake him, but even though he does appear to be a dead game sport there are so many chances of somebody else less guileless than ourselves walking in ahead of us that we cannot consent to that. So far the only satisfactory way found for waking a deaf lodger is to tie a string to his wrist, pass the string through the keyhole and then tug away at it at the appointed time. That method, however, is rather primitive. It seems to me that the man who can patent a harmless artistic device for waking the deaf is sure of fame and fortune, not to mention the gratitude of hotel clerks."—New York Sun.

The Mullahs of India.

A mullah, or, as it is more properly written, mollah, is a title given in India and throughout the east generally to a religious leader of any description. Thus the sultan of Turkey is a mollah, because he is the supreme head of the moslem world. And there are hundreds of others. To most of the more conspicuous among them we prefix the adjective "mad." This, however, must not be taken to mean that they are insane, the word being used rather in its oriental significance of "inspired." The person of the mollah is sacred. Not even the mighty Habibullah himself would care to lay a sacrilegious finger on one of these saintly personages. If he were to venture such an unheard of thing, vengeance would surely overtake him. For it is the cardinal principle of the Ulima—as the mollahs are collectively termed—that an injury purposely caused to one of their number can only be atoned for by the death of the individual inflicting it.

Greatest Danger to Swimmers.

"It isn't cramp," said a life guard, "that carries off so many good swimmers. After all, what is a leg or arm cramp? Couldn't a good swimmer easily turn on his back and float till the attack departed? No, cramp won't account for the strange seizures that in a twinkling turn a very fish of a swimmer into a helpless, speechless, drowning paralytic. What accounts for this business is water inhaling. A swimmer inhales spray through the nostrils, it passes through the pharynx, behind the epiglottis or windpipe guard and so down into the windpipe. The result is nearly certain death. Swallowing water does you no harm, but breathing it may kill you. How to avoid accidentally breathing it, though, that is a question nobody seems able to answer."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Ice and Mice.

For horses suffering from inflammation of the lungs an old prescription was a mixture of shot and powder in milk. This has even been applied to human beings. In "Idlehurst" mention is made of sparrow shot, five or six to the dose, to be taken twice a day, as a remedy for "brown kiters," which is believed by the English farm laborers to be caused by the "lights" (their term for lungs) rising up the windpipe. The shot is supposed to weight them down in their rightful place. Sussex, England, is the scene of "Idlehurst." It was a Sussex woman who was ordered by the doctor to put some ice in a bag and bind it on the temples of her sick boy. Inquiring after his patient the next day, the physician received the reply, "Oh, Tommy's better, but the mice are dead!"

Then He Got His.

A young Lancashire lad joined the army and soon after his arrival at headquarters got into trouble. Accordingly he had to face his commanding officer next morning.

The usual preliminaries were gone through, when, contrary to orderly room etiquette, the recruit commenced to defend himself.

"Silence!" roared the adjutant.

"Thou shut up," said the prisoner. "I'm not speaking to thee. I'm talking to the old chap in the chair."—London Scraps.

Too Much For Him.

"How true that old saying is about a child asking questions that a man cannot answer," remarked Popleigh.

FACTS ABOUT COUNTIES.

Some of Them Are Larger Than Many of the States.

The county is a territorial division that the United States derived from Great Britain, where the counties correspond to the provinces or departments of other European countries and in a limited sense to the states of the American Union. An Englishman addresses a letter to "Parkinton, Hants," as we address a letter to "Columbus, O.," or "Elmira, N.Y."

One state, which derives its usages from French and not from English originals, has no counties at all. In Louisiana these subdivisions of the state are still called parishes, both officially and in ordinary speech, though they are now divided into many real parishes of the church.

There are about 3,000 counties in the Union, with an average size of about 1,000 square miles, but this average is enormously exceeded in many instances and is also frequently fallen below. Leaving out certain great unsettled counties in the west, the average county would be about 500 square miles in extent.

In much of the western part of the country the size of the county is regulated mathematically. It consists of sixteen townships, each composed of thirty-six square miles, making 576 square miles in all. In other words, each township is six miles square and each county twenty-four miles square.

In Iowa there are thirty-nine counties that were formed in this way, each one of which has exactly 576 square miles. Such divisions were possible in the newer west, where these minor political divisions were made in advance of settlement. In the older parts of the country the territorial arrangements were largely accidental.

The largest county in the United States is Yavapai county, Ariz., which has an area of almost 30,000 square miles. Nine states of the Union are each smaller than this county. It is larger than the whole of West Virginia and almost as large as South Carolina.

The sixteen counties of Montana average a greater size than the state of Massachusetts.

Among the other great counties of the Union are San Bernardino and San Diego, in California, which are not only vast regions, but contain a great productive territory; Humboldt and Lincoln counties, in Nevada, which are only sparsely populated, and Lincoln county, N. M., which bids fair in time to have a large population.

Although the New England states are small, the average size of the counties is greater than in most of the middle, western and southern states. Worcester county, in Massachusetts, is an example of an eastern county that is at the same time large in area and very populous. It is larger than the adjoining state of Rhode Island.

The smallest state in the Union has the smallest county as well. Bristol county, R. I., has only twenty-five square miles. At one place it is not more than two miles in breadth.

Thread In Surgery.

Are you aware that the modern surgeon employs in his work dozens of different kinds of thread for sewing up cuts and wounds? Among them are kangaroo tendons, horsehair, silk and very fine silver wire. Many of these threads are intended to hold for a certain number of days, and then naturally break away. The short, tough tendons taken from the kangaroo, which are used for sewing severe wounds, will hold for about four weeks before they break away. Silk thread will remain much longer, sometimes six months, while the fine silver wire is practically indestructible.

With the entire outfit a surgeon is able to select a thread that will last as long as the wound takes to heal, and will then disappear completely. To accommodate this assortment of threads, special varieties of needles are required. Besides the needle created in different segments of a circle, surgeons use needles shaped like spears, javelins and bayonet points.

Queer Auction Custom.

"Candle auction" is an ancient custom which still survives in Somersetshire, England. A valuable piece of meadow land in the village of Tatworth was sold recently by auction while the candle burned. The ceremony consists of the burning of an inch of candle, the last bidder before the candle's final flicker becoming the tenant for the ensuing year. Previous to the auction freeholders assembled for a supper of bread and cheese, beer and pickles, the funds for this being provided from the "colting" of the new tenant. Fines are also imposed for speaking, nose blowing, laughing out loud and moving, other than bidding, while the candle is burning.

The Last Straw.

She was one of those women who always present a woefully untidy appearance during the early part of the day. In vain had her husband remonstrated with her on her unfastened blouse and unkempt hair. It was not until aid came from an unexpected quarter that victory was his. They had removed to a new house on the previous day, and when she answered the summons of the front door bell a humble looking woman awaited her.

"Oh, I see it's too late!" sighed the woman. "I called to see if the missis wanted a charwoman, but I see she's suited."

A Great Falling.

Visitor—So you've got a dog and a cat for pets. They must be splendid companions for you.

Tommy—Oh, not very! They don't eat cake or jam.

Visitor—Well, what has that to do with it?

Tommy—Well, when there's any cake and jam missing they don't get blamed for it.

MULE BREEDING.

Animals of Heavy Type In Great Demand For City Use.

By Professor GEORGE M. ROMNELL.

In breeding mules the first point is to see that the mule's sire is a large Jack, recorded in the American Jack Stock Studbook. He should stand 15.2 hands or even 16 and should weigh up to 1,100 or 1,200 pounds. He should have a large, strong body and heavy bone. Weight and bone are cardinal points in a Jack.

If mares sired by light stallions—standard breds, coachers, etc.—are bred to such a Jack, mules of good quality and fair weight may be expected. If the mares are by good standard bred, saddle or thoroughbred stallions, the mules will be very active and will possess much quality and finish.

If these mares have good weight, say 1,100 or 1,200 pounds, this mating will produce the finest sugar mules. If somewhat smaller, good cotton mules will result. If draft bred mares are used, the mules will of course be heavier. Such mules are the draft mules of the market and are in strong demand for city use. They have more weight than sugar mules, but not quite so much quality.

For small, indifferent 800 pound mares without breeding nothing better can be expected than the production of inferior cotton mules or pit and pack mules. It is useless to try to breed good mules from poor mares, and this is one reason why so much attention has been given to the discussion of the importance of horse breeding in the south. There will probably always be more demand in the south for mules than for work horses, but it is necessary first to have a supply of good, useful farm brood mares. It is doubtful if any jack is good enough to sire a good mule from a small, coarse plug mare.

THE FRESH COW.

Following Calving She Must Have Good Care and Feed.

The fresh cow has a right to good care. If she does not get it her owner will suffer. The fresh cow, especially if young, is nervous and excitable. For this very reason she acts in such a way as to annoy her owner or keeper, but the owner or keeper is not wise who is weak enough to give vent to his annoyance in abuse of the cow. The cow is not to blame for her nervous condition. Harshness will actually lessen materially the supply of milk. The man who cannot control his temper would better let dairying alone. He cannot make it pay.

The fresh cow also requires care and judgment in feeding on account of her feverish condition. She is not only feverish, but weak. She will crave water, but only a little food. The water will be better if it is slightly warmed. Professor Smith of the University of Nebraska suggests the following as a method of feeding for the first few days following calving:

"Whatever is given her should be of a light character, such as well cured clover or alfalfa and a little bran, preferably made into a mash by the use of warm water. A few pounds of bran will have a cooling and laxative effect, which is always beneficial just after calving. The following day four or five pounds of a mixture of equal parts of corn, oats and bran would prove satisfactory.

"Without oats it would be well to feed equal parts by weight of corn and bran, gradually increasing the corn to three-fourths of the grain ration, at the same time making the daily feed gradually larger until at the end of three weeks she is receiving a full ration of ten or twelve pounds of grain per day, the exact amount depending upon the size of the cow. In the meantime the cow should be given all the clover or alfalfa hay she will consume."

Cows In Hot Weather.

Spray the cows before they are turned out to pasture in the morning with a mixture of equal parts of coal oil and fish oil. One gill, applied with a spray syringe, will cover the neck, shoulders and legs of one cow. The following mixture is recommended by the Wisconsin experiment station: Resin, one and one-half pounds; common soap, two cakes; fish oil, one-half pint, and water, three gallons. Dissolve the resin by boiling in one gallon of water and the soap cut fine. When dissolved add the fish oil and the remainder of the water. Stir thoroughly before using. Apply with syringe or brush. This is an excellent fly repellent, cheap and effective.

A Veterinarian's Advice.

When the hog seems to be losing the use of its limbs, feed less corn and more bran and oats chop. If the trouble is very bad, give eight or ten drops of nux vomica in the feed twice a day. An abundance of green feed should also be given.

Cured Painful Irregularities

Strong Testimony from a Lady Resident of Clarksburg, Proving that Ferrozone Surpasses all Other Remedies

The health of many women is constantly imperilled through failure of certain organs to work according to nature's requirements.

Where this condition occurs there is no safer remedy to employ than Ferrozone, which has a specific action in female troubles.

Not only does it act directly on the organs, ensuring regularity and freedom from pain, but by forming rich red blood fortifies the system against wasting drains.

FERROZONE MAKES STRONG WOMEN.

Ferrozone possesses a volume of merit totally absent in the ordinary medicine, and its superiority is proclaimed by thousands of women it has restored to vigorous health. From Mrs. F. G. Caldwell comes the following endorsement, written from her home in Clarksburg; "I went through a most trying experience with what is commonly known as 'Female Trouble.' It isn't necessary to state my symptoms, but I suffered a great deal. My health was well night ruined, and I got into such a condition that I couldn't even sleep. I was dreadfully nervous, weak and pale. Different prescriptions were recommended and I tried them. But Ferrozone was the first to help. I improved steadily under Ferrozone and normal conditions were finally established. I gained weight, my color and spirits improved, and my former health was restored. Ferrozone cured me, and with a full heart I recomend this good medicine to all other women."

Beware of imitations—don't allow a druggist to palm off anything else for Ferrozone, which costs 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50 at all dealers.

A DISAPPOINTMENT

The International Congress on Tuberculosis, held in Washington recently, is reported to have disappointed the European delegates. The statements ascribed to some of these delegates open an old wound. In point of numbers the convention is described as magnificent. As Adolphe Smith, Fellow of the Chemical Society of London and special Commissioner for the Lancet, puts it, the presence of thousands of American physicians, who had come together at great trouble and expense, had "demonstated the solidarity of the medical profession in the fight against tuberculosis." But the solidarity does not appear to have been demonstrated in all other respects.

It is remarked that the housing problem is the fundamental problem to be solved in the conquest of tuberculosis and a resolution to this effect was proposed in the international organization in Paris three years ago by the Belgian Minister of Agriculture. Before that the congress sitting in Geneva had declared that when property condemned as propagating tuberculosis was to be destroyed or improved "real estate owners ought to be compensated, not according to the financial value of their property—for slum property is the most valuable in the world—but according to the sanitary value."

This matter was not discussed in Washington. There was no discussion, either, of the proposition for organization to enforce the tuberculosis laws against tenement houses and factory proprietors before actual outbreak of the disease. There was ready for submission to the congress a resolution declaring for the regulation of the height of buildings according to the width of the adjacent streets. But it is charged by the European delegates that a small knot of American doctors, influenced by real estate interests succeeded in holding up these and several similar resolutions on the ground that if they were presented the time set for the prorogation of the congress would be overtun.

This is rumor of a discouraging sort and no one would be inclined to welcome conclusive evidence of its truth. But it is obvious that in refraining from a reiteration of its policies in respect of the congestion of building and population the congress has failed to drive home the attack which must be driven home before the pest is to be swept from the great centres of habitation. An insanitary hovel in the midst of the prairie will shelter unsough tuberculosis to do for the entire family which lives in it. In the great cities, where the crowded tenements cover square miles of nameless insanitary atrocities, the plague holds mad and unrestricted carnival. But as has been remarked, slum property the world over is most valuable in the money sense since it makes the largest returns on the smallest outlay. This evil is as old as the history of the aggregation of mankind. It has endured the scorn of the ages and is rampant yet. It throws off as a horrid and apparently irrelevant offshoot a refusal by landlords to rent decent homes to persons with children except upon terms which would be ruinous to all but the very rich. It crushes the people whose lives are hardest down into a mire which kills not only the spirit but the body also.

An international propaganda for world-wide legislation against the slum building by driving tuberculosis from its breeding grounds would go a long way to minimizing its ravages. But there is still reason to believe that it would be bitterly opposed by an immensely powerful organization of property owners who are content that their brothers should rot and die so long as the money comes in.

SEEKING LOST TREASURE

Another expedition in search of treasure lost in the Spanish main in the days of the galleon and the freebooter has come to grief. This time it was a party of five old Harvard men who blithely set forth in the former cup defender Mayflower, with divers and all the paraphernalia necessary to penetrate the hold of a sunken treasure ship and recover enough doubloons and bullion to place the gold reserve on an impregnable basis.

About the time the treasure-seekers set sail it was reported that a swarthy crew of Jolly Rogers who wore the blue of old Yale had chartered a low, rakish craft to trail the Mayflower. With cutlasses and pikes, and not forgetting the barrel of rum, these bold pirates planned to let the sons of Harvard perform the hard and dangerous work of recovering the fabulous treasure; then a shot across the bows, boarders over the side with cutlasses in teeth, five wearers of the crimson walking the plank, a scuttled Mayflower, and then a scoot to the fastnesses of some West Indian coral bay to divide the booty.

But there will be no chance for the amateur Captain Kidds and Morgans to carry out their part of the joke; it has been far from a joke with the original treasure seekers. A hurricane up, and the Mayflower is now a dismantled derelict somewhere in the gulf stream, while the party of five, together with the seven members of the crew who were rescued from the battered hulk, to which they had clung for forty-eight hours, have been landed at the port of Baltimore by an unromantic Norwegian tramp steamer.

Treasure trove has a seemingly irresistible fascination for the adventurous. It also excites the cupidity of those who are not adventurous, and a down East promoter, it was announced a few days ago, proposes to capitalize that fact by floating a million dollars of stock in a corporation to recover about $40,000,000 worth of gold from a vessel that foundered some hundred years ago, at a spot that has been "exactly located." It was not so stated, but probably the formerly sold stock in undeveloped western mines.

Every schoolboy knows that the ghost of the lamented Captain Kidd stalks to protect his ill-gotten hidden wealth, for which vain search has been made. Now, it's just as certain that the ghosts of other freebooters and mariners who sailed the Spanish main are on guard. They resent the penetration of their sentimental past in this day of steam and gasoline, except by the delvers of the pen, who find fiction's most thrilling field in that romantic era; and they make the hurricane's blow as a warning to those who would disturb the mysteries of Davy Jones' locker. If you are not superstitious enough to believe it just ponder the net results of lost treasure seeking in real life.

EDITORIAL NOTES

War talk in and about the Balkan countries. There is cause for the talk, and there is, unhappily, danger of war. It would be preferable, no doubt, to have the whole dispute settled peaceably in an international congress or before a tribunal of arbitration, and in some particulars it may seem suited to such treatment. It involves the integrity, and disputes over treaties are commonly regarded as arbitrable. But, on the other hand, it certainly and directly implicates the honor and integrity of some nations, and there are many who hold that disputes of that sort are not arbitrable, or, at any rate, are not necessarily and involuntarily arbitrable.

There is also much talk of a congress of the powers, at Paris, London or Rome, for the settlement of the trouble. There was a congress thirty years ago at Berlin which created the situation the disturbance of which has caused the present crisis. Why not reconvene that congress, or constitute its logical successor, to deal with the alleged infractions of the treaty which was then made? That appears on the face of it to be a reasonable and practicable demand, but there are some obstacles in the way of it. Such a congress can be called with any prospect of success only by common consent and with common agreement upon the issues which are to form its agenda. But such consent and agreement seem at present out of the question.

Austria-Hungary will not enter such a congress unless her title to Bosnia and Herzegovina is recognized in advance and all question of her right to seize those provinces is excluded from consideration. That is, she will not enter a congress unless the other powers agree to ignore the very thing to discuss which the congress is chiefly desired.

Russia will not agree to a congress unless it is empowered to consider a general revision of the whole Treaty of Berlin, including the clause which bars the Dardanelles to the passage of Russian warships.

Great Britain will not agree to a congress unless it is expressly stipulated that it shall not generally revise the Treaty of Berlin, but shall confine itself to the particular issues which have just been raised.

Of course, any or all of these powers may reconsider the position which they are now reported to have assumed and may "get together" in an harmonious concert. But at present the situation seems to be that Austria-Hungary will not agree to such a congress as either Great Britain or Russia wants; that Great Britain will not agree to such a congress as either Austria-Hungary or Russia wants, and that Russia will not agree, to such a congress as either Great Britain or Austria-Hungary wants.

In case of serious disagreement or conflict, before an appeal to arms, the signatory powers agree to have recourse, as far as circumstances allow, to the good offices or mediation of one or more friendly powers. In questions of a legal nature, and especially in the interpretation or application of international conventions, arbitration is recognized by the signatory powers as the most effective and at the same time the most equitable means of settling disputes which diplomacy has failed to settle. . . With the object of facilitating an immediate recourse to arbitration, for international differences, the signatory powers undertake to organize a permanent court of arbitration, accessible at all times; . . The signatory powers consider it their duty if a serious dispute threatens to break out between two or more of them, to remind these latter that the permanent court is open to them.

The signatory powers to that convention, it will be remembered, included Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Montenegro, Servia and Turkey. It will be interesting to observe to what extent these and the other powers seriously and practically endeavor to give to those solemn undertakings.

The Department of the Interior is issuing regulations to the Dominion land agents relative to conditions which beneficiaries under the volunteer bounty act of 1908 must comply with in locating their land grants of 160 acres in recognition of military services in South Africa. The most important feature of the regulation is the ruling of the department that a volunteer in applying for land signs an application form binding himself to enter upon the land and begin settlement duties within six months after his application is accepted. In this way the department overcomes the admitted error in framing the Bill, which permitted a volunteer to locate his land without being obliged to begin settlement duties upon it before June 30, 1911. It is claimed by the department that this clause of the Bill was entirely contrary to the Government's intention. The effect of the clause is that a veteran locating cannot hold his land until the middle of 1911 and derive the benefit of the increase in the price of land which he would undoubtedly obtain if the Bill as constructed and passed by Parliament was complied with. The department, however, has made a concession to the volunteers in permitting a substitute to come on the land and complete the settlement duties after the volunteer has performed a reasonable portion of them.

It is well known that the British Board of Trade, a department of the government, has by timely mediation and conciliation prevented some serious and great strikes. It is not generally known that these interventions were not extraordinary. A statement issued by Mr. Churchill, the present head of the department, shows that in 1906 the board intervened in fourteen disputes, settling them all; in 1906 in twenty cases, settling sixteen, and in 1907 in thirty-nine cases, settling all but seven. In the first eight months of the present year no fewer than forty-seven cases of intervention occurred, and nearly all of them have been satisfactorily settled.

The board, in thus tendering its aid to industrial disputants, is acting under a law which gives it power to appoint a conciliator and arbitrator in trade controversies at the request of both parties. Sometimes the head of the board proffers his help in an extra-legal and informal way, and the influence of the great office secures a favorable response to his appeal. At any rate, the work of the department in this new sphere has so increased that Mr. Churchill has decided to establish a standing or permanent court of conciliation and arbitration. He can do this without waiting for or asking fresh legislation, and his plan has been widely indorsed. Even opposition newspapers speak well of it as another guaranty of industrial peace with justice and honor.

The court will be composed of three or five members, at the discretion and preference of the parties. Its fees and expenses will be paid by the department. The court will be nominated from three distinct panels—one drawn from permanent men in the employer class, another from the trade union leaders and representative workmen, and the third from the impartial and eminent citizens who are not directly connected with industry.

The court will have the help, where necessary, of technical assessors from the trade affected by the controversy before it. These assessors will have no votes, but they will sit with the court and explain obscure or unfamiliar points in the controversy.

The law provides for no compulsion in thus facilitating arbitration, and the progress of arbitration in England has been due to voluntary recognition of public interest and the fairness of the board of trade. The setting up of a permanent court and the care taken to insure good judges should spell further advance toward industrial peace in England.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted scores of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—loathsome sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, hoarseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspepsia, stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. 1 CENT A 2 SHARE

Send us your name as a member in this new company, with your remittance for as many thousand shares as you can take at $5 per thousand.

This is a short-time offer on a hurry-up proposition. Our vice president is up at Itawhide now putting the miners at work. We want to raise the necessary funds for development as quickly as possible. Therefore, we offer the first block of stock at $5 a thousand shares. This subscription must be all cash. We want the money in hand. We mean to work without letup, and we have made it an ironclad rule not to run in debt. Cash counts now.

Our prospectuses are out. Send for one.

Make reservation of stock, if you do no more. But, remember, this present offer of stock at Half a Cent a Share is now open and will be closed as soon as enough cash subscriptions are in hand. Don't wait, or you will get left.

The gold mining property owned outright by the company consists of 7 claims, 5 in the Itawhide district of Nevada, and 2 in the Dulzura district of southern California.

The Itawhide district to-day is more famous than Goldfield, Tonapah, Bullfrog, or Searchlight were at the same stage of exploration and development. The Dulzura discovery is one of the most sensational in the history of California.

Ten samples of ore which were among the first assayed, run as high as $7,461.57 to the ton, and all ten averaged over $1,500 a ton.

In both camps we located early, and our locations are choice. Our own officers will superintend the mining.

In the Hudson Bay District

(Times Special).

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—An interesting report on the conditions which have prevailed in the Hudson Bay district is told in a report received by Col. Fred. White Controller of the Northwest Mounted Police, from Major J. S. Moodie, in charge of N.W.M.P. posts throughout that region. In view of the start which has been made in the direction of the building a line of railway to Hudson's Bay, what Col Moodie has to say of the condition of the ice in those waters is of particular interest at the present moment.

The report speaks of the arrival at Churchill, of a patrol boat, which left Fullerton on June 5.

The members of the patrol reported that all ice was well off shores, until within 100 miles of Churchill, when they found that it was driven in, and the party was detained 19 days near Driftwood Point. From that place they had to work through ice all the way to Churchill. Speaking of the conditions in the Churchill River, Major Moodie says that owing to the snow having gone early this year, there was no high water since the ice went out. The river at the time of writing was about summer height. A channel broke through the ice in the harbor on the night of June 25, and next day the harbor was practically free of ice at low water. Owing to the continuous northerly and easterly winds, the ice had never got sufficiently far into the bay to get out of the river current, and so travelled in and out with the tides. The report adds, however, that both in the bay and river, the ice is loose and in "needles," and a good steamer would have no difficulty in working through.

The spring at Churchill this year was early, the snow having completely disappeared from the level by May 6. Summer, however, was late in coming and there was practically none until the end of June. In the north, the weather has been about as usual, with not quite as bad winds during the winter. Chesterfield Inlet, on Hudson Bay, was free from ice when the patrol passed.

All kinds of game have been scarce in the north and last winter was reported the worst in years for wolves and foxes. Deer were very scarce dealers everywhere, and only to be found in small bands. Great destitution, Major Moodie says, exists among the natives. It was necessary on different occasions to bring native families to the barracks and to supply them with food. Many of the natives' dogs died, also for want of food, and this made matters worse, as the hunters were dependent on them. From the barracks these natives went out hunting and brought in whatever they got. They are not lazy, but are always eager to go off hunting if able to do so. There is no doubt, Major Moodie adds, that the loss of life would have been considerable, had the police not been there.

Major Moodie reports that there has been no crime in the Hudson Bay district since the last report.

Australia's Yellow Peril

Melbourne, Oct. 13.—In Australia, and to a lesser degree, but still to a very material extent in New Zealand, no issue occupies a larger place in the public mind than what is known as the 'yellow peril.' Australians are possessed, not to say obsessed, by the idea that one of these days, unless an effective barrier is constantly maintained against them, the Japanese will settle like a swarm of bees upon their extensive and sparsely settled continent and overrun it. They think the Chinese would like to do so, too, but they are confident of their ability to keep the Chinese out. With the Japanese it is different. The latter made anese it is different. The latter have lately made an impressive demonstration of what they can do in the fighting line, both by sea and land, and if they were to insist that Australia should be open to their settlement the Australians realize that they would n t be able to deny them.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent, at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big moneylender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-leader. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit calls for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was falling to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is world-wide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the abject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance.

I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

The Business Outlook

An eastern banker, whose name is not given, thus sums up the financial situation in Canada:—

"The financial condition of Canada is now 'easy'. The banks have a sufficient supply of money to move the crops and it is, therefore, to be hoped that the farmers will immediately take their produce to market. It is the duty of the farmers this autumn to rush their grain east, so that as much as possible can be sent down the waterways before frost closes the harbor at Montreal, for as soon as the produce is exported money will at once be available for the farmers to pay their debt, thus putting much needed money into circulation and assisting to restore the market to its normal condition. There is no reason why the farmers should hold on to their grain, for the prices at the outset will be good. Furthermore, by promptly selling their produce the farmers will be able to pay their debts and thus remove further interest that is piling up against them, besides ensuring better conditions during the coming winter.

"The country is growing at a remarkable rate and business increases at a greater ratio than the savings, so that the savings are out and in demand all the time, and incidentally keeping up the rates of interest. Money that has been placed on call in New York has been brought in, but no more than the amount required for the removal of the crop has been recalled good interest."

This conservative estimate of conditions is exceedingly satisfactory. While the coming of really good times may be a little delayed, it is surely not very far off. Already the first signs of improvement are manifest.

The White Plague

Dr. Flick, director of the Tuberculosis Congress to be held in Washington, made the following hopeful statement.

"I am sure that in fifteen years or less tuberculosis will be wiped out. All that is needed is a wider knowledge of how to prevent its spread. If we could teach every one the simple methods of preventing contagion we could immediately stop all further progress of the disease, and in a few years it would be gone. Their wide educational value is the reason for holding the national conferences. Thus we intend to reach as many people as we can through the papers, through exhibits and through popular lectures."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, but they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We ask and cheerfully recommend

News in Brief.

Ottawa, Oct. 12—Major J. D. Moodie, who is in charge of North-west Mounted Police posts in the Hudson Bay district, in a report to Col. Fred White, comptroller of the N.W.M.P. and governor of the unorganized territories, says that owing to the lack of game and the prevalence of wolves, great destitution exists among the natives. Some have died of starvation and others have been rescued from starvation by the efforts of the police.

Major Moodie says that at Churchill a channel was broken through to the harbor on June 15, but owing to continuous easterly and northerly winds the ice for some time never got far enough into the bay to get out of the river current, and travelled in and out with the tide. The ice, however, was towed and in "needles" and a good steamer have no difficulty in working through it. Major Moodie reports that despite the conditions which have prevailed no serious crimes have been committed in the far North since his last report.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—A bulletin on the estimated yield and quality of field crops in Canada was given out by the Census and Statistics Office yesterday. The returns are based upon actual threshing results, so far as these have been obtained. The average yield of wheat is estimated at 17 1-2 bushels per acre, indicating a total production of 115,651,000 bushels; oats, 33.7 bushels per acre, total production 267,651,000 bushels; barley, 29.0 bushels per acre, total production 50,723,000 bushels; and rye, 18.8 bushels per acre, total production 1,889,000 bushels.

The yield of peas is estimated at 7,178,000 bushels; grains, 1,182,000 bushels buckwheat, 7,365,000 bushels; mixed grains, 19,113,000 bushels, flax seed 1,575,000 bushels, and corn, for husking, 21,007,000 bushels. Potatoes average 145.4 bushels per acre, with total production 73,229,000 bushels, turnips and other roots, 309.7 bushels per acre, total production, 81,075,000 bushels.

Hay and clover are estimated at 1.4 tons per acre, the total yield being 11,642,000 tons, and fodder corn 10.9 tons per acre, total production 2,835,000 tons.

BELOW FORMER ESTIMATE.

The yield of wheat as estimated from the condition of the crops at the end of August is not maintained by the threshing results, the total yield of wheat as now estimated being 3 1-2 bushels per acre less, or a diminution in the total production as then estimated, of 9,039,000 bushels; but the drop is almost entirely due to the returns from the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where climatic influences appear to have had greater effect upon the yield than were indicated by the appearance of the crops at the end of August. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the estimated yield of wheat is 95,818,000 bushels; of oats, 103,481,000 bushels, and of barley, 26,362,000 bushels.

New York, Oct. 12.—Three hundred feet above busy Broadway yesterday afternoon, on the roof of No. 42, a group of yachtsmen, marine engineers and others witnessed what they all agreed was a startling demonstration of the latest thing in marine propulsion— the American vertebrate propeller, the principle of which has been described before.

It consists of three flat metal blades, each measuring 6 by 11 inches, hinged together, and which operate under the middle of the boat with a fish tail motion, in a trough or sluice formed by twin keels which extend fore and aft to within a short distance of the stem and stern.

In a tank that is 101 feet long, 42 inches wide and holding water 22 inches deep floated a model of a battleship 13 feet long, 16 inches beam and about eight inches draft, equipped with the new propeller. A half-horsepower motor, installed in the boat alongside the engines, was supplied with direct electric current by six little wheels travelling on three overhead copper wires, connected and controlled by a switch at one end of the tank.

At a signal the engineer turned on the power, instantly the boat gathered headway, traversing the one hundred foot tank in just nine seconds. Then the astonishing thing happened. By the simple turn of the switch she stopped as if a brake were applied, and in a moment, with her engines reversed, she was speeding back to the starting point —something that would have been impossible with an ordinary propeller, engineers say. Those who are behind the new invention believe that an ocean liner equipped with this device located amidships would not only be free from vibration, but the propeller, working always in solid water, would drive her at phenomenal speed, with no danger of "racing."

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Major J. W. Collins of this city, who was spending the night at Markham, brings news of a strange mixture of winter and summer at that town this morning. Last night they had a pretty heavy frost out there, and this morning there was half an inch of ice in some pails. Yet when Major Collins awoke this morning he heard the robins singing away in the trees, just as though it was the middle of summer.

These red-breasted fellows rather give the lie to the old nursery rhyme, which goes;

The north wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow,
And what will the robin do then,
poor thing?

He'll sit in the barn
To keep himself warm,
And hide his head under his wing,
poor thing.

Mother Goose will have to get out a new edition to read something like this:

He'll sit in the trees,
Enjoying the breeze,
And whistle to keep himself warm,
bold thing!

The Observatory reports frost in general throughout Western Ontario last night. Toronto had four degrees, while Parry Sound enjoyed quite a touch of winter, with twelve degrees. Port Stanley had six degrees of it.

In Eastern Ontario the thermometer just hit the freezing point, and no frost was experienced. The weather man promises warmer weather today.

Winnipeg, Oct. 10.—The biggest movement of wheat in the history of the Canadian West in one month has been recorded for September, when 11,018 cars of grain were inspected at Winnipeg. Of this total 6,600 cars were handled by the C.P.R., and 3,885 cars by the Canadian Northern Railway. This movement of wheat alone means that 16,529,350 bushels was forwarded, or in other words, about one-eleventh of the estimated total to be marketed.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Story with a Moral

The other day a man travelling on a shore line train noticed, protruding from an overhead rack, a dress suit case which he recognized as belonging to a friend. He knew that his friend always got off at the station which they had just passed, and as he was not in the seat the conclusion was inevitable that he had jumped off the train and forgotten it.

The man called the conductor and explained the case to him. After some discussion, and a mild protest on the part of the conductor, that it was not a part of his duty, the suit case was put off at the next station, with instructions to send it back on the first tarin the other way.

The man, feeling that he had done an able and friendly act, settled down for the rest of his journey.

But not for long! The face of his friend—who had been in the smoker, and who happened on that particular afternoon to be going on to New London to attend a dinner party—loomed before him.

The moral of this is, of course, quite evident.

Be sure you're right and then mind your own business.

Eastern League Baseball

Montreal, Oct. 7.—It is nip and tuck as to whether the city of Montreal, will have Eastern League baseball next year. The franchise is for sale. An offer has been made by a local syndicate, but up to the present the price is not high enough to suit the gentlemen who are looking after the affairs for the present, and who desire to have the best possible bargain for the creditors.

It is said that the offer by the local syndicate, which would keep the franchise in Montreal, is ten thousand dollars.

The people looking after the business till the actual liquidators come into power, seem to think that they should have at least fifteen thousand dollars.

One of the officers today said: "The company which backed the club will go into liquidation, but you can state positively, that if the creditors will only be a little patient, they will receive one hundred cents on the dollars for every just claim."

The

Plow Woman

By ELEANOR GATES,

Author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl."

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"I ate back there," said Lounsbury, dismounting, "but I'll stop off for awhile just the same." As he slipped the reins over his horse's head Marylyn remembered the meal she had abandoned and started homeward. The storekeeper, leading his mount, strode away beside her.

Dallas clucked to the mules.

"Ain't you comin'?" called her father. "W'y, my gal, you worked 'nough this mornin'."

"I'll keep at it just a little longer," she answered.

"We don' hear ev'ry day thet we live on a town site with a railroad a-comin'," Lancaster said, following her a few steps. "Better come."

Dallas did not reply. When she was some rods farther on her father called to her again.

"Come, Dallas," he urged, "an' stop plowin' up th' streets."

She shook her head, slapped the reins along Ben and Betty's dusty backs and leaned guidingly on the handles of the plow. And as she traveled slowly riverward Simon trotted close behind, tossing his stubby horns at the red of her underskirt and bawling wearily.

CHAPTER II.

BEFORE Dallas reached the end of her furrow she knew that for at least some days to come her work on the plowed strip must cease. Far and wide frontiersmen may have heard of the railroad's coming, and their first move would be, perhaps had been, a rush to the land office to file upon quarter sections touching the survey. And so no hour dared be wasted before her father started on his long deferred trip. The claim on the peninsula—the claim which the storekeeper had named as the terminus of the proposed line, as the probable site for a new town—must at once be legally theirs.

When the mules were turned eastward again Dallas brought them up for a breathing spell and, going apart a little distance, sat down, her knees between her hands. A short space of time had made incredible changes in their plans, in the possibilities of their prairie home. Before the cutting of the last two sods there had stretched ahead only a succession of uneventful years whose milestones would be the growing record of beeves and bushels, but now—she could not have credited her senses had it not been for a glimpse of Lounsbury's horse industriously cropping beside the lean-to.

She looked across at the shack, squatting on a gentle rise at the center of the claim as if it had fled there for refuge out of the grassy sea whose dry waves lapped up to its very door. Its two small windows looking riverward, the narrow door of warped lumber between and the shock roof of meadow grass held down by stones gave it the appearance of a grotesque human head that was peering from out the plain. As Dallas for the first time noted the curious resemblance the shack seemed to smile back at her—a wise, reassuring smile.

A moment later the north wind hooded the sky with clouds, putting the head in gloom. She got to her feet and hastened toward the plow. So brief had been her meeting with the storekeeper that immediately following it his features had escaped her. Now she recalled them and thought that she recalled that when he had accosted her they had worn a mocking expression. What if her father in his sudden excitement and concern should tell Lounsbury that the claim was not yet filed upon; should confide in this stranger, who might then take advantage of the ignorance, age and crippled condition of the section boss! Hurriedly she unhitched Ben and Betty, hung their bridles on the hames and turned the team loose to graze. Then she started homeward with Simon close upon her heels, and as she crossed the cloud darkened claim she glanced again at the shack. Its windows were in shadow, its door almost obscured. There was a smirk on its twisted face.

But when, entering the house, she met Lounsbury's kind, level look the distrust she had felt unconsciously vanished.

He was seated astride a bench to the left of the fireplace, his hat flung down in front of him, his shoulders against the wall, his booted legs thrust out restfully across the floor. Dallas, seeing him out of the saddle for the first time, was struck by his splendid length, next by his heaviness—a round but muscular heaviness that she had never noted in a Texan. Leaning back with folded arms, he showed, however, despite his weight and rotundity, the pliance and the litheness of the westerner. His hair was dark and thick and worn in a careless part, his throat was bronzed above the lacings of his shirt, his face clean shaven, somewhat square, yet full, and set with blue eyes that showed an abiding glint of merriment.

If Dallas as she crossed the sill formed with the swift keenness of the plainswoman a new and truer estimate of Lounsbury, he, saluting cordially, failed not to measure her. The dirt floored shack, partitioned by Navajo blankets and furnished with unplaned benches, was a background totally unsuited to Marylyn's delicate beauty, but for the elder daughter of the section boss its very rude simplicity seemed strangely fine and fitting.

Many women had come under the storekeeper's notice during his frontier life—roughly reared women of pure ways who toiled and bore with the patience of beasts, the women of the army, matching in dress and habits those he had known as a boy, and last of all the kind that always follows in the track of soldier, scout and gambler. Yet never before on the sundown side of the Mississippi had he seen one who possessed along with the reserve a lonely bringing up enjoins the dignity and poise that are counted the fruits of civilization.

"It's good blood," he said to himself, "and"—with a glance at the section boss—"it's from the mother's side."

Lancaster at that moment was truly anything but a picture of repose. His season of delight over the morning's news had been brief and was now succeeded by thorough disquiet. He hobbled to and fro from the hearth, where hung a pail of fragrant coffee, to the farther front window. Lounsbury remarked his evident worry and, not understanding it, bent down inquiringly toward Marylyn.

She was seated on a buffalo robe before the fire zealously tending the coffee. As she felt the storekeeper's look upon her she glanced up, and, meeting his eyes, something other than the firelight swept her throat, neck and brow with crimson touch.

"There's no fretting in that quarter," was Lounsbury's mental comment. He turned on the bench to face Dallas.

She was standing quietly beside the warped door, her arms hanging tensely at her side, her chin up, her eyes gazing straight at him, and in them as well as in her whole attitude Lounsbury read determination and anxiety.

"What's the matter, I wonder," he thought. He leaned toward her, resting an elbow on the bench. "You're getting ready for spring seeding, Miss Lancaster," he said.

"Yes."

The section boss giggled nervously. "Ef th' town was right here it wouldn' make no difference t' Dallas. Ah'll bet she'll spen' th' winter shellin' cawn fer plantin' an' pickin' cockle outen th' wheat." He fell to tugging at his goatee.

Again there was silence. Then, with a deep breath, Dallas straightened to speak. It was borne to her of a sudden that they were in need of one in whom they might confide, of one from whom good advice might come. She felt impelled to tell this stalwart young man, whose eyes read kindness and whose face read right, who seemed to bear them nothing but good will, that they had not filed the claim, and then—

The fire crackled cozily, the blackened pail steamed from the crosspiece. Lounsbury spread out his hands before the blaze. "I wish I lived on a quarter, like you folks," he said. "I hate the dickering in a store. Been at it ten years. Was in the fur business at first—bought from the Indians and the skin hunters up and down. Well, the country got into my blood. You get the west, you know, and it's the only disease out here that you can't shake. So I've stayed, and I guess I'll keep a-staying. But sometimes I get a notion to throw my stores up and go into the cow business or farming."

Dallas sank back, checked not by Lounsbury's words, but by her father. The section boss, one hand behind a hairy ear, was glowering at the storekeeper. "Eh, what?" he asked suspiciously.

Monkeys Like Scrapping.

"Monkeys are in a class by themselves," said the circus man. "If one of them has red hair he is sure to be a dandy scrapper. The best fighter is always the leader. They hang together and bow and scrape before the boss just like a good many people. Monkeys with red faces and flat heads will whip the life out of those smaller than they are, but will run like the wind when it comes to an even break. A monkey riot is a funny spectacle. Even in the same cage you will find groups herded together as if there was some class distinction and the lines were drawn tightly. If two of the big ones come together in a row the others generally stand off and let them have it out, but if any of the little ones get to scrapping then the father and mother are apt to mix in, and the next step is a general row. We separate them by turning on the hose and punish them by locking up the den so that they cannot get any peanuts from the crowd and hold back their meals. This plan puts them on their good behavior for awhile at least. The monkey likes to eat and likes to be noticed."

Slightly Mixed.

They had just set up housekeeping and were working on the plan of economy. The bathtub needed a coat of varnish. He promised to attend to it if she would order the varnish.

"You'll find the varnish in the closet with the groceries, dear," she said a day or so later, "and the can opener in the knife drawer."

He opened the can and, according to his contract, applied the coat of varnish and then left it to dry.

The soup for dinner that day had to be abandoned, for somehow it possessed a peculiar paint shop odor that was nauseating. After dinner he took her to inspect his work on the bathtub. Now that it had dried it had a certain unnatural appearance. The top and sides were streaked, and here and there little lumps clung to it.

"The man said that was the best varnish," she explained, taking up the can of varnish for an examination, "but—why, dear, you have varnished the bathtub with the ox tail soup!"

"Then it was the varnish we ate, dear," he added, horror stricken. —Lippincott's.

A Model Hotel "Boots."

It was in a Dublin hotel, and as I closed the bedroom door, says a writer in the Manchester Guardian, I noticed that the end of one of my boot laces was inside the room, the boot to which it was attached having been placed as usual outside. When I awoke next morning the boot lace end was still there, and I opened the door expecting to find that the boots had not been cleaned, but I was wrong. A very careful hotel servant, a very model among "boots," had found the lace tightly gripped by the door and rather than disturb me had carefully removed it from the lace holes and carried away the boot. Presently I heard a quiet noise outside the door. The model boots had brought my boots back again and was industriously relacing that one which he had unlaced.

Cheese in the Middle Ages.

Cheese must have been a rather dear or scarce article of food in 1502, for it is recorded in the "Black Books" of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn that at Easter term, 1502, it was "agreed by the governors and benchers this term that if any one of the society shall hereafter cut cheese immoderately at the time of dinner or supper or shall give cheese to any servant or to any other or shall carry it away from the table at any time he shall pay 4 pence for each offense The butlers of the society shall present such defaulters weekly under pain of expulsion from office."—Law Times.

"No; it contains acid. I test the engagement ring."

Not Very Funny.

"I did my best to be entertaining," said the young man in a voice of sorrow.

"Did you succeed?"

"I'm afraid not. I recited Hamlet's soliloquy. She looked at me reproachfully for several seconds and then exclaimed, "I don't think that's very funny!"—London Telegraph.

BREACH OF PROMISE.

Manner In Which the Law Treats It In Different Countries.

England is the best place, from the plaintiff's point of view, for a breach of promise action. All other countries seem to regard with grave suspicion any attempt to recover monetary compensation for the loss of a prospective husband, and unless the plaintiff has a very strong case indeed it is never worth her while to carry her grief into the law courts.

In France breach of promise cases are rare, for the simple reason that the law requires the plaintiff to prove that she has suffered pecuniary loss. Now, this is not an easy thing to do on the part of the lady, especially in a country where a girl without a dot—that is, a marriage portion—has a poor chance of finding a husband. Holland and Austria have adopted the French system, and the result has been about the same. Breach of promise actions are rare, the injured damsels or their relatives usually taking the law into their own hands.

Practical Germany, as might be expected, has perhaps the best method for solving this problem. When a young couple become engaged they have to go through a public betrothal ceremony that ought to knock all the shyness out of them. In the local town hall the pair declare their affection, willingness to marry, etc., ending by signing a collection of documents that apparently leave no loophole for escape. But if either party to the contract wishes to withdraw another journey is undertaken to the town hall and another collection of documents signed, witnessed and sealed. Then the authorities determine the question of compensation—should it be claimed. In this connection it may be said that the man can and often does claim a solatium for his wounded feelings. The usual award is one-fifth of the marriage dowry. It is easy to understand when all this is remembered how loath the young people of Germany are to break their betrothal oaths.

As the law of Italy affords little or no protection whatever to jilted damsels or swains, it is not surprising that the stiletto should be the favorite mode of deciding breach of promise cases. The Italian law demands that the person suing for the breach shall produce a written promise to marry from the defendant; otherwise the action cannot proceed. This difficulty is almost insurmountable, and the Italian judges are seldom troubled to adjudicate between one time lovers.

To bring an action for breach of promise of marriage against a reigning monarch is an achievement, but it has been done, and by an English lady. Miss Jenny Mighell sued the sultan of Johore, and as there was a doubt whether the dusky one was actually a reigning monarch the case was allowed to come into court, but the judge quickly disposed of the action by ruling it inadmissible for the reason referred to, and Miss Mighell was nonsuited.

It is remarkable that one of the two actions which have brought verdicts for £10,000 each to the plaintiffs should have had for its defendant the editor of a matrimonial paper. The second case was between a well known actress and the eldest son of an earl.—London Tit-Bits.

Tune For Tune.

Frederick the Great made generous presents to all musicians except flute players. He played the flute remarkably well himself. A famous flutist once asked permission to play to the king, hoping that Frederick would show his appreciation of his skill by some valuable gift. Frederick listened attentively while he played a difficult piece. "You play very well," he said, "and I will give you a proof of my satisfaction."

So saying he left the room. The musician waited, guessing at the probable nature of the proof. Presently the king returned with his own flute and played the same piece. Then he bade his visitor "Good day," saying, "I have had the pleasure of hearing you, and it was only fair that you should hear me."

Beyond His Aid.

A woman who had a telephone in her apartment called up the telephone company and asked that the service be discontinued. The man who took her message tried to be exceedingly polite.

"We are sorry to lose you," he said. "Are you dissatisfied with anything?"

"I am," said the woman emphatically.

"I am very sorry," said the man. "Perhaps we can help you. What is it you do not like?"

"Single blessedness," said the woman. "I am going to be married tomorrow."

"Ah," said the polite clerk, "you are past our aid. Goodby."

A Knotty Problem.

"It's no use," said the young man with heavy rimmed eyeglasses. "I can't get this political economy straight."

"What's the trouble?" asked the professor.

"I can't discover whether a lot of people go broke because we have hard times or whether we have hard times because a lot of people go broke."

A Painful Dilemma.

Willie—What's a dilemma?

Johnny—Well, it's when you can't sit down because your dad licked you for going swimming and you can't stand up because a crab bit your toe.—Illustrated Bits.

It is said that the average man can get along with 300 words, but unfortunately she generally hands him more than that.—Puck.

AN OLD INDIAN MYTH

It Tells a Curious Story About the Creation.

MOUNT TAHOMA MADE FIRST.

Then Came the Trees, the Birds, the Fishes and All the Animals, With the Grizzly Bear the Last and the Greatest of All—The Origin of Man.

The Indians say that the Great Spirit made Mount Tahoma the first of all. Boring a hole in the sky, using a large stone as an auger, he pushed down snow and ice until they reached the desired height, then stepped from cloud to cloud down to the great icy pile and from it to the earth, where he planted the first trees by merely putting his finger into the soil here and there. The sun began to melt the snow, the snow produced water, the water ran down the side of the mountain, refreshed the trees and made rivers. The Great Spirit gathered the leaves that fell from the trees, blew upon them, and they became birds. He took a stick and broke it into pieces. Of the small end he made fishes, and of the middle of the stick he made animals, the grizzly bear excepted, which he formed from the big end of the stick, appointing him to be master over all the others.

Indeed, this animal grew so large, strong and cunning that the Creator somewhat feared him and so hollowed out Mount Tahoma as a wigwam for himself where he might reside while on earth in the most perfect security and comfort. So the smoke was soon to be seen curling up from the mountain where the Great Spirit and his family lived and still live, though their hearth fire is alight no longer, now that the white man is in the land. This was thousands of snows ago.

After this came a late and severe springtime, in which a memorable storm blew up from the sea, shaking the huge lodge to its base. The Great Spirit commanded his daughter, then little more than an infant, to go up and bid the wind to be still, cautioning her at the same time not to put her head out into the blast, but only to thrust out her little arm and make a sign before she delivered her message.

The eager child hastened up to the hole in the roof, did as she was told and then turned to descend, but her curiosity impelled her to look at the forbidden world outside and the rivers and trees, at the far ocean and the great waves that the storm had made as hoary as the forest when the snow is on the firs. So she stopped and put out her head to look. Instantly the storm took her by the long hair and blew her down to the earth, down the mountain side, over the smooth ice and soft snow, down to the land of the grizzly bears.

Now, the grizzly bears were then somewhat different from what they are at the present time. In appearance, it is true, they were much the same, but they walked then on their hind legs like men and talked and carried clubs, using the fore limbs as men use their arms. At the foot of the mountain, at the place where the child was blown to, lived a family of grizzlies. The father grizzly was returning from the hunt with his club on his shoulder and a young elk in his hand when he saw the shivering little waif lying on the snow with her hair all tangled about her.

The old grizzly, pitying and wondering at the strange, forlorn creature, lifted it up and carried it in to his wife to see what should be done. She, too, was pitiful and fed it from her own breast, bringing it up as one of their family. So the daughter of the Great Spirit grew up, and the eldest son of the old grizzly married her, and their offspring was neither grizzly nor Great Spirit, but man.—Forest and Stream.

An Original Oath of Allegiance.

In the old days when the Spanish province of Aragon was a proud and independent monarchy the people used when choosing their king the following singular form of election:

"We, the freeborn inhabitants of the ancient kingdom of Aragon, who are equal to you, Don Philip, and something more, elect you to be our king on condition that you preserve to us our rights and privileges. If in this you should fail we own you for our king no longer."

The Red Ferns.

"Stop the auto!"

"But, sir"—

"I think I saw some red ferns."

"Better lemme keep on, boss," advised the chauffeur earnestly. "Them red ferns is the local constable's whiskers."

The Open Window.

The best part of a modern house is its windows. To keep these open day and night and to make the air inside approach as nearly as possible the air outside should be the first business of the housekeeper.

A Precaution.

"Every man is the architect of his own fortune," quoted the wise guy.

"Yes, but he wants to keep solid with the building inspectors," added the simple mug.

Reason Enough.

The Butler—What makes the missus in such a bad humor this morning? The Maid—Some woman told her a secret last night, and she's forgotten it.—London Telegraph.

The web of our life is a mingled yarn, good and ill together—Shakespeare.

A MICROSCOPE.

How It Opens Up the Wonders of the World of Nature.

If you want to keep your boy out of mischief, give him a microscope, not one of the elaborate, intricate, expensive affairs that the bacteriologists use when hunting for germs, but a common one with two or three lenses that revolve on a pivot and fold into a cover which protects them from injury when carried in the pocket.

There is no better way of interesting the boy in the wonders of the natural world than this simple contrivance, which opens to his eyes visions of a universe of which he knew nothing. Seen through the microscope, the most insignificant flower becomes a thing of wonderful beauty. The interior of a nasturtium is a fairy cavern, showing a dozen different tints and hues of color, with dainty white stalactites and stalagmites almost touching each other midway between floor and roof.

He will find monsters, too, for the head of an ant seen through a microscope is a terrible object, and he cannot help thinking what an awful aspect such a creature would present if it were as big as a horse. He has heard about the creatures that are to be found in water from a stagnant pool. He will find them for himself and show them to other boys, and all his crowd will become interested and bring in things to look at and wonder about. He may not develop into a Darwin, but if he has any faculty of observation at all it will be sharpened by what he sees, and he will learn that there is more in nature than what we discern on the surface.

SILENT CRANES.

A Nature Story by One of the Mount Taurus Climbers.

The mountaineer glanced complacently at his hard calves.

"We climbers," he said, "up there on the white heights see lots of things worth seeing. I tell you we could if we wanted to outdo the nature fakirs without deviating from the truth. For instance, take the Mount Taurus cranes. Do you know the cranes of Mount Taurus?

"Well, these birds are great chatterers. They chatter, chatter, chatter, as they fly. Hanged if they're not worse than women! Up on the heights the eagles lie in wait for them, hidden behind crags or ice blocks. They don't have to show themselves at all. Their ears, not their eyes, tell them of the cranes' approach, and, swooping down on those bundles of feathers and noise, they take home a mess of crane for dinner.

"With their chatter and babble and gossip the cranes of Mount Taurus give themselves away in that still air to the eagles, and in all eagle households crane is the staple dish.

"But the old cranes fly without a sound—never a word out of them as they sail and wheel in the blue air. That seems against nature, and it is against nature. The old cranes to restrain their innate love of talk fly with large stones in their mouths.

"Shoot one of these crafty and silent birds and you will find his beak tightly closed upon a large stone."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

His Plan Was Simple.

Frederick the Great once requested his generals to submit to him plans of campaign for a supposititious case. Hans Joachim von Ziethen, the famous cavalry general, produced a queer diagram in black ink. It represented a big blot in the center, intersected by two black lines, whose four terminals ended each in a smaller blot. The king was furious and upbraided his old comrade in arms bitterly for what he considered disrespect.

In explanation Von Ziethen said: "Why, your majesty, I am the large blot in the center. The enemy is any one of the four smaller blots. He can march upon me from the right or left, from the front or rear. If he does I simply advance upon any of the four lines and lick him where I find him."

Frederick was satisfied.

Statistics.

In all probability the first administrative act of the first regular government was to number its fighting men and to ascertain as nearly as was possible what amount of taxation could be levied on the rest of the community. As human society grew more highly organized there can be no doubt that a very considerable body of official statistics must have come into existence. We know that such was the case in Greece, Rome and Egypt, but it was not until within the last two or three centuries that systematic use of the information available began for purposes of investigation rather than mere administration.

Businesslike England.

The English are not a revengeful people. They forget everything after a fight in their eagerness to trade with their late enemy. It is not so much the spirit of forgiveness of sins which prompts them as the spirit of pushing trade. That is the central impulse in their being.—Dublin Irish Homestead.

Where He Was Slow.

"Alexander the Great conquered the entire world."

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "He conquered it, but some of us moderns could have shown him a thing or two about making it pay dividends."

Her Adored One.

Father—You can't have him! Daughter—Oh, papa, you once said you could deny me nothing! Father—Well, he comes as near being "nothing" as anything I know of.

How to Tell

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well.

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore,—that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirit droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills" writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles and joints, lack of appetite and loss of sleep. Reach the cause. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands 25c at all dealers.

Yesterday Chief Howard took the firemen in rigs to the residence of Mr. G. W. Hatton, North Monaghan, to familiarize them with the fire fighting service in connection with Mr. Hatton's House. The house is just outside the corporation and Mr. Hatton has made preparations to combat the flames in case fire should break out.

At the Theatre

The musical extravaganza, "Babes in Toyland," was one of, if not the best high-class musical comedies ever presented before an audience at the Grand During the three acts the entire audience was in a fit of laughter, especially at the witty sayings and acting of Ian Barnaby, who formerly played the part of the "Gingerbread Man." No doubt the Grand this year will supply theatre-goers with the best plays ever presented in Canada. That startling exhibition of cow-boy life, viz., "Out in Idaho," will be played at the Grand on Saturday matinee and night and no doubt a large crowd will be present to listen to one of the rarest treats in the operatic line.

Young Boy Got Two Bears In Chandos

Chandos, Oct. 14.—Rare courage and unshaken nerve in hunting bears was shown yesterday and on Monday by the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. Willis Johnson, when in each day he shot an old one, losing no time in despatching his game in each case.

On Monday the father and his two sons, one 17 years and the other 15 years of age were on their way to a field to stack marsh hay. The younger boy was carrying a gun and in advance of his brother and father. He was suddenly surprised by seeing a short distance ahead of him, an old she bear with two cubs. Picking out the former he fired, wounding him. It approached. The boy's nerve did not fail him for his bullet went true to the neck, fatally wounding the bear, which was quickly put out of misery. The father and brother killed the two cubs.

BAGGED ANOTHER.

The younger Johnson and a companion, Willie Kilbourne, left home yesterday to look for sport in the woods, but after a long tramp their efforts brought them nothing. They finally sat down on a log to rest and while absorbed in conversation they heard a rustling in the bush close at hand. Carefully watching for a short time what was their astonishment to see three bears, only one of which was a cub. They picked out the older ones and were successful in reaching vital spots. The cub escaped. These are only two instances to show that bears are unusually plentiful this fall.

"There's a Reason"

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

Wedding Bells

TANNER—CHILTON.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. John's church yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, when Miss Mary Chilton, niece of Mrs. Chas. Simmons, Thomas street, was united in marriage to Mr. Phillip Tanner, son of the late Mr. Jos. Tanner, of Chandos, Rev. Canon Davidson performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by the immediate friends of both parties. The bride was attended by Miss Theresa Simmons, and Mr. Victor Tanner, brother of the groom, was best man. A dainty luncheon was served afterwards at the home of Mrs. Simons, 272 Thomas street. Many handsome presents were received, among them being a carving set from the Girls' Guild of St. John's church, of which the bride was a member.

The latter wore a travelling suit of blue English broadcloth with hat to match. Miss Simmons was attired in a suit of brown panama cloth and also had a hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Tanner will reside in Chandos.

Runaway Boy Was Returned to His Home

It will be remembered that an article appeared in the Morning Times a couple of days ago, and copied into the evening papers, in reference to a boy being found sleeping in the packing box in the alleyway adjoining The Times building. That morning while the boy's brother was eating his breakfast he saw the item in The Times, and went to the police station and took the youngster home. Thus the boy ran away, fell asleep, was discovered and returned to his home, before the general public were fully awake.

Annual District Meeting at Bridgenorth Yesterday; The Attendance Was Large

The annual district meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist churches for Peterborough district was held Tuesday in the Methodist church at Bridgenorth and proved a most interesting and profitable event. The churches of the district were well represented, four "bus loads going from Peterborough, one from Lakefield and one from Warsaw, while other churches had delegates present.

The morning session was opened with devotional exercises led by Mrs. (Rev.) J. B. Aird of Lakefield, and Mrs. (Rev.) E. A. Pearson of Peterborough. The principal business in the morning was the receiving of reports from the auxiliaries and mission bands in the district, after which there was a memorial service led by Mrs. J. Speer.

At the afternoon session opening exercises and testimonial meeting were led by Mrs. (Rev.) A. A. Campbell and Mrs. J. Carlisle. Mrs. Lightfoot gave a reading and Mrs. J. Kendry of George street Methodist church on "Echoes from the Board Meeting." Mrs. W. G. Henderson gave a map talk on "Japanese Homes," after which there was a mission band conference led by Mrs. Jas. Kendry, and the question drawer conducted by Mrs. A. R. Campbell.

In the evening the chair was occupied by Rev. S. Craikshanks, who gave an address of welcome which was replied to by Mrs. J. K. Moore. A selection by the Bridgenorth choir was much enjoyed. Mrs. Kilgour gave the organizer's report, and the members of the George street auxiliary illustrated the right and the wrong way of conducting the "Watch Tower." Rev. W. G. Henderson of Charlotte street church gave an address and a selection by the choir brought the program to a close.

The delegates were most hospitably entertained by the Bridgenorth ladies.

Narrow Escape from Instant Death

On Saturday last Mr. Thos. Honey of Little Britain, narrowly escaped being killed by falling from the mow of his barn to the floor, a distance of about 36 feet. Mr. Honey is a well-known thresher in that vicinity. The accident happened thus: He climbed up into the mow to open a ventilator to allow some of the dust to escape and just as he was about to pull it open, the board on which he was standing slipped and he fell to the floor, striking against the threshing machine and inflicting a deep cut in the back of his head. He also received several bruises, and was unconscious for about 3 hours. A doctor was sent for and found a slight fracture of the skull and a severe shaking up. He will be confined to his room for some weeks, but his speedy recovery is looked for.—Lindsay Warder.

Mr. H. C. Winch is Home From Visit to New York

The many friends of Mr. H. C. Winch were glad to welcome him home yesterday morning after his absence. Mr. Winch has been visiting with friends in New York and Brooklyn, and while there he did his best to take in all the sights. He visited Coney Island and Rockaway, and he also was permitted to go through Sing Sing prison, where he saw the dinner table set for 1248 prisoners. It was a great sight he said. Mr. Winch had a fine time while away, and everyone who knows him will believe it.

Mr. Winch indulged in sea bathing and liked it fine, and he took to the New York life like an old timer.

On his way home he visited his nephew, Mr. C. H. Winch, in Montreal, for a week, and took in the sights there, but he had to get home in time to rest up before going out with the Kawartha Lake Hunt Club on November 1st.

Landlady Charged with Housebreaking

The case of Mrs. Wilson, Wm. Against Mrs. Taylor of Kirkfield, was continued yesterday afternoon in Police Court, and was again adjourned until to-day at two o'clock.

Mrs. Wilson the defendant, was the only witness examined and she said that she had lived in the house for the past 6 years and after the Carew was destroyed she and her husband locked up the house and went to Omemee to work. In the meantime Mrs. Taylor came to town for the rent, and when they were not in the house, she broke in. Mrs. Wilson returned to town and found Mrs. Taylor in the house. She refused to let Mrs. Wilson in, saying she owed her $18 for rent. Mrs. Wilson claimed that she only owed $5 and offered her the money, but she would not accept it, so Mrs. Wilson returned to Omemee, and during her absence Mrs. Taylor sold all the furniture and nailed up all the doors and windows. When Mrs. Wilson returned she was surprised to find all her furniture gone and the house all nailed up. The furniture that Mrs. Taylor alleges was stolen was valued at about $200 by Mrs. Wilson.—Watchman-Warder.

The Government and Zam-Buk

Survey out from Fort William Takes this Wonderful Balm.

Zam-Buk the flavorite household balm is now adopted as "The Doctor" by leading parties in surveying various parts of the Dominion lands.

Mr. Henry Hall writing from Fort William says:—"Having proved how beneficial Zam-Buk is in cases of cuts, skin injuries and diseases, I determined to keep a supply handy. Being engaged to go on a Survey I thought it would be a most useful thing to take along. I obtained a supply in Fort William, and very well it was I did so. I may say that pretty nearly every day it was called into requisition by one or other of the party for cuts, bruises, burns, or some injury or other. It is wonderful how quickly Zam-Buk takes the soreness out of cuts, burns, bruises and injuries, and on our survey it earned golden opinions from all who had occasion to try it. I have found it very fine for skin disease, and I can strongly recommend it as a household balm."

Mr. Lascelles Scott, one of the leading Government analysts says,—"I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk which in my opinion is excellently adapted for skin injuries and diseases.

Zam-Buk cures cuts, scalds, burns, bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, chapped places, cold sores, blood poisoning, chronic abscesses, etc., As an embrocation it relieves rheumatism neuralgia, and sciatica. Mr. Stratton in South Monaghan the chairman and the meeting closed with rousing cheers for Mr. Stratton, and the usual loyal recognition of the King.

Centerville Greets Stratton

The meeting of South Monaghan electors at Centerville on Tuesday evening, called together by the friends of Mr. J. R. Stratton in the district, was the largest and most successful meeting that has been held in that section of South Monaghan for many years. The meeting was organized by the election of Mr. J. C. Campbell to the chair.

Mr. Hall, the retiring member for West Peterborough, thanked the meeting cordially for the hearty support which the electors of South Monaghan had accorded to him in the past, and said that nothing of circumstances in a business way over which he had no control, had prevented him from coming before them again for their approval and their support. However, they had a candidate a gentleman who commanded their support because of his former service to their interests, and he was glad to see that the old-time friends of Mr Stratton were rallying around that gentleman as of yore and he (the speaker) felt perfectly satisfied that as sure as the sun would go down on South Monaghan on October 26, Mr. Stratton would be their next representative in the House of Commons.

Mr J. R. Stratton made a vigorous speech, covering the issues before the electors, and concluded by saying that he believed they would vote as they believed they would vote for the administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and for himself. On October 26, and they need not have any doubt that he would be elected by a large majority, and that even if the city of Peterborough do not give him a good majority. He believed that his past record in their service in the legislature, and the assurance, was such as to invite the support and approval of every one who did and fair-minded man, irrespective of politics, and he could only pledge himself to renewed exertions in their behalf, and vigilant and faithful supervision of all the influences and ability he possessed to promote the welfare of the West Riding of Peterborough, and every citizen in it.

A vote of thanks was given to the chairman, three cheers for the ladies, Mr Stratton, the retiring member, Mr Hall, and the King, closing a very successful meeting.

If large attendance, enthusiastic response to the speeches delivered, and the hearty reception delivered, Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Liberal candidate, at his first city meeting in the Grand Opera House last night are an indication of the popular favour he is meeting, his prospects of election are excellent; The opera house was filled with a large and enthusiastic audience, and among them was a large number of ladies. The mottoes that adorned the opera house, indicative of the Liberal view of the situation were these; "Stratton, Peterborough's best friend," "Watch Canada grow under Liberal rule," "For Greater Canada, Laurier and Stratton," "Four more years of good government."

The platform was occupied by the chairman, Mr. J. Hartley, Hon. G. A. Cox, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Messrs. R. R. Hall, D. O'Connell, G. M. Roger, and A. McFarlane.

The speeches were vigorous and included a comprehensive review of public questions at issue in this campaign and the hearty, and, at times, enthusiastic applause that greeted telling points, showed that the large audience was heartily in sympathy with the cause advocated. Of course, much was made of the conditions of prosperity prevailing under Liberal and Conservative rule as a reason that the Liberal administration should be returned to power. Inevitably special interest centerd in the Liberal candidate, Hon. Mr. Stratton, and the hearty reception he received, and the applause that greeted the telling points of his brief but vigorous address, indicate that he stands high in popular favour and that his old friends that have stood by him through so many successful campaigns, had their old confidence in him, and stood at his back.

The meeting, from a party point of view, was a great success, and must be a great encouragement to Mr. Stratton and brighten his chances of success on October 26th.

After a few fitting remarks Mr. Hartley introduced the first speaker, Mr. A. McFarlane.

ANDREW McFARLANE.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane said that the people had a good recollection of all that had been done for the workingmen of the country, by the conservative government that had preceded 1896. They had given the workman the privilege of having a holiday at his own expense, and now to make him afraid. And that was the sum and substance of what had been contributed to the cause of labor by the people that Mr. Burnham wants us to restore to power. When the Liberal government came into office they found that the brave boys who were defending the honor of the Empire in South Africa, were wearing clothes made in sweatshops by poor women and girls who were forced to work for $1-2 cents an hour. They promptly took steps to remedy such a monstrous state of affairs. And as the result we have today statutory laws and government regulations which provided that the man or woman working on the government of Canada, should be paid the highest prevailing standard of wages—that a fair day's work should be followed by a fair day's wage. Mr. Burnham had pretended as a reason why he should be recorded the favor of the voters, the fact, as he alleged, he had been entrusted with affairs involving $100,000, and that in their behalf he had been "writing, writing." It did not take any very great ability to sign cheques, and to acknowledge the release of mortgages, but the people of Peterborough, knew that Mr. Burnham had never used his wealth to advance the public interests of Peterborough, or in a single instance to do anything that would provide employment for a working man. Mr. Stratton, on the contrary, had started life as a poor boy, he had built himself up among them, and he had always shared any prosperity that he attained with his fellow citizens. He (Mr. Stratton) had ever been foremost in putting up his own means in the enterprises that gave employment to the mechanics and the laboring men, and prosperity to the people of Peterborough. He was a man of themselves, in whom they had confidence. Whom they had proved by his performances, and them the people of this city and county were going to send to Ottawa on October 26th, by a good majority.

D. O'CONNELL.

Mr. D. O'Connell was given a good reception when he arose to address the audience. He said that the large audience present was a sure indication of the people's approval of the Liberal rule in Canada. He, personally, was well pleased to see so large an audience with such intelligent faces. He was sure that the gentleman who had represented this riding for upwards of twenty years would be returned on October 26th. The speaker referred to the presence of Hon. Mr. Emma and Mr. Gamey in Peterborough a few nights ago. In spite of the very thorough search made by the Conservatives since Mr. Hanna took office in Toronto, they could not point the finger at one item which was not correct in the administration of the Provincial Secretary's Department while it was under the jurisdiction of Mr. Stratton. Mr. O'Connell stated that Mr. Burnham had said that he was an honored man and should receive the support of the people of Peterborough. Mr. O'Connell stated that Mr. Burnham had lived and here all his life and the people of this city were capable of judging which of the two candidates was the best fitted to represent the riding. Continuing, the speaker said that in this riding the Liberals were endeavoring to carry on a clean campaign, while the Conservatives resorted to a campaign of slander.

Mr. O'Connell said that the civil service extended to all parts of this great Dominion and the government had expended on an average of $60,000,000 and during the twelve years, the Opposition had not been able to point their finger at anything but the payment of an extra few hundred dollars for knives, forms, etc., in fitting out a steamer. It must be expected that a few mistakes will be made by the servants of the government with so large an expenditure. Mr. O'Connell then enumerated a few of the scandals the Conservatives were guilty of previous to 1896 and which had driven them out of power.

He gave Hon. Clifford Sifton a high character and eulogized his statesmanship which he displayed to such benefit to Canada and especially to the great West, and he criticized the slandering statements of Hon. Mr. R. P. Roblin in this city a few weeks ago.

He said that the Conservative party, upon entering the present campaign had made a mistake, as they had always made mistakes, in the administration of affairs in Canada. He took up the charge recently made by Hon. Mr. Pugsley and stated that no sooner had the charge been made than Mr. Pugsley proved it to be a slander and a falsehood, as he had received the money three or four years before.

Mr. O'Connell referred to the Hon. Geo. E. Foster and his reckless, extravagant and one might say, dishonest action in connnection with the Union Trust Co., and his actions during the period when Sir McKenzie Bowell was premier of Canada.

MR. R. R. HALL.

Mr. Hall expressed his appreciation of hearty thanks to the people of West Peterborough, on the occasion of his election as member of Parliament four years ago. But on account of his business affairs he was unable to again represent Peterborough, and he had had the pleasure of

Seven Men Killed and Twenty-Three Injured Result of Explosion

(Special to The Times.)

Fort Collins, Col., Oct. 15.—Seven men were killed and twenty-three were injured, some probably fatally, by a premature explosion at Eagleside Lime quarry, 18 miles from here this afternoon. All the injured were brought to the hospital at Fort Collins on a special train. The blast went off in the face of forty men, some of whom were hurled a distance of 200 yards. The explosion was heard for miles around and ranchers and their wives hurried to the scene to give succor to the injured.

WM. MARTIN WANTS TO MAKE RESTITUTION TO THE TOWN

(Special to The Times.)

North Bay, Oct. 15.—That William Martin, jr., a former tax collector for this town, who was accused of embezzling the sum of $20,000 of the town's funds, should be set free to continue in his efforts at restitution, was the plea of counsel, Wm. White of Pembroke, the Crown's counsel did not object, and Mr. Justice Britton reserved his decision.

After Mr. White entered a plea of guilty and asked for suspended sentence, Martin, he said would devote his whole life and energy to making restitution. Counsel pointed out the many offices held by the accused for many years, entailing the handling of vast sums of money, causing conditions in which he might easily be involved unknowing ly.

All the property of the accused, of his father and of his wife had been turned over to the town and the council was not anxious to send him to prison. No injury to anyone would result and the ends of justice would be served by leniency which would return him to his wife and family and enable him to clear his reputation by restitution. Mr. Justice Brittain reserved judgment.

Melo-Dramatic Posters Must Come Down

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 15.—Sure enough a crusade against a certain class of theatre posters is underway. Mayor Oliver has drawn the attention of the police commissioners to a poster at the corner of Sherbourne and King streets, which in his opinion was too sensational. Staff Inspector Stevens is opposed to the present system employed in the city of medDying these pictures which permits them being put up with revolvers and other weapons cut out. He says all undue melodramatic posters should be eliminated. The inspector has been given full power in the matter and will put his objections into force.

DEODORIZERS NEEDED.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 15.—Straight home goes the local High school boy who comes to school with his clothes smelling of pipe and tobacco. "Students will be suspended as long as it takes them to get the smell out of their clothes," said Principal Leonard Young. "We mean exactly well what we say." The principal ruled that boys shall not smoke cigarettes, cigars, or pipes in the school or on their way to and from school, or carry the goods on their person.

Nurses Home was Entered Cash Box Taken

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—The Victorian Order of Nurses' Home here was entered yesterday afternoon or last night and the cash box and $40 taken. This morning one of the nurses upon looking out the window saw a cash box in the back yard, and an investigation showed it to be the tin cash box which the Lady superintendent had in her room. The money, receipts and other papers were all taken and no trace of the intruder is left.

Lad Missing Blood Clots were Found

(Special to The Times.)

Medicine Hat, Alta., Oct. 15.—Great anxiety of John S. Lehr of Josephburg, concerning the possible fate of his son John, who disappeared on September 24th last. No trace of his whereabouts can be found. He was eighteen years of age, and was greatly attached to his home so that it is highly improbable that he would leave on his own account. Rumors are afloat that he has met with foul play and the whole district is in a state of unrest. Blood clots were found beside a neighboring farmer's fence and examination of the horses and cattle in the field disclosed the fact that none of them had been injured. It was known that the lad was following a clue that had been discovered in connection with an incendiary fire which has destroyed his dwelling sometime previous.

$50,000 for Treating Tuberculosis

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 15.—Lt.-Col. Jeffrey Burland has donated the sum of $50,000 to erect a dispensary here for the treatment of tuberculosis in the Province of Quebec.

Conductor Met a Horrible Death

(Special to The Times.)

Hanover, Oct. 15.—While uncoupling a car in the railway yards here Chas. P. Clark, conductor of a mail train, met a terrible death here today. He was switching the mail train into the switch to make way for the east bound train when he slipped in between the cars to uncouple them. In some way his foot caught and he fell. The car wheels passed over him and mangled his body fearfully. He leaves a wife but no children. His father and all his brothers are also railway men.

Another Great Reception to Hon. R. L. Borden

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 15.—The reception to the Conservative leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, here tonight, was enthusiastic in the extreme. He was the chief speaker in Victoria Hall at Westmount, and the large auditorium was taxed to its utmost. This is the second time during the present campaign that the people of Montreal have had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Borden, and if cheers count for anything the hearts of the residential section of the Metropolis beats in unison with the Conservative doctrines and principles. Mr. Borden was accompanied by Mr. C. J. Doherty the Conservative candidate for St. Annes, and Mr. Louis Code.

Government Estimate is Now Modified

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 15.—The government's estimate as to the result of the polling on October 26th has been modified up to date. They now claim only 24 seats in Ontario, while they concede 15 seats to the Conservatives in Quebec. This estimate in Quebec is a little more generous than they would have given three weeks ago, and it is said was caused by the utter breakdown of the Liberal campaign at Yamaska, where there is a perfect stampede taking place against the Hon. Mr. Ouimet.

Charles Bailey, a Guelph lad, fell 35 feet from an apple tree and no bones were broken.

In celebration of the centenary of Evangelista Torricelli, the inventor of the barometer, a colossal barometer fifteen yards high and nearly a yard in width has been constructed by Father Alfani, the director of the Florence Observatory.

CRAZY MAN WITH RIFLE HAD AN ARM IN BASKET

(Special to The Times.)

St. Catharines, Oct. 15.—Somewhat of a sensation was caused in local police court circles this morning when an old man named Murray, walked into the police station and deposited a basket containing a woman's whole arm. Murray asked that the basket be guarded while he went out to try and dispose of an old rifle which was in his possession. He said that he found the arm in the mountain near St. David's. The man is slightly demented and the police are puzzled to know how he got possession of the arm.

TWO VERDICTS OF MANSLAUGHTER IN SOO MURDER CASES

(Special to The Times.)

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 15.—The Seighano murder trial ended this afternoon, and the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter against the prisoner, Achilo Seighano. W. G. Hirst, counsel for the prisoner, made a strong appeal, claiming self-defence as the cause, and said that the prisoner dealt the blow with a club, fearing for the safety of the life of his brother, Benny, who was in danger. Mr. Justice Latchford postponed the sentence.

VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER.

This morning Tony Mackie, a Finn from Michipicoten, was tried on a charge of murdering Isaac Saard at Glace Mine, last summer. The men were engaged in a fight in Saard's house, and both were evidently intoxicated. In the fight Saard was wounded eight times, and medical testimony showed that Saard came to his death as the result of wounds from a knife in the hands of Mackie. The jury returned a verdict of manslaughter. The judge deferred sentence until tomorrow.

Dynamited Places to Save the City

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct. 15.— Fire last night in three hours destroyed more than $500,000 worth of property. The blaze started in the rear of the Grand Hotel in Upper Main street. This large wooden structure burned like tinder, and the water pressure being low, the fire department could do nothing to stay the progress of the flames.

The fire swept on without check, extending both up and down Main street, on the east side, for two blocks. The flames finally stopped at the new brick building of Frankenburger and Newman, which together with its $65,000 stock of clothing was destroyed. From this point the flames jumped across Main street, to the large grocery of J. H. Angus, which was also destroyed. Advancing up Main street, in the direction of Castle Rock, several small business houses were wiped out, as was the handsome new building of the Elks. Leaving the business quarter the fire swept over Clawson Hill, one of the best residential parts of the city. Here every residence was destroyed with the exception of the Clawson and Hendrie homes.

When the fire threatened to wipe out the entire city dynamite was used and buildings were blown up in the path of the flames. This procedure saved the city from total destruction. The insurance is $150,000.

Mr. J. H. Burnham Has Enthusiastic Meeting in North Monaghan

There was an attendance of considerably over a hundred at the North Monaghan Town Hall, last evening to listen to Mr. Kendry, ex-M.P., Mr. Bradburn, M.P.P., and Mr. Burnham the Conservative candidate. The speakers were listened to with deep interest and attention throughout. Mr. Burnham spoke for an hour and a half upon the leading issues of the day, quoting largely from the blue book report of the civil service commission which he held in his hand, to show the extensive and alarming series of corrupt acts which disgraced Canadians and robbed them of their money. The balance of trade was in our favor in 1896 under Conservative rule, while at present it is very much against Canada and the more the volume of such trade increases the worse it is for Canada. We are now paying out money that we should keep at home. He welcomed good healthy "old country" immigration but was strongly against those from the slums of Bohemia or from the remote and down-trodden East. Labor must not be allowed to decline as it is doing at present. Whatever we do we must uphold the condition of our people. A protective tariff must be maintained or our industries will decline by reason of our laborers being unable to compete and live decently. A low tariff means lower wages.

Mr. Kendry denied the statement of Mr. Stratton that a protective tariff meant higher prices to the consumer. He compared prices which were the only test. The raising of sheep has declined tremendously of late, and today we have fewer sheep and less wool than in 1861. The farmer and the operative were suffering from the same cause. Mr. Kendry ridiculed Mr. Stratton's pretensions to represent West Peterborough, and said that Liberals outside of Peterborough, were just as shocked as the people here at his boldness in resurrecting himself.

Mr. Bradburn opened by a pleasant reference to the audience. He deprecated the continued blowing of Mr. Stratton that he had got this, that and the other thing for the riding whereas he did not do half what he claimed, and at any rate whatever any representative did, was simply his duty as such. He referred to Mr. Stratton's claim to building the Hall-Lecky road, which is not, however a township road, but a private road. His expenditure of government monies in the northern township was a disgrace. He built but very little new road while at present the change is complete and beneficial.

The meeting concluded with cheers for the King and the candidate.

The chair was taken by Mr. John Brown, who fulfilled his duties very acceptably. During the evening Mr. Myrton Tilton gave a very fine recitation.

BUILDING PICKS UP.

Reports From Trade In Canadian Cities Show Prosperity.

To determine with a fair accuracy the exact building conditions that exist throughout the country generally, "Construction" has secured statistics from eleven representative cities of the Dominion, showing the aggregate cost of buildings for which permits were issued for the first eight months of 1908, as compared with 1907.

In eleven cities reported, the cost of buildings for the first eight months of 1908 was $24,124,915, as compared with $32,950,589 for the same period of 1907, thus showing a decrease of 26.84 per cent.

In nine cities for which figures were secured for the month of August, the aggregate cost of buildings for August, 1908, was $3,854,984, as compared with $3,194,536 for the corresponding month of 1907, thus showing an increase of 20.67 per cent.

From this it can be seen that Canada's principal centres have turned a decrease of 26.84 per cent. for the eight months of 1908 into an increase of 20.67 per cent. for the month of August, 1908, as compared with the same periods of 1907.

It will be noted that Regina shows the largest increase (329.13) per cent.), Toronto the smallest increase (6.05 per cent.), Vancouver the largest decrease ($3.96 per cent.), and St. John, N.B., the smallest decrease (19.96 per cent.) for the month of August.

Fort William has the largest increase (90.15 per cent.), Edmonton the smallest increase (8.5 per cent.), Montreal the largest decrease (50.32 per cent.), and Winnipeg the smallest decrease (27.3 per cent.), for the first eight months of the year.

In view of the general opinion that Winnipeg suffered most from the money stringency, it is worthy of note that the decrease in her building was much lower than that of any of our larger eastern cities.

Only three of the cities reported, show a decrease for August, viz.: Vancouver, Calgary and St. John, N.B., while only three show an increase for the eight months of the year, viz.: Vancouver, Edmonton and Fort William.

Reports as to prospects for the remainder of the year were generally bright and it seems to be the concensus of opinion that the year will finish well. There seems to be a large amount of building, that was contemplated early in the year, and for financial reasons had to be postponed, that is being proceeded with this fall.

Sir John's Battle Cry.

It was in his address to the electors issued at the opening of the campaign of 1878 that Sir John A. Macdonald used that oft-quoted and stirring sentence—"A British subject I was born—a British subject I will die."

The wish therein expressed was realised shortly afterwards, when Sir John passed away at Ottawa. Mourned by the entire Canadian people his remains were borne back to Kingston, to which, seventy-one years before, he had come from Scotland, a poor lad, to make his way in a new land.

Sir John's expression of determination to remain a Briton, and which struck a responsive chord in the heart of the Canadian electorate, was used almost word for word some years earlier by that great Nova Scotian, Joseph Howe. When addressing a gathering of electors during a time of considerable unrest, and when mutterings of disloyalty were heard in certain parts of the province, Howe, in the course of his speech, said: "I will live and die a British subject." He died not only a British subject and a citizen of Nova Scotia, but an officer of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, whose creation in the form it took in 1867 he strenuously opposed.

The Siffleur.

The following note by Dr. Hector, the geologist who accompanied one of the early explorations of British Columbia under Captain Palliser, refers to the mountain woodchuck, which the French trappers called siffleur, or "whistler," on account of its cry. The animal is common near the timber-line throughout the northern Rockies.

"We saw (on Castle mountain) several bands of sheep, but did not get a shot; however, we killed two of the marmots or siffleurs. This animal is the size of a badger, with coarse hair, and no proper fur. It has large incisor teeth like those of the beaver; it lives among the rocks, and has a large nest, in which it lays up stores of provisions for winter, during which season it never comes abroad, but whether it hibernates or not the Indians do not know. It returns to its hole late in September, at which time it is very fat, and quite as good eating as the beaver, having the same rat flavor."

Disaster Pursued Him.

Charles Dynes, storekeeper of Sapperton, B.C., a suburb of New Westminster, was awakened by fire in the store below his room. He, his wife and five children fled in their nightclothes just in time to save their lives. His wife and her baby of two weeks were both ill. The building and contents burned to the ground.

The same morning representatives of insurance companies decided to immediately pay the damage. Dynes went to New Westminster for his check. He received the money and was riding home on the front end of a street car. At a switch the car lurched and threw him off. He was thrown under the wheels and cut in two.

The Irish of It.

The Minister of Agriculture for the fair province of Alberta is Irish. It is hardly necessary to label him after reading the following:

This son of Erin was down at Magrath, in the southwestern corner of the province, where he was addressing the farmers. In the course of his remarks, he urged upon them the necessity of following a line of "mixed farming," and told them not to try and "carry all their eggs in one basket." Then came a display of the Emerald in these words:

"We must alway look 'forward' for something to fall 'back' on."

VALUABLE REEDS FOUND.

Miss Agnes Laut, the Novelist, Discovers Oriental Matting Material.

Miss Agnes Laut claims she has discovered in the Saskatchewan river the reed which is used by the Chinese and Japanese in making matting. No reed outside of the Orient has been found with the same fibre. Miss Laut says:

"The scientists of the United States Government have been for many years engaged in a search for the reed from which matting is made in China and Japan. An attempt has been made to cultivate it on swamp land in the States, but so far all these attempts to cultivate the plant in the United States have failed.

"The imports of matting into the United States from China at present amount to about twenty million dollars per year.

"This reed is known to botanists as 'phragmite communist,' and I found a field of it which was seventy miles long in the vicinity of Lake Winnipeg. The plant grows to a great height, and is known to the Indians as 'the reed which grows like a tree.' Hudson Bay people call it 'muskrat reed,' from the fact that the rats feed on its roots.

"It is the exact reed which is used so largely in China and Japan for the production of matting. It would seem that in this reed we have in Western Canada material for a new and important industry. If the Government of Canada should do what the United States is doing in the matter, it would at once investigate the extent of the territory on which the reed is to be found and send scientists to China and Japan to investigate the methods of gathering in the raw material and the manufacture of the matting."

OLD ESSEX FAMILIES.

The Wigle Family Is First In County With Scratch a Close Second.

In the riding of South Essex, Ont., a citizen named Darius Wigle is the Conservative candidate for the Federal seat. Recently Mr. Wigle gave reasons for the political faith that is in him, and incidentally mentioned that he possesses a farm of 650 acres. It would be strange, indeed, if a Wigle were not the owner of many Essex acres, for that country of peaches and tomatoes once virtually belonged to the Wigle connection. Next to the Wigle family comes that of Scratch, and an alliance of a Scratch and a Wigle—rather an odd conjunction of names—meant that the whole country came to the wedding. It is related that a minister who was departing from an Essex parsonage wrote to his successor in these terms:

"You will find an interesting field here and I hope you will be greatly blessed. Old Scratch called this morning and said he would be happy to entertain your family until the parsonage is ready." The "new" man was somewhat scandalised until he discovered that the character so referred to was the richest member in the congregation, with such vineyards as are hardly seen in Ontario, outside of Essex and Lincoln.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Story with a Moral

The other day a man travelling on a shore line train noticed, protruding from an overhead rack, a dress suit case which he recognized as belonging to a friend. He knew that his friend always got off at the station which they had just passed, and as he was not in the seat the conclusion was inevitable that he had jumped off the train and forgotten it.

The man called the conductor and explained the case to him. After some discussion, and a mild protest on the part of the conductor, that it was not a part of his duty, the suit case was put off at the next station, with instructions to send it back on the first tarin the other way.

The man, feeling that he had done an able and friendly act, settled down for the rest of his journey.

But not for long! The face of his friend—who had been in the smoker, and who happened on that particular afternoon to be going on to New London to attend a dinner party—loomed before him.

The moral of this is, of course, quite evident.

Be sure you're right and then mind your own business.

The Plow Woman

By ELEANOR GATES,

Author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl."

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"I say I've a notion to take up some land," repeated Lounsbury. "Right east of you wouldn't be a bad idea. The sod's wonderful hereabouts—no stumps, no stones, and the loam's thick. Look in the coulee—you can see there how far it is to the clay. That's why she wore down so deep"—

"Thet arroyo?"

"Yes. I believe I'll just pick out a quarter near it. Could plant a store anyway when the track comes."

"Yas, certainly," said Lancaster. He passed Dallas, giving her a helpless, apprehensive stare. "But, shucks, Ah wouldn' be in such a tarnel hurry ef Ah was you. Spring's plenty o' time."

Lounsbury swung round sharply. "Spring!" he exclaimed in amazement. "I hope that hasn't been your plan, sir. A man can't file too soon."

Dallas leaned toward Lounsbury again, and her lips parted. But a quick, peremptory gesture from her father interrupted. "Marilyn," he cried, his eyes warning the elder girl, "look out fer thet coffee. It's a-bilin' over."

And Dallas saw that her father did not trust the storekeeper—perhaps feared him—and that he did not wish his own neglect to be known.

But a hint of the state of affairs at the shack had already entered Lounsbury's mind. As Marylyn rose to pour the coffee he quickly changed the subject. "Fort 's a quiet place these days," he observed, accepting a cup. "Wonder when the troops 'll be back."

"A man can't file too soon."

The section boss sipped at his saucer. "Ah don' carry on no dealin's with Yankee soldier trash," he answered curtly. "They keep they side o' th' river, an' we-all keep ourn."

Lounsbury laughed. "Well," he said, "you'll find when the redskins get nasty that the army blue looks pretty good."

The other shrugged.

The storekeeper tapped the bolster hanging upon a thigh. "I carry a popgun regular." He set down the cup, pulled at his boot legs and arose.

"Ah reckon Ah c'n hol' my own, sah." Lancaster's pride was touched.

"No doubt of it," assured the younger man, preparing to go. "I hope," he continued, "that you'll call on me at any time—if you need more provisions, say."

Lancaster did not misunderstand the offer of credit. "Thank y'," he replied stiffly, "but we certainly got 'nough t' las' through."

Lounsbury remembered how small, compared with the orders of other wintering settlers, was the Lancaster stock, and thought, too, how likely it was that every passerby would be fed with true southern hospitality, thus diminishing the supply. But he refrained from making any further suggestion. He bade the family goodby, lingering a little at parting beside the younger girl.

"Miss Marylyn," he said, "before another winter you'll be the belle of the town of Lancaster."

She put her hand in his bashfully.

"And Miss Dallas?" His voice entreated a little.

"I hope you'll be the biggest storekeeper," she said.

To Lounsbury's surprise, he saw a trace of fun lurking in her eye. "Ah, you've forgiven me!" he declared triumphantly.

But she made no answer as she turned away.

The next moment he was galloping toward the coulee crossing.

Marylyn watched him go. When, having disappeared into the ravine, he came into sight again on the farther side he turned in his saddle and saw her. He took off his hat and waved it. She answered with a farewell signal and stood, looking after him, until distance dwarfed horse and rider to a dot.

On the storekeeper's departure the shack became a scene of activity. Lancaster gave over walking the floor and collected bedding for a journey. Marylyn was called in to prepare a box of food for her father—potatoes from the coals of the fireplace, cured pigment from the souse barrel, bread and a jug of coffee—while Dallas caught the mules, gave them some grain and a rubbing down with straw wisps and greased the wagon wheels. All being made ready, the section boss took leave of his daughters, urging them to keep within the next day when the surveyors came up and to deny his going. Then with Ben and Betty at a smart trot he set off for Bismarck and the land office.

When he was gone the squat shack on the bend became vigilant. Ceaselessly its eyes covered the stretch of road between ferry landing and coulee—ceaselessly, though Dallas alone kept watch for wayfarers. Not until night fell and the cloud masked moon disappeared behind the western bluffs were small blankets pinned into place across the windows and the peering shock head made sightless.

But even with the house darkened, the early supper eaten and Marylyn asleep in her bed before the hearth the elder girl still kept on the alert. A nervousness born of loneliness had taken possession of her. If the door latch rattled, she raised herself, listening. If Simon rubbed himself against the warm outer stones of the fireplace, she sprang up, a startled sentinel, with wide eyes and clinched hands.

But an hour passed. The wind lulled. Simon lay down. She fell to thinking of the storekeeper. She felt surer than ever now that he did not covet the bend. Setting aside the fact that he had brought them good news, she was glad he had come. It gave them a neighbor. And, yes, she forgave him the smile that had provoked her resentment. After all, the name Dallas did sound Texas.

With morning and the rising of the sun she was up and doing the few chores about lean-to and shack. But when the surveyors arrived, making short work of their last few miles, she and Marylyn shut themselves in and escaped being seen. The engineers gone toward Clark's, Dallas again took up her watch.

Twice before night she was rewarded. The mail sergeant passed, bringing a batch of letters to a grateful post, and late in the afternoon an Indian runner came into sight from up the Missouri. Scorning to use the ferry, he dropped into the river where the coulee emptied and swam across.

The arrival of the scout Dallas associated instinctively with the expected return of the troopers and felt a relief that she would not have cared to confess to her father. The unusual bustle that marked the next three days at Brannon seemed to justify her belief. Below the barracks on the level bottom land men were busy erecting a strange structure. Tall cottonwoods were hauled from the river and set on end in the sandy ground. As time passed these came to form a tight, circular pen.

The night of the third day there was activity on the other bank of the Missouri. Unknown to shack and fort, the squalid line of shanty saloons that stretched itself like a waiting serpent along a high bench opposite the new stockade sprang into sudden life. Two wagons filled with men and barrels crossed the bend and emptied themselves into the dilapidated buildings. And far into the early hours loud laughter, the click of chips and the clink of glasses disturbed the quiet of the night. At dawn an officer standing, field glass in hand, on the gallery at headquarters saw two wagons drawn up in front of Shanty Town and called and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00 That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

THE ROAD TO WEALTH.

It Is the First Thousand Dollars That Counts.

"The thing that counts," said a man of independently large means, accumulated by hard work, saving and wise investments, "is the first thousand dollars. When you've got that amount together you are beginning to get somewhere, and with that start you will want to keep on. The red ink interest entries that you see put down in your savings bank book twice a year will strike you very pleasantly indeed. As interest on your thousand dollars you'll get $33 or $40 in a year. Your money has begun earning money for you.

"You've got an income now, and you'll want to add to it. You will leave that interest in the bank, to be added to your principal, and now your interest will begin to draw interest, and, to be sure, you will keep right on adding to your principal, too, and every six months you'll see those red figures growing bigger and bigger, pretty figures to contemplate, and you'll keep right along saving. But the thing that really counts is the first thousand dollars. Get that and you're all right, and you'll always be glad you saved it.

"For there really is nothing like financial independence or like having at least some money laid by. Then if you want money you've got it. You don't have to go to friends to borrow and take the risk of being refused, the risk of being compelled to go without what you need. If you've got money in the bank you can go there and get it. There might come a time when you would need money for your family or for yourself very much. It's a grand thing to have it where you can get it.

"There's nothing mean about being saving and accumulating money. On the contrary, it is every man's duty to make himself financially independent. I don't mean at all that a man wants to set out to accumulate great wealth. There is no great fun in that. But what he does want to do is to get together enough to live on modestly."

DODGES OF COAL MINERS.

They Have Many Ways of Adding Extra Pennies to Their Wages.

In coal mining, as in other trades, there are many tricks played. Seams below three feet are paid extra tonnage, generally a penny per ton extra for each inch in the reduction of the thickness of the seam. Certain days are set apart for the purpose of measuring, and many schemes are resorted to by the miner to make the measurement as low as possible. Thus, according to the inequalities or irregularity of the floor and roof, a place may measure 3 feet one day and the next only 2 feet 9 nches. The miner takes advantage of this fact by letting his place stand for a whole shift, and sometimes a day, when he comes to a reduction in the thickness of the coal seam, and it pays him, too.

In other cases stone bands run in the seam of coal, and they vary in thickness also, but the miner is paid extra tonnage for the increase in the thickness of the band. Thus, you see that it means a considerable addition to his income to obtain an increased measurement.

A popular trick among mine managers is to work the near and most accessible coal in the mine, with no regard to system so long as they succeed in obtaining a large output of coal. Having worked all the best districts, they look out for another situation, and you will understand the position of the next manager and the enormous difficulties and expense to work the mine.

Dis-Composing.

The sports had been a great success, and Colonel Proudem, delighted to be recognised as a magnate in the Midlands, had puffed out his chest with pride when he presented the prizes to their winners.

Eagerly the next morning he picked up the local newspaper, to see if his speech had been reported. A smile spread over his face as he read the preliminary remarks about his glorious services to his country, his many active engagements with the enemy; but suddenly he stopped:

"This battle-scared warrior——"

But the colonel could read no further. In a furious rage, he drove off to the newspaper office, and demanded a public apology. This was immediately promised, and regrets tendered for the mistake.

The next morning his feelings may be imagined as he read:

"We regret that through a printer's error, yesterday we styled Colonel Proudem as a 'battle-scared warrior.' We should have said 'bottle-scared.'"

Vegetable Stones.

"There are vegetable stones," said a geologist. "Stones, that is, that grow in vegetables.

"Here is a tabasheer. It is found in the joints of certain kinds of bamboo. It is always round and brown, like this. Here is the cocoanut stone. You find it in the endosperm of the Javanese cocoanut. Round or pear shaped, it has always this milk white luster, like a pearl. The smaller stone, with its pearly luster is a little tarnished, is found in the pomegranate. It is pure carbonate of lime. These stones are formed from silicious and calcareous juices circulating in the plant organism. They are the result of a diseased condition. Man himself, you know, occasionally puts forth stony growths, and they must be removed or the human stone grower dies in excruciating pain."

The Human Finger Bowl.

"I'm fond of the table d'hotes," said the table d'hote fiend, "but they are ruining the manners of the people. The other night I saw the prettiest girl at a table across from me, so pretty I could hardly keep my eyes off her. She was dressed in white, with a big white hat covered with a white veil, and had lovely blue eyes, and when she had finished eating her pear she licked every finger she had on both hands."

THE UNEXPECTED HAPPENED

And They Did Not Get So Far Ahead of Their Wives After All.

During the Exhibition in Toronto, a certain Presbyterian minister and his wife, from a staid Scotch settlement in Western Ontario, came to visit friends on Bloor street for the fortnight. The days were well filled with shopping and "exhibitioning," but one evening—a Wednesday evening, too—there arose the question of where to go.

"We've been to an organ recital, an illustrated lecture and a talk on China," said the hostess thoughtfully. "See here" she ejaculated, lowering her voice significantly, "let's go to Shea's—there's no harm in it—and when you're going back to that dead-and-alive place for the rest of the year, I think you need a little diversion."

"But what would I say to John?" said the minister's wife, after a few half-hearted protests.

"John—bless me—I don't know," said Mrs. A—— "I believe he's taken my husband to prayer-meeting. We'll go, anyway." The women had been chums at boarding-school, and the prospect of Shea's seemed like an old-time escapade. Therefore, to Shea's they went, and were enjoying the fourth number on the program when Mrs A—— frantically clutched her guest's arm.

"Will you look at those two men—there? It's your John and my Henry—and I believe your husband is wearing one of Henry's coats."

Just at this moment the smiling husbands caught sight of the two women and bowed their heads in confusion. The rest of that program was as a painful dream to John, who had been a firm disciplinarian, and had more than once expressed disapproval of certain frivolous tastes displayed by his wife. And it was all in vain afterwards for John to assert quaveringly that he thought a minister should see those things in order to be able to warn others.

DISTINCTION FOR CANADIAN.

Sydney, N.S., Girl Is First to Win Oxford Musical Degree.

Miss Burchell, of Sydney, Nova Scotia, is the first colonial girl to win the distinction of having passed the final examination for the Degree of Bachelor of Music, Oxford University. In 1903 she passed at Oxford the "Preliminary (Arts) Examination for Students of Music," and the First Examination for the Degree of Mus. Bac. For the Second Mus. Bac. examination candidates are not obliged to go to Oxford. They are required to submit for examination a musical exercise of their own composition. This must be a vocal work with accompaniment for a string band. The following movements are expected: a five-part chorus, a song or duet, an unaccompanied vocal quartette, and a five-part fugue. The work may be either sacred or secular. Miss Burchell chose a sacred subject, giving it the title, "The Light of Men." She had the good fortune to have her first work accepted by the examiners.

The Third (Final) Examination was successfully passed in May of this year.

In April Miss Burchell passed the examination for Associateship of the Royal College of Music, at that institution in London H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is president of the Royal College.

Miss Burchell studied under Mr. Peter LeSueur, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., formerly music master of the Methodist College, St. John's, Nfld.; and under Dr. C. W. Pearce, Mus. Doc., Cantab., F.R.C.O., of Trinity College of Music, London.

She is the daughter of Mr. H. C. Burchell, C.E., of Sydney, N.S., formerly Government engineer of Newfoundland, and afterwards director of public works, British Honduras.

To Look For Castaways.

H. M. S. Algerine, now at Esquimalt, is preparing for a cruise to Christmas Island, scene of the Aeon wreck, and other islands of the South Pacific. Until a few years ago a cruise was made annually to the islands of South Pacific to investigate the possibilities of castaways being found on an unhabited islands and to renovate graves, etc.

With the addition of Algerine at the Esquimalt station, the practice is being revived.

Enquiries by salvage companies regarding the possibility of solving the steamer Aeon, wrecked on Christmas Island, have disclosed the fact that the engines have broken away and the hull is breaking. No hope of salvage is entertained. The Canadian-Australian line agents say the steamer Manuka will undoubtedly call at Christmas Island, as instructions to that effect will be cable from Sydney, to which port the survivors of the Aeon will be taken.

Room For Settlers.

Reports received from British Columbia land surveyors sent out to examine and survey land along the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway represent that the area fit for settlement is very much larger than was generally supposed. From present indications, all the land along that railway in this province, with a few isolated exceptions, will be taken up by actual settlers within a short time after the road is built. When the enterprise was projected it was thought that the British Columbia section would not be traffic-producing. There is, however, as a matter of fact, every reason to believe that it will be the seat of many and varied industries.

Kitten Came to Life.

A Toronto resident recently immersed three young kittens in a barrel of water, with the intention of drowning them. They were taken out after some time, apparently dead, and were buried. Next day one of the kittens was found lying comfortably beside her mother, alive and well. The old cat, it was ascertained, had scratched up the grave and secured the only kitten which had any life in it and had brought it back to health and strength.

A POUND OF FEATHERS.

It Is Really Heavier Than a Pound of Lead.

The favorite question with the school committeemen of olden time was, we are told, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of lead?" The first rash answer almost always used to be, "A pound of lead." Then, of course, from the older pupils would come the reply, "Both alike."

If this question was asked to-day the old time querist might receive a decided surprise, for the pound of feathers could easily be proved to be the heavier. A simple experiment is all the evidence needed.

With any accurate scales weigh out a pound of lead, using ordinary shot for convenience. Pour the shot into one of the pans of a balance. For the feathers a light muslin bag will be needed, and care must be taken that feathers and bag together do not weigh more than a pound. When the bag of feathers is put into the other pan of the balance the beam will, after a few oscillations, come to rest exactly level.

So far the verdict "both alike" seems to be proved. But place the balance on the receiver of an air pump, with lead and feathers undisturbed. Cover the whole with the glass bell jar and exhaust the air. Slowly the feathers sink, and the lead kicks the beam. The pound of feathers is heavier than the pound of lead.

The truth is that what we call a pound was not such in fact, for the atmosphere buoys up everything within it in proportion to the bulk of the object, and the feathers, being of greater bulk than the lead, are supported by the air to a considerably greater extent than the lead. Removed from this supporting medium, their true weight is made evident.

Charles Reade propounded a similar question in one of his novels. A Jewish trader is made to ask, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of gold?" After awhile he explains to the satisfaction of his audience of miners that the feathers are the heavier.

Gold, he explains, is weighed by troy weight, while feathers are weighed by avoirdupois, and as the twelve ounces in a pound troy contain only 5,760 grains, while the avoirdupois pound contain nearly 7,000 grains, the pound of feathers is, of course, 1,240 grains heavier than the pound of gold.

Some Costly Toys.

The presentation by President Falieres of a costly toy railway to the Czarevitch reminds us that one of the first model railways, on anything like a large scale, was the most prized possession of the ill-fated Prince Imperial when a boy. It was constructed in the gardens of the Tuileries, and is said to have cost 50,000 francs. In the private grounds of Mr. T. H. Shriver, a wealthy resident of Denver, Colorado, is a still more remarkable miniature railway. On a circular track, 400 feet long, with a gauge of 83-4 inches, Mr. Shriver drives a train of eight Lilliputain carriages, carrying a dozen or more passengers. The Rev. H. L. Warneford of Windsor is the proud proprietor of "the Chicago and Jericho Railway," with its cuttings and tunnels, stations and signal-boxes; while a Manchester gentleman, Mr. P. H. S. Leigh, has (or had not long ago) in a specially-constructed room a similar railway, of 270 feet in length and 6 inch gauge, over which a £300 engine draws exquisite models of passenger and luggage trains.

Human Ostrich.

A remarkable case is under treatment at the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. In June a young postman was sentenced to nine month's imprisonment for appropriating small postal orders, and after his removal to prison he began to swallow all manner of things. First, he swallowed a portion of a blanket, then 24 iron pins, each about two inches long, a considerable number of stones, pieces of iron, and bits of a water jug which he smashed. When he told the prison officials what he had done they disbelieved him, but on being taken to the infirmary the various articles were located by the X-rays. A consultation was held by the doctors, but it was deemed advisable not to perform an operation. The patient is still confined to bed, though apparently quite well and normal in every respect, notwithstanding his extraordinary experience. In the infirmary he is known as the human ostrich.

Edison as Humorist.

The great American inventor, T. A. Edison, who is at work perfecting a motor powerful but small enough to bring the aeroplane within a measurable distance of success, is partly deaf in his right ear. In one way this an advantage, as it enables him to pursue his work undisturbed while surrounded by all the noise of a busy shop. When offered an infallible cure for his deafness, he once remarked, "Why should I try it? Think of the lot of stuff I'd have to listen to that I don't want to hear!" On another occasion a would-be wit said, in ordinary tones, "I guess he'd hear if I asked him to have a drink." The inventor looked the young man who spoke squarely in the eye. "Yes, perhaps I should," he said; "but no, not to-day, thank you!"

His Deep Concern.

The kind old lady noticed a small lad entering a cobbler's with a small package.

"What have you there, sonny?" she asked kindly.

"Ma's slipper," replied the lad. "You see, there is a tack out of place in it, and I want to have it fixed before ma notices it."

"Ah, what a considerate little boy! I suppose you are afraid the tack might hurt your mother's foot?"

"Well, it isn't exactly that. You see, the tack is sticking out on the sole, and this is the slipper ma spanks me with."

PUBLIC PUNISHMENT.

The Days of the Whipping Post, Stocks and Branding Irons.

Up until the end of the war and a little while after the whipping post and stocks stood not far from the northwest corner of the courthouse and between that building and the present postoffice, and there the last whipping took place, though as it began it was sought to be stopped by a federal officer. The sheriff was, however, simply carrying out the mandate of the old court of pleas and quarter sessions.

In those days the stocks and the whipping post, too, were special attractions, notably to boys. The latter were allowed to ridicule people who sat in the stocks, which held their hands and feet, but not to throw anything at them.

Of course this deprived the boys of some degree of pleasure, yet they contrived to get a good deal of fun out of the thing anyway. It seems odd now even to think of such scenes as these must have been. Figure to yourself passing by the courthouse green at Charlotte or Raleigh and seeing a gentleman held by the ankles and wrists by wooden bars, sitting there in the sunshine for all the world to look at.

Those were the days of the branding iron too. A set of gyves of iron, in use for holding the ankles or wrists, are on exhibition here, but of branding irons there are none. These were used here in January, 1865, for the last time.—Raleigh Cor. Charlotte Observer.

VANITY OF CONVICTS.

The Way Some Men Spruce Up In the Penitentiary.

"The vainest lot of men I ever did know are behind these walls," remarked a convict in the penitentiary. "For fastidious dressing and cleanliness I have never seen anything like it. Those who have been accustomed to sleeking up on the outside grow much worse in here, and those who never even combed their hair on the outside have it as cleanly parted as they can. I know of a hundred instances where convicts have risked being paddled or having time taken away just for the sake of shaving. They get hold of a razor or improvise one and keep it in their cells. They all have mirrors in their cells along with the calendars.

"I know of one instance of a trusted prisoner who begged for weeks to be allowed to wear a hat instead of the prison cap because he thought he did not look well in it. Whenever they get an opportunity they press their trousers. They save collars for Sundays and appear very clean and neat and nice in chapel. I guess it is all because they have time to think about themselves more than ever. If a man has nothing but himself to think about he takes more pride in himself. Or maybe they want something with which to pass away the time in their cells."—Columbus Dispatch.

Blankets of Bark.

In Ecuador, one of the South American republics, the bark of a tree which grows on the slopes of the Andes is utilized for the making of blankets. The blanket is over six feet long and over five feet wide and is as soft and pliable as though it were made of flannel. It is about the thickness of a good flannel blanket and can be rolled up and put in a strap without hurting or injuring it. This tree or bark blanket is merely a strip of bark cut from a section of the trunk of the blanket or demajagua tree. The Indians make a cutting around the trunk to get it, and they prepare it by soaking it in water until it is soft. It is then pounded so that the rough outside can be stripped off and the inside alone left. The inside is of fine fibers so joined together by nature that it makes a beautiful blanket, warm enough to be used as a cover and soft enough for a mattress.

A Clock Case Made of Pennies.

A novelty in clockmaking consists of a timepiece whose case is made of English pennies. The coins, of which there are ninety-six, all bear the date 1797 and were beaten out to almost double their original size and then riveted together, while the figures were made of small strips of copper cemented on to the face. The clock stands fourteen inches high and is eight inches broad at the base. That "time is money" is an adage with which we all more or less agree, but this is a case in which the saying might be reversed and still remain true. The clock is owned by a resident of Laurel Bank, Ilkley, Yorkshire, England.

The Family Dog.

An Edinburgh clergyman says: "Every family should have a dog. It is like a perpetual baby. It betrays no secrets, never smiles, asks no troublesome questions, never gets into debt, never comes down late to breakfast and is always ready for a bit of fun."

Girls of Today are Weaklings

Few Possess the Vitality and Girlish Beauty of the Olden Times.

Never before was physical health and vigor so highly esteemed and so sickly wife, and the woman who wishes to enjoy the pleasures of life should spare no effort to maintain perfect health.

Is your daughter growing up strong and ruddy? Has she strength to drink in greedily all the pleasures that youth so seriously seeks—or is she compelled to use the street car instead of enjoying the delightful exercise of walking—does she after the ball arise refreshed and vigorous, or is she exhausted, indifferent, and perhaps irritable?

When strength and vigor can be so easily maintained by Ferrozone, when the glow of health is so quickly brought to the cheeks and elasticity to the step, it is plainly a mother's duty to see that Ferrozone is on hand to assist her daughter back to health.

Upon the wake of Ferrozone quickly follows a stream of rich, nourishing blood which imparts that power and surplus energy so earnestly desired by those in ill-health.

Stop and think what this means for your daughter—certainly a great deal, and it can be accomplished by Ferrozone.

Every growing girl and young woman derives enormous benefit in many ways from this nutritive, vitalising tonic.

It is specially suited for young women and is a guarantee of health and regularity as long as it is used.

Ferrozone is free from alcohol and perfectly safe to use. Prepared in the form of a chocolate-coated tablet and sold in 50c. boxes or six for $2.50. at all dealers.

AN EMPIRE ASSOCIATION

The Earl of Meath has sent a letter to the Standard of Empire, bringing under public notice a proposed "Empire Association. What is suggested is an organization having its headquarters in London, with branches everywhere throughout the Empire, its object being to bring about greater unity between the several parts of His Majesty's dominions. The general principles upon which the association will be organized are thus stated by the Earl:—

Co-operation and unity would be the watch-words of the association, and among its rules it is suggested that the following would be likely to find a place:—

1. The association to be absolutely independent of all forms of party politics from its discussions.

2. No club to be formed with less than twenty members, or to continue to be recognized if its members fell below that number.

3. Each new club to hold not fewer than six meeting in each year, at which a paper should be read upon some object connected with the general object of the association, and followed by a discussion. The paper and discussion, or a precis thereof, to be printed and forwarded to the hon. secretary of the association and to any affiliated club on payment of a small fee.

4. Any affiliated club would be at liberty to invite anyone in sympathy with the objects of the association to read or send a paper for discussion or to read any paper prepared for another affiliated club.

5. Any affiliated club to be entitled to have copies of papers and discussion sent by any other club, on payment of the cost of production.

6. Subject to the general policy of the association, every affiliated club to be perfectly at liberty to make its own rules.

It is proposed to adopt the Canadian Club idea of luncheons, and it is proposed that addresses delivered on such occasions shall be printed verbatim in the best channels by which the public can be reached. In addition to this [illegible] eliminate useful literature bearing upon Imperial matters. Earl Meath's desire is that there shall be an expression of opinion upon the merits of the suggestion, and we have no hesitation in saying that, if the movement can be kept clear of politics—that is the personal side of politics—it ought to be exceedingly valuable. The Canadian clubs have been very successful in respect to the non-partizan character of the addresses delivered before them, and nothing has contributed more greatly to their popularity. If the impression should ever get abroad that the Canadian Club luncheons were occasions when a speaker might attack his political opponents, the clubs would speedily go to pieces. We commend this phase of the subject to the promoters of the Imperial Associa ion.

Speaking on the general principle involved, it may be said that the time seems ripe for the crystallization of the Imperial sentiment. We do not mean by this that any scheme of Imperial consolidation ought to be forthwith devised. On this point the Colonist has always endeavored to make itself clear. None of us is able to suggest, at least no one has yet been able to suggest a plan of closer union, which gives promise of success. Those, to whom preferential trade seems the only requisite, see only part of the case. We concede the great advantage of such an arrangement, but in our humble judgment the Empire needs a better bond of union than reciprocity of tariffs. We are often asked to consider the cementing influence of inter-state free trade between the component parts of the United States and of the German Empire; but we venture to think that citizens of those nations would be the first to deny that the commercial advantages of such arrangements form the corner stone of their unity. It was not for example, any considerations of trade which called more than a million of youths of the United States into the field to cement with their blood a union that should forever be one and indivisible. The strength of all national bonds is sentiment, and while an imperial sentiment may be strengthened throughout British lands by a system of preferential tariffs they will not create it, nor will their absence destroy the sentiment that now exists. There is something intangible perhaps, but none the less real, behind the Empire, and it is this intangibility which we would like to see crystallized. After this has been done the work of promoting Imperial solidarity will grow apace. We are very strongly of the opinion that this aspect of Imperialism can be advanced by an association formed along the lines suggested in Earl Meath's letter. We know that the effect of the establishment of the Canadian Clubs has been the development of a robust Canadian sentiment and similar results might be looked for with confidence in the wider field.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The International Congress on Tuberculosis, held in Washington recently, is reported to have disappointed the European delegates. The statements ascribed to some of these delegates open an old wound. In point of numbers the convention is described as magnificent. As Adolphe Smith, Fellow of the Chemical Society of London and special Commissioner for the Lancet, puts it, the presence of thousands of American physicians, who had come together at great trouble and expense, had "demonstated the solidarity of the medical profession in the fight against tuberculosis." But the solidarity does not appear to have been demonstrated in all other respects.

It is remarked that the housing problem is the fundamental problem to be solved in the conquest of tuberculosis and a resolution to this effect was proposed in the international organization in Paris three years ago by the Belgian Minister of Agriculture. Before that the congress sitting in Geneva had declared that when property condemned as propagating tuberculosis was to be destroyed or improved "real estate owners ought to be compensated, not according to the financial value of their property—for slum property is the most valuable in the world—but according to the sanitary value."

This matter was not discussed in Washington. There was no discussion, either, of the proposition for organization to enforce the tuberculosis laws against tenement houses and factory proprietors before actual outbreak of the disease. There was ready for submission to the congress a resolution declaring for the regulation of the height of buildings according to the width of the adjacent streets. But it is charged by the European delegates that a small knot of American doctors, influenced by real estate interests succeeded in holding up these and several similar resolutions on the ground that if they were presented the time set for the prorogation of the congress would be overrun.

and no one would be inclined to welcome conclusive evidence of its truth. But it is obvious that in reframing from a reiteration of its policies in respect of the congestion of building and population the congress has failed to drive home the attack which must be driven home before the pest is to be swept from the great centres of habitation. An insanitary hovel in the midst of the prairie will shelter enough tuberculosis to do for the entire family which lives in it. In the great cities, where the crowded tenements cover square miles of nameless insanitary atrocities, the plague holds mad and unrestricted carnival. But as has been remarked, slum property the world over is most valuable in the money sense since it makes the largest returns on the smallest outlay. The evil is as old as the history of the segregation of mankind. It has endured the scorn of the ages and is rampant yet. It throws off as a horrid and apparently irrelevant offshoot a refusal by landlords to rent decent homes to persons with children except upon terms which would be ruinous to all but the very rich. It crushes the people whose lives are hardest down into a mire which kills not only the spirit but the body also.

An international propaganda for world-wide legislation against the slum building by driving tuberculosis from its breeding grounds would go a long way to minimizing its ravages. But there is still reason to believe that it would be bitterly opposed by an immensely powerful organization of property owners who are content that their brothers should rot and die as long as the money comes in.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, sighs or cry. Neglected Child Goes to Shelter

A case was heard by Magistrate Edmonson yesterday morning, in which a woman from one of the less settled parts of the county, complained that her husband had ill-treated her eighteen months old son. High County Constable Cochrane being informed of the circumstances, investigated the affair on Tuesday last. He found the child alone in the house with no near friends living at a distance of two miles. There were no comforts in the home, although there was a supply. Mr. Cochrane started out to find the parents and succeeded after walking to a settlement about two miles distant. The mother has to go to this place for milk for the child, as they have no cow of their own. The mother states that her husband has beaten the child, and Mr. Cochrane stated in his evidence that he did not consider it was given proper attention. Mr. Cochrane told the parents that he would have to take the child and place it in the shelter. The husband, he said, cried and manifested deep grief, but Mr. Cochrane suggested that he would soon get over that.

The mother voluntarily gave the little one over to the society. Mr. Goodwill, who appeared for the latter, thought the woman should be place in the House of Refuge for a time, and an effort is being made to gain her admission.

Wedding Bells

COTTON—HARDING.

One of the season's prettiest weddings was celebrated at 8.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Harding, Bethune street, when their youngest daughter, Nettie Rose, was united in marriage to Mr. Robt. S. Cotton, son of Mr. Chas. Cotton, Gananoque. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of the autumn's richest-tinted foliage arranged so naturally that the drawing room seemed transformed into a pretty sylvan scene. The idea was vivified by maple leaves of varied hues, being found in gentle profusion throughout the other rooms and on the drawing room floor.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. G. Potter in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. The bride was attended by Miss Alethia Harrison, and Mr. W. Cotton, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride wore a charming Princess gown of white organdie with Valenciennes lace and satin trimmings. She entered the drawing room leaning on her father's arm, while Miss Myra Renwick of Keene, played a wedding march. The bride carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was dressed in white muslin and carried pink carnations.

After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Cotton left on the 5.30 G.T.R. train for Toronto and Buffalo. The bride's going-away suit was of brown cloth with herring-bone stripe. She also wore a hat to match.

Among the many beautiful presents received by the bride was a set of mink furs from the groom, and from the office staff of the G.G.E. Co. an oak Morris chair.

The following out of town friends were present: Mrs. Geo. Cunningham, and Miss Ollie Mitchell of Lindsay, Miss Jennie and Mr. Thos. Ryan of Port Hope, Misses Mary and Bella Renwick of Keene, and Miss Ruby Cotton and Mr. Will Cotton of Gananoque.

ARMSTRONG—JONES.

The wedding was quietly solemnized at the residence of Rev. J. R. Webb on Thursday of last week of Miss Bessie Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Jones of Montreal, to Mr. William Armstrong of Peterborough. The bride was attired in a neat blue silk dress. After the ceremony a wedding repast was served at the residence of the groom's uncle, Mr. Armstrong, 66 Waterford street. The young couple will reside at 68 McDonnell street.

SLADE—LOBB.

A quiet wedding was solemnized Tuesday night at the George street Methodist church parsonage, the principals being Miss Bertha May Lobb and Mr. Benjamin James Slade, both of Westwood. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. A. Pearson. Mr. and Mrs. Slade will live at Westwood.

HEAVIS—FIFE.

A very pretty but quiet wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. Duncan Fife, "Fairview Farm," Asphodel, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th, at 5.30 o'clock, when his eldest daughter, Miss Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Gordon R. Heavis, son of Mr. Nelson Heavis, also of Asphodel. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. D. A. Thomson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Hastings, the wedding march being played by Miss Willena Fife, sister of the bride.

Two cars of the special train carrying Wm. H. Taft and party were ditched near Sterling, On

He was surprised at how the sores healed. "I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—pimples, sores, boils, rheumatic pains, ulcers of the throat, swellings of the glands, pains of the joints, falling, itching of the skin, eczema, blotches, etc. I had given up all hope when a friend advised me to consult you. I consulted you by mail, a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no home, but took lodgings. In three weeks time I was encouraged to find up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every vestige of the disease disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. To-day, three years after, I am sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish. 1 CENT A 2 SHARE

Send us your name as a member in this new company, with your remittance for as many thousand shares as you can take at 35 per thousand.

This is a short-time offer on a hurry-up proposition. Our vice president is up at Rawhide now putting the mines at work. We want to raise the necessary funds for development as quickly as possible. Therefore, we offer the first block of stock at 35 a thousand shares. This subscription must be all cash. We want the money in hand. We mean to work without let-up, and we have made it an ironclad rule not to run in debt. Cash counts now.

Our prospectuses are out. Send for one.

Make reservation of stock. If you do no more. But, remember, this present offer of stock at Half a Cent a Share is now open and will be closed as soon as enough cash subscriptions are in hand. Don't wait, or you will get left.

The gold mining property owned outright by the company consists of 7 claims in the Rawhide district of Nevada and 4 in the Dulzura district of southern California.

The Rawhide district to-day is more famous than Goldfield, Tonopah, Bullfrog, or Searchlight were at the same stage of exploration and development. The Dulzura discovery is one of the most sensational in the history of California.

Ten samples of ore which were among the first assayed, ran as high as $7,461.27 to the ton, and all ten averaged over $1,500 a ton.

In both camps we located early, and our locations are choice. Our own officers will superintend the mining.

England's Oldest Man is 105

Essex probably can claim to be the county possessing England's oldest man, and he is to be found at Canewdon, a little village tucked away in an eastern corner of the shire, far from any railway station and almost forgotten. The worthy old fellow is Frederick Pickingale who claims to have reached his 105th birthday on April 2 last.

"What, come all the way from London to see me?" he exclaimed when a newspaper representative called on him on Saturday, and was invited to enter his tiny cottage of which the rent is only 1s. 3d per week, where the old man, who is still quite active, lives with his son. He was busy, brush in hand, tidying up his sitting room when the representative arrived, for he takes a pride in doing his housework, and getting his own meals ready, and fills in odd moments by pottering about in the garden.

"Yes, I'm a hundred and five," he said, "and feel good for another twenty years. I was born over in Hockley, close here, and I've been in these parts working on farms, all my life. I only stopped work at ninety."

"I can remember a lot of things you can't," he continued with a chuckle, for he is a merry old fellow, and laughs as readily as he talks. "You've heard talk of a man called Napoleon, and a battle at Waterloo? Well, I can remember the times when that battle was fought, and how the word was passed through the village that we'd won another great victory over the French. In those days they used to come through the country, wanting men to fight—press-gangs that's the word—and I can remember having to hide away, or they'd a took me."

Though there is no documentary evidence of the old man's age, it is pretty well established. He himself is sure that he is 105, and a neighbor, aged over eighty, is sure that he was a grown man as early as she can remember.

He will not hear the old days run down. "Of course," he says, "bread was very dear—I mind how it was ever 1s. a loaf—but we could get vegetables and eggs, and I think people were kinder, and struck together better then, though I must say everyone's very kind to me now."

The old man has never seen a railway train, and the first motor-car he ever set eyes upon was the one in which our representative drove up. "My, but that's a funny thing," he said. "When I was a boy we didn't have 'em. Would I like a ride? Oh, yes, rather!"

A NEW EXPERIENCE.

Aged 105, but still keen on a new experience, the bright old fellow had—as usual, washed himself, combed his scanty grey hairs, brushed his overcoat and took up seat in the car in a great state of excitement.

He had a great send-off. Some women at the village pump near at hand left their buckets to see "old daddy," as they call him, take his first motor-car trip. Children playing before the cottage doors rushed indoors and brought out their elders, and quite a crowd gathered round.

The old man was delighted and could hardly speak for wonder. "Well, well!" he kept saying, and then he would exclaim merrily. "Down the road and past the village pond he was taken, and when on a level stretch the car was put to its top speed and—I shouted with joy. "I'd like to go to London on it!" he said, "I've never been to London. It must be a wonderful place." Then he rode back to his cottage door, but solemnly in the car while his photograph was taken, and then toddled indoors again with something to marvel over for many a long day.

If you ask him how to live to be 105 he laughs and says, "You just go on living—that's all." He has worked hard all his life, and is still active and useful. The pain food of the county village has been his fare, and he still likes his pipe of tobacco and mug of ale.

As he talk his thoughts keep going back to the days of nearly 100 years ago, "They're all gone, the men who used to work in the fields with me. This is like a new world." And then he recollects that he has to finish tidying up his cottage for Sunday, and as his visitor leaves for the roar and rush of London, this fine old fellow in the quiet village so far from the beaten track takes up his brush and turns to work afresh.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about, to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was no, so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We need to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big money-men, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents, who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the scum of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C. are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If the people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit raids for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was falling to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the object party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

Ill-Assorted Marriage Proves a Failure

Vancouver, Oct. 12.—On the last voyage of the Empress of Japan from here to Hongkong she had among her steerage passengers a white woman who had married a Chinaman in New York.

The ill-assorted couple were going to take up their permanent residence at the husband's home in South China, and the woman seemed contented enough as long as the husband was surrounded by white influences.

When the liner reached Hongkong and she saw the teeming native life of the people with whom she had cast in her lot the renegade white lost her nerve and broke down. She feared the unknown conditions of Northern China, but her husband bundled her into a sampan and as soon as he got her there commenced beating the woman. When she got ashore she asked a policeman to take her to the American consul and to him with tears she declared she would not accompany her Celestial partner to his ancestral home. She claimed the protection of the American official and was shipped back to New York via San Francisco a wiser woman.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enhancing the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Ganson's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measure for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world affiances and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 28 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,708, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lakes and northern waters.

Then in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent rates, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,600 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in daily products, fruits and perishable articles, and insuredly of Lindsay and Bellville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing centre, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

NEW CONFERENCE

All Europe is talking of a new conference of the powers which took part in making the famous treaty of Berlin thirty years ago. One listens somewhat wearily to catch a suggestion that the courts of arbitration provided at The Hague nine years ago, might now be utilized, but of that there is not a whisper. Instead there is a hum of diplomatic technicalities, of "fait accompli", of "uti possidetis," and other imposing phases of the doctrine of might makes right. Turkey protests, Servia calls out her reserves, Great Britain intimates the need of a conference, but Austria is reported to hold that her treatment of Bosnia and Herzegovina is not a violation, is indeed but a logical and necessary completion of the principles of the Berlin Treaty.

Naturally the first thing to be done in regard to a conference is to agree as to the matters to be submitted to it. If Austria refuses to lay the assimilation of Bosnia and Herzegovina before the assembled Powers, and if Germany approves of that course, the conference becomes practically either impossible or futile, so far as concerns the one question now under discussion. Subsequently all that will remain for the Powers to do is to try to agree what other changes can be made that will be reasonably satisfactory to all concerned. The work of the conference would probably be not to enforce the Berlin Treaty, but to arrange for further infractions of it. That is not a prospect encouraging to those who had hoped that the principle of mutual obligation in international relations had made real progress in the last decade.

It may be said that it is better to negotiate than to fight. But here is a crisis in which there is involved the very basis of all international negotiation, the binding force of treaties on all who sign them. After what has taken place, wherein would a new treaty be of any more worth than the former one dealing with like questions and signed by the same Powers? Suppose the conference to be assembled, Count Aehrenthal for Austria-Hungary, accompanied by the smiling Buelow, for Germany, lays upon the table the treaty of 1878, torn down the middle, and invites the Powers to replace it. What would logically be the term of existence of the new agreement? Clearly it would not survive the moment when one or two of the Powers got ready to rend it as its predecessor has been rent. That indicates the state of affaire which for uncertainty and confusion is not palpably better than actual conflict. Apparently it is the state to which affaire are drifting.

Legs Stuck Out

Mrs. Hicks was telling some ladies about the burglar scare in her house the night before.

"Yes," she said, "I heard a noise and got up, and there from under the bed, I saw a man's legs sticking out."

"Mercy!" exclaimed a woman. "The burglar's legs?"

"No, my dear; my husband's legs. He heard the noise, too."

Calgary, Oct. 13.—Yesterday the preliminary hearing against Dan McGillicuddy, editor of the Calgary News, on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Robert C. Edwards, the editor of the Calgary Eye-Opener, was again adjourned, this time until Friday next. Needless to say, the case is arousing the greatest interest throughout Calgary and the West, but it is hinted that there will be an announcement of some sort shortly.

It was on Tuesday last that the Calgary News, Mr. McGillicuddy's paper, came out with a double column letter on its front page, signed "Nemesis," and attacking Edwards. The charges were of such a character that action of some sort, on the part of the Eye-Opener man was imperative, and the charge of criminal libel against Mr. McGillicuddy followed on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. McGillicuddy was arrested and taken to the station, but immediately on his return to the office a special edition of the News was issued, giving an account of the arrest and reprinting the two-column letter.

Next day Mr. McGillicuddy appeared in court, the case coming before Messrs. Burns, J.P. Mr. Clifford Jones was acting for Mr. McGillicuddy and Mr. P. J. Nolan for Edwards, or in Mr. Nolan's absence, Mr. Tweedie. The prosecution asked for an adjournment until yesterday, when another adjournment was made. These adjournments have caused great disappointment to the large crowds [illegible]

RE-PRINTED THE LETTER.

On Thursday, the News in reporting the formal proceedings, quoted the information and complaint in full, thus repeating practically the entire letter from "Nemesis." [illegible]

The original letter, after making charges, promised further particulars in future letters. So far none of these has appeared, but the News in the editorial page is keeping up a raging fire in the true McGillicuddy style.

Thus it quotes from its morning contemporary, the Albertan, as follows:

"It is safe to say that no newspaper article published in Calgary for some time has created such a sensation. Without any previous warning, without the slightest intimation in a double column front page anonymous letter signed 'Nemesis,' the News attacked in the bitterest language the Eye-Opener, the editor of it, referring scathingly to his antecedents, to his past, his present, his personality, his morality, and his appearance."

"THAT'S THE WAY TO DO IT."

The News adds the following comment, "Why certainly. That's the way to do real business. Don't wait for the other chap to call the editor names and the newspaper 'The Morning Canada' and then lie down like a doormat or crawl into the cyclone cellar."

CLAIMS 22,000 CIRCULATION.

The Eye-Opener claims a circulation of 22,000, several thousand of which are in Toronto, where it has been sold by newsboys on the streets for some weeks. It is two or three years now since it first made its appearance in Calgary, and since then it has provided a species of diversion for the whole West.

Its attacks have not been confined to men of either party, and as the News is independent in politics there does not appear to be any political motives behind the present legal fight, the outcome of which will be watched with the keenest interest.

FOOLED BOTH WAYS.

The Experience of a Visitor in a Lunatic Asylum.

"I was staying," says a writer in the Liverpool Mercury, "with an uncle who was on very friendly terms with a doctor who kept a private asylum and who occasionally gave a dance for the patients, while also inviting some of his friends.

"During my visit we received an invitation, and on the appointed evening we arrived to find the room crowded with people all in evening dress.

"My first partner was a man whom I thought looked decidedly queer, such a restless, hunted expression in his eyes, and occasionally during the dance he stopped and glanced searchingly around. Dear me, how glad I was when the dance was over, and, making some excuse, I hurried away, only to run up against my hostess and to be introduced to my second partner.

"Ah, me, what a handsome man, and, girl-like, I fell head over ears in love. I put out my most bewitching ways and hoped I looked my best and took care that I helped him find a cosy corner for the sit-out.

"It was delightful, and I was just lamenting that it was about time for the next dance when, horrors, clutching bold of my hand and frantically waving his other hand, he started roaring out texts, when suddenly, to my relief and astonishment, who should come up, followed by two men, but my first partner, whom I found to be a doctor, while my handsome partner was a religious maniac!"

AUSTRALIAN RAIN.

When It Does Fall It Pours Down in a Perfect Flood.

How different things are in the old world from what they are in the far-away tropics!

"They had no rain here for a fortnight, and they called it a drought!" wrote an Australian from Scotland in a scornfully superior tone calculated to induce the belief that it never rains in Australia and that droughts last a hundred years. Not so. Australia is the land of contrasts. A drought has lasted for seven years. But what is there even in Scotland to compare with the persistency of Australian rain when it does see fit to fall?

For eleven weeks without stopping did the rain continue to moisten the dry places of Sydney some years ago, washing out most cruelly the brief, bright season of winter, when the Australian looks for living instead of existence and peace instead of pressure. And what rain! It shot from the clouds like arrows, and the whole world was a battlefield during that July. As the arrows darted into the earth the earth rose and dashed into the air, and rain and mud met and grappled with each other day after day, night after night, week after week. And the battle was neither to the rain nor to the mud. A strange and horrid situation arrived. Sydney ran clean out of galoches.

For two weeks not a galoche was to be had in the rain drenched city for love or money. Then a fresh shipload arrived from somewhere or other. And then—the rain stopped!—London Mail.

One Trouble After Another.

"I have just found out about the woman opposite me after two years of mystery and anxiety," said the fat dweller. "She is a pretty, fat, jolly poly woman with a white complexion who sits at her window half of her time doing nothing. She has a boy of about ten. Her life seemed so simple and still I didn't see how she lived. Evidently she didn't support a husband, but who supported her? The thing worried me, but last night I found how it was. Her husband is a violin player who plays all night long at some concert hall and sleeps the livelong day. I'd rather work for my living than keep the house quiet for a husband who has to sleep all day, then gets up just at the time you want to go out for a little rollicking and plays the violin somewhere."

Gathering Roses.

I've gathered roses and the like in many glad and golden Junes, but now, as down the world I hike, my weary hands are filled with prunes. I've gathered roses o'er and o'er, and some were white and some were red, but when I took them to the store the grocer wanted eggs instead. I gathered roses long ago, in other days, in other scenes, and people said, "You ought to go and dig the weeds out of your beans." A million roses bloomed and died; a million more will die today. That man is wise who lets them slide and gathers up the bales of hay.—Emporia Gazette.

Setting It Right.

"In your paper this morning, sir, you called me a 'bum acter.' I want an explanation."

"I shall be happy to explain, young man. That word 'acter' was inserted by the proofreader, who thought I had omitted it accidentally. I shall take care that it doesn't happen again."

Pumps.

"Women," declared she, "have bigger intellects than men."

"I won't dispute it," responded he. "A man can't wear footgear that has to be kept on by mental power alone."

MOUNTAIN SLIDING.

Hawaiian Small Boys Simply "Drop Down the Edge of the Scenery."

Water sports are by no means the only vigorous athletics indulged in by the boys of Hawaii. Mountain climbing is a favorite pastime, for there are peaks 4,000 feet high within easy walking distance of any part of Honolulu and on the island of Hawaii there are two mountains fully 14,000 feet in height. Not infrequently the Honolulu schools give picnics on the mountain sides that the pupils may gather land shells. It is on these excursions in search of land shells that the Hawaiian schoolboys revel in the once national sport, mountain sliding.

A very steep mountain side is selected, where the grass is long and sloping downward. Every one gathers his own ti leaves. The ti leaf is something like the banana leaf, but not nearly so long. With a bunch of ti leaves in his hand the first boy steps to the edge of the side, grasps the leaves by the stems in both hands, places the leafy part under him and sits down, gives himself a start and drops down the edge of the scenery like a flash. I was assured that it was an easy matter to regulate the speed of descent by merely grasping the ti stems firmly and lifting them upward, this acting as a brake. I longed for the thrill of dropping down over the edge of a mountain and upon my brief sled of ti leaves began the descent. I went like the wind. It seemed as though my breath would be taken away from me or that I would plunge head over heels, to be dashed to pieces among the trees below. I thought of my brake and drew up on the ti leaves with all my might and came up with a jerk that jarred every bone in my body. There I sat, looking downward almost perpendicularly, held in position only by a few leaves resting on the smooth, slippery grass, but the sliding grass is nearly a foot long, and it is only after it has been repeatedly slidden over and beaten down that it approaches perfection in the eyes of the Hawaiian small boy and sometimes leads to accidents. When, for instance, the thin layer of ti leaves wears out beneath the slide a gentle tug at the stalks parts the sled and sends the slider whizzing downward in a most uncomfortable and ungraceful manner, all arms and legs. Lucky is the victim of such an accident if he is not stopped in his downward career by the trunk of a tree.—St. Nicholas.

SCARED THE ROBBERS.

Odd Incident in England in the Eighteenth Century.

For a time during the eighteenth century in England there was a lull in the robbery industry owing to an odd incident. Shortly after the execution of an English burglar named Elliston a curious communication purporting to have been written by him was put into circulation. "Now, as I am a dying man," it ran, "I have done something which may be of good use to the public. I have left with an honest man—the only honest man I was ever acquainted with—the names of all my wicked brethren, the places of their abode, with a short account of the chief crimes they have committed, in many of which I have been the accomplice and heard the rest from their own mouths. I have likewise set down the names of those we call our setters, of the houses we frequent and all of those who receive and buy our stolen goods. I have solemnly charged this honest man and have received his promise upon oath that whenever he hears of any rogue to be tried for robbery or housebreaking he will look into his list and if he finds there the name of the thief concerned to send the whole paper to the government. Of this I here give my companions fair and public warning and hope they will take it." It is said the hint was so effectual that for a long time pickpockets and burglars in that part of England went into panic stricken retirement. And, this being so, it is just as well they did not know that the letter was a clever forgery, the work of that prince of wits and humorists, Dean Swift.

Climatic Changes.

There is plenty of evidence of the very best sort which goes to prove that not only Europe and North America, but the lands situated within the arctic circle, must have enjoyed a tropical climate. The numerous fossil remains found in those regions are those of plants and animals which, according to the present state of our knowledge, must have lived under conditions now found only in the equatorial belt. Nothing is clearer than the fact that the polar cold is steadily gaining on the temperate and tropical zones and that eventually the land will be all ice fields.

Donald Knew.

Margaret, aged ten, was a beginner in history. "Mamma," she asked, "what does 'behead' mean?"

"To cut off a man's head, dear."

There was a moment of silent study, then another question.

"What does 'defeat' mean, mamma?"

Little Donald, aged four, was interested.

"I know, mamma," was his logical conclusion. "'Defeat' means to cut a man's feet off."—Delineator.

Very Different.

"In the olden days a reformer was liable to be burnt at the stake."

"Yes, and now we put him on the lecture platform and give him 50 per cent of the gross receipts!"

Talking and eloquence are not the same. To speak and to speak well are two things.—Ben Jonson.

A NATIONAL MUSEUM

RESTING PLACE FOR CANADIAN RELICS PROPOSED.

Movers of New Institution Favor a Repository at Montreal In View of Demolition of Old Chateau Ramezay—Many Valuable Treasures Are Available For Preservation In Proper Building.

Now that the Chateau de Ramezay, at Montreal, is about to be demolished, and its historic collection transferred to the Monument Nationale, the auspicious time has arrived, it would seem, for establishing a National Museum. The proposal to build a national museum in Westmount Park has already been endorsed by one of the founders of the Chateau de Ramezay.

There are many historical treasures in the vicinity, at "Temple Grove," for instance, which should be taken over and cared for in a national museum. In the library of this wonderful old place, the residence of Mr. D. R. McCord, K.C., are cases and shelves full of old leather-bound volumes and precious historic documents, gathered as a labor of love from all parts. A letter of Nelson, giving his impressions of Quebec, together with the signature and official seal of Wellington. Also the signature of Dollard and three others of the sixteen heroes who saved the colony from the Iroquois in 1660; as well as those of nearly all the heroic band of Jesuits, who, with death staring them in the face on every hand, penetrated the forest wilderness, and carried the story of the cross to the Indians. Casot—the last of the Jesuits—is there (1783), alongside of the signatures of Frontenac and of Maisonneuve, the founder of Montreal, is that of Laval de Montmorenci, the first Catholic Bishop of Quebec, and of saintly Bishop Stewart. On the table is a Dollond telescope, which could tell many a tale of stirring scenes beheld from the slopes of Mount Royal in the early part of the nineteenth century. Then there is an Eolian harp, nearly one hundred years old; a fine old barometer, presented by the Royal Society of England to one of Mr. McCord's ancestors; the cross of old Bonsecours Church; an ancient arquebus, and other curious relics. In a closet are shelves loaded with portfolios of valuable drawings and engravings by the thousand, all representing celebrated scenes and incidents in the annals of Canada. One, a velvet mezzotint of the Marquis of Townshend, is a veritable work of art, and is only one of many such.

Here on the walls, are swords, blunderbusses, guns, bayonets, daggers and other ancient weapons of war, in galore, the most interesting being the sword of Gen. Brock. Nearby is a glass case containing the war-bonnet of eagle feathers of Tecumseh, together with his bow and arrows. There is a fine example of the complete armor of a knight of the time of the War of the Roses—with marks of battle-axe cuts in the helmet. In another corner is a piece of the ash tree under which the first Superior of the Ursuline Sisters of Quebec taught the Indian children. On one part of the staircase walls are to be seen thirty-nine paintings in oils, representing historic scenes and places in Canada; interspersed with trophies of the warpath and the battlefield.

A Murderous Weapon.

Not content with the smaller knife affected by his less blood-thirsty countrymen, an Italian now in Parry Sound jail has exercised his ingenuity on making a "murderers' tool," out of a file, and he has done his work well, for when the knife, sent by a magistrate from that northern district, arrived at the Attorney-General's Department the Toronto detectives who viewed it said they had never seen its like.

This knife was made from a file 9 inches long, and 7 1-2 inches is utilized as a blade. It tapers from an inch in diameter to a needle point and carries a keen cutting edge on both edges. The shank is set in a piece of small maple branch, with the bark still on in some places to ensure a perfect grip.

In the hands of an assassin such a knife would go through a victim as easily as a bayonet on the end of a heavy rifle; and it is a good thing the knife was taken away from this sanguine native of sunny Italy before he had occasion to use it.

More Go Into Teaching.

Increases in teachers' salaries, says Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education for Ontario, who has just returned from England, is responsible for the large increase in the number of entries for the Normal schools this year. There are 1,300 applications, which is more than double the average. The six Normal schools have accommodation for about 1,200 students.

The average increase in country school salaries has been from $403 in in 1904 to $458 in 1907 for males and from $295 to $379 for females. In town schools the increase is from $485 to $547 for males, and from $335 to $369 for females.

Hon. Dr. Pyne is reserving his conclusions from the observations he made on technical education in Great Britain.

Say Shows Are Immoral.

Complaint has been made to the department of moral reform of the Methodist Church about the class of theatrical production allowed to enter the Dominion from the United States and do business throughout Canada.

It is charged that in certain theatres in Toronto, Hamilton, and Montreal plays of vicious and immoral tendency are given.

Eaten by Wolves.

Mike McHugh of Vancouver, B.C., disappeared three years ago at Alberni, Vancouver Island. Recently the remains of the skeleton were found, indicating he had been killed and devoured by wolves or panthers.

A COURSE OF OX.

Try It as an Antidote For the Ills of the Strenuous Life.

In the choice of motor power allow me to suggest the ox. The horse leans forward to pull and even helps himself along by bobbing his head. He jerks a load out of a hard place by plunging bodily against the collar, stopping and lunging again. He strains through a hard place and then starts suddenly forward at his release. He works himself into a lather, and you, if you are the right kind of person, cannot help feeling for him and assisting him with inward stress and strain.

The ox does not bob a horn. He simply journeys, and the load goes along. When he comes to a tough place his pasterns do not bend down, he does not squat to pull, he does not pinch along on the toes of his shoes, he seldom blows, and he does not know how to sweat. He does not exert himself at a patch of woven soil and then hurry up when he is past it. The chain becomes stiffer, and the yoke sits solider to his neck, and that is all. There is no sign of effort. The earth may grit its teeth and crunch as it swallows the plow, but the ox stalks on his way. With the share deep or shallow or lifted entirely and hanging from the axle, whether he is plowing earth or air, it makes no difference to him. His most ponderous task is still himself, and he heeds no incidentals.

He is out for a stroll. He does not allow work to interfere with the even tenor of his way. His tendons are rigged to his outstanding rump bones like so much spar and tackle, and he goes along by interior leverage. Inside his old woman hulk is the necessary engine work, and he will neither go slower for this thing nor faster for that. There is much about him besides his disposition that is self contained. He is the antithesis of the automobile. To ride on his back is a cure for indigestion; to ride behind him is a rest for the mind. A course of ox is an antidote for the ills of the times.—Charles D. Stewart in Atlantic.

A BRIER PIPE.

Get One That Is Smooth Inside the Bowl, Says a Smoker.

A collegian who prides himself on the sweetness and color of his brier wood pipes and pretends to know a lot more about them than any ordinary smoker spent half an hour in a tobacco shop making an addition to his already large collection.

Some pipes he discarded because of the grain in the wood. There was too much stripe or too much birdseye, he remarked. When he found one which suited him he put it aside until he had gathered three or four which apparently were all right, and then came his final test to pick out the best of them all.

He held each with the bowl toward the light, then slowly rubbed his little finger inside. Two he discarded, then repeated the operation with the others until only one remained out of the discard. That one he bought.

"Want 'em smooth inside," he explained. "A brier pipe roughly finished inside the bowl isn't worth bothering with. I wouldn't take one for a gift; wouldn't take the trouble to try to break it in, for it will never be any good. It won't cake up right, and it'll never be nice and sweet.

"I've got a theory that when the inside of the bowl is rough all the little edges and points of wood char and burn the first time you smoke it, and a burnt pipe is no good. That's why I always take a pipe that has a bowl as smooth on the inside as on the out.

"Then it doesn't char, but cakes up evenly and gets good in a little time. Maybe the theory is wrong, but it has worked out well in my own experience, and some of my friends who have tried it agree with me."

One Industry of the Pesky Ant.

Out in Burma and the far east, where sandalwood is worth its weight in silver, the pestiferous ant is a valuable assistant to the loggers of that precious timber. The hard and fragrant heartwood alone has value, but as the tree grows this valuable heart is overlaid by a soft and worthless layer forming two-thirds of the trunk. When a tree is felled and cut into lengths the loggers let the timber lie. At once the ants begin work upon the soft wood, which is sappy and sweet enough to attract them. In a few weeks, less than a month in the case of the largest butts, the ants deliver the heartwood free of all the worthless sapwood.

Explaining.

"Aha, Mose! What are you doing with those chickens?"

"Is dem yo' chickens, boss?"

"You got them out of my coop."

"What kinda chickens is dey, boss?"

"They are Rhode Island Reds. What are you doing with them?"

"Why, boss, I done bought some Rhode Island Reds f'm a man yestiddy, an' I come ovah to git some o' yo' alls chickens to see ef mine was lak yo' alls. Ah doesn't lak to git cheated, boss."

Tricking the Hens.

Chinamen have a way of tricking hens so that they assist in the hatching of fish. Fish eggs are carefully placed in an eggshell, which is then sealed and placed under an unsuspecting hen. In a few days the spawn is warmed into life, and the contents of the shell are then cast into a shallow pool, where the sunshine completes the work.

THE PRETZEL.

Its Simple Figure Scheme and Infinite Possibilities of Variety.

The pretzel is one of the most remarkable creations of the human mind and hand. It stands almost alone as an artificial product displaying the countless varieties of form produced by nature in the leaves of trees and blades of grasses. Of the millions upon millions turned out by the pretzel bakeries since the inception of the industry it is not probable that any two were exactly alike.

The general figure scheme of the pretzel must have been an inspiration. It would have been impossible for the human mind to conceive a scheme so simple and yet permitting such approach to infinite variation. Because of the peculiar shape of the pretzel its construction is most easily described by employing sailor men's terms. A bight is taken in a roll of dough, and the ends are given a half twist and brought back upon opposite sides of the bight. This makes the article somewhat heart shaped. There can have been no sentimental reason for this shape, for there is no product of art or nature further removed from the realm of sentiment than is the pretzel. The finished article looks as if it had been varnished and exposed to a sandstorm before the varnish dried.

The pretzel is unique as an article of internal use. It cannot be classed as food or drink. It is not a dessert, nor is it a medicine. Perhaps it should be classed as an appetizer—an appetizer not for food, but for drink, and therein lies its uniqueness. It is the great thirst producer. It is the third of a Sahara done up in a twist of dough. If any one could invent something that would quench thirst as effectively as the pretzel can produce it his fortune would be made.

The home of the pretzel is Germany, where it is called bretzel or pretzel, according to whether it is in north Germany or south Germany, but in America it is pretzel all the time, whether in North America or South America. The name is commonly regarded as being derived from words in the Latin language meaning bracelet. But Germans are not fond of taking words from the Latin tongues. Perhaps the pretzel owes its name to the fact that it is baked on a flat, boardlike surface. The German word for board is brett.

READING THE STARS.

An Author's Mastery of the Science of Navigation.

"By the end of the week, teaching myself," writes Jack London in Harper's Weekly of his mastery of the science of navigation, "I was able to do divers things. For instance, I shot the North star, at night, of course—got its altitude, corrected for index error, dip, etc., and found our latitude. And this latitude agreed with the latitude of the previous noon corrected by dead reckoning up to that moment. Proud? Well, I was even prouder with my next miracle. I was going to turn in at 9 o'clock. I worked out the problem self instructed and learned what star of the first magnitude would be passing the meridian around half past 8. This star proved to be Alpha Crucis. I had never heard of the star before. I looked it up on the star map. It was one of the stars of the Southern Cross. What, thought I! Have we been sailing with the Southern Cross in the sky of nights and never known it? Dolts that we are! Gudgeons and moles! I couldn't believe it. I went over the problem again and verified it. Charmian had the wheel from 8 till 10 that evening. I told her to keep her eyes open and look due south for the Southern Cross, and when the stars came out there shone the Southern Cross low on the horizon. Proud? No medicine man nor high priest was ever prouder. Furthermore, with the prayer wheel I shot Alpha Crucis and from its altitude worked out our latitude, and still furthermore I shot the North star, too, and it agreed with what had been told me by the Southern Cross. Proud? Why, the language of the stars was mine, and I listened and heard them telling me my way over the deep."

Weight of a Lion.

What does a lion weigh? Those who know the look of the king of beasts best and how small his little body really is will probably come farthest from the truth. About 300 to 350 pounds is a usual estimate, but a full grown lion will tip the scales at no less than 500 pounds. Five hundred and forty pounds is the record for an African lion. His bone is solid and heavy as ivory. The tiger runs the lion very close. A Bengal tiger killed by an English officer scaled 520 pounds. A tiger this size has, however, considerably more muscular strength than the biggest lion.

One Point Gained.

"Has that girl next door to you still got her parlor melodeon?"

"No; she exchanged it for a cornet, I'm glad to say."

"But, gracious, if she plays the cornet, that's worse, isn't it?"

"Not at all. It's only half as bad. She can't sing while she's playing the cornet."

The Two Women.

An old offender was introduced to a new county justice as John Timmins, alias Jones, alias Smith.

"I'll try the two women first," said the justice. "Bring in Alice Jones."

The Wiles of Women.

Appetite Gone--Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified In Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter sorely tried her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Whitmire, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headaches. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfect. For a good cleaning, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old, and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength in every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Liberal Rally of nominating a short time ago a friend to all the people of the riding in Hon. J. R. Stratton.

He contrasted the condition of the country 12 years ago with the present and pointed out that in twelve years of time the farmers had prospered immensely, railways had been built and transportation facilities had been advanced beyond that of any similar length of time in the past. Canada before 1896 had just as rich agricultural lands and just as rich mineral lands as they had to day, but prior to that time the men at the head of affairs had not the energy to begin the era of prosperity. In 1896 the premier had placed five important planks in his platform which was carried out to the letter. These were the cessation of the race and creed war in connection with the Manitoba school question, the revision of the tariff, the betterment of the transportation facilities, the settlement of the North-West, and the development of the foreign markets. At the present time there is not a country that the sun shines on in which races and creeds were blended as they are under the British flag in his fair Dominion of ours.

The Liberal government in the revision of tariff had done much for Canada and the manufacturing industries, have gone forward in Canada during the past twelve years as they have never done in the past.

The transportation facilities of Canada have not at all been forgotten during that period of time. The Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river—one of the most important waterways to be found in any country, had not been utilized to near their fullest extent. When the Liberal government came into power they found but a 9-foot water way from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Georgian Bay. Today cargoes amounting to more than 80,000 bushels can be brought down over a 14-foot waterway, and trade as thus advanced in leaps and bounds. The harbors of Canada on the Atlantic and on the Pacific coasts are second to none in the world, and even the United States government is beginning to realize the greatness of these facilities.

To the building of railways the government has given its utmost consideration. Since coming into power the Liberal government had made the Intercolonial Railway a paying proposition. Prior to 1896 cold storage on the great ocean liners was an unknown thing to Canadians. This country at that time had to take second place to Australia from which was imported the best of dairy products.

The throwing down of the tariff walls had increased in a wonderful measure the trade of Canada. Mr. Hall constructed the trade twelve years ago with that of today, pointing out that Canada is sending $39,000,000 worth of goods to Great Britain more than Great Britain is sending to Canada. During Mr. Hall's legislation in parliament, the tariff commission has sat in Peterborough for some two days, when the manufacturers of this city had laid their complaints. The last one of the tariff which Hall framed, was found suitable to every manufacturer in Peterborough, with the exception of Mr. James Kendry, who didn't see fit to lay his case before the government when that revision was being considered. Mr. Hall dealt with the wonderful progress made by the Canadian North-West, when during the small period of twelve years a great and stupendous growth had taken place. Encouragement was given by the government to the building up of markets in foreign countries. Trade commissioners were constituted everywhere with the result that Canada's trade had risen to the magnificent sum of $411,000,000. He did not believe that any man who had sat in parliament with Sir Wilfrid Laurier for four years could but admire him as a great statesman, and as the outstanding feature in the British Empire. He hoped that the people of Canada would give the grand old man a substantial majority on the 26th of October, and that the people of this riding would return as their representative the Hon. J. R. Stratton, who had had the opportunity of representing them so well as a member of the Legislature of the former province of the Dominion for ninteen years.

HON. SENATOR COX

Hon. Mr. Cox was proud to be present as a Reform relative and citizen of Peterborough county. He was always pleased in the building up of his native city, and it considered that the sending of the Hon. J. R. Stratton to Ottawa by the votes of the electors of Peterborough County on Oct. 26th. If he had wanted to obtain an editor of a monthly magazine he might call upon Mr. Burnham, but if he wanted to send a man to parliament to assist in the building up of the community, he would select Mr. Stratton. Comparing the administration of the Liberal government with that of the Conservatives he believed that the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his associates would do more for the advancement of his fair Dominion than those who are desirous of taking their places. Hon. Mr. Stratton was a man well qualified to take part in this great work, and he asked the electors of West Peterborough to send him as their representative to Ottawa, and to send him with a good substantial majority.

Mr. J. R. Stratton's address will appear in Saturday's issue.

Nursing Mothers and Over-burdened Women

In all stations of life, whose vigor and vitality may have been undermined and broken-down by over-work, exacting social duties, the too frequent bearing of children, or other causes, will find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the most potent, invigorating restorative strength-giver ever devised for their special benefit. Nursing mothers will find it especially valuable in sustaining their strength and promoting an abundant nourishment for the child. Expectant mothers too will find it a priceless boon to prepare the system for baby's coming and rendering the ordeal comparatively painless. It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

Delicate, nervous, weak women, who suffer from frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down distress low down in the abdomen, or from painful or irregular monthly periods, gnawing or distressed sensation in stomach, dizzy or faint spells, see imaginary specks or spots floating before eyes, have disagreeable, pelvic catarrhal drain, prolapsus, anteversion or retro-version or other displacements of womanly organs from weakness of parts will, whether they experience many or only a few of the above symptoms, find relief and a permanent cure by using faithfully and fairly persistently Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This world-famed specific for woman's weaknesses and peculiar ailments is a pure glyceric extract of the choicest native, medicinal roots without a drop of alcohol in its make-up. All its ingredients printed in plain English on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. Dr. Pierce thus invites the fullest investigation of his formula knowing that it will be found to contain only the best agents known to the most advanced medical science of all the different schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments.

BASEBALL

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Exultant over their victory in winning the world's championship, the Chicago team of the National League, arrived home from Detroit early today, and was met at the station by an enthusiastic crowd. The players, who were accompanied by members of the National Commission, reported having met with ovations wherever the train stopped on this way home. When the train pulled into the station there a mob of baseball enthusiasts rushed through the gates and carried a "welcome home" to the individual players. Some of the players announced their intention of preparing for fishing and hunting trips, although they are scheduled for an exhibition game, to be played here with the Detroit team on Sunday. In this game the players will play as individuals, and not as clubs.

ANDREW LAWSON'S BODY RECOVERED

Special to The Times

Lindsay, Oct. 15.—The body of Andrew Lawson, the unfortunate young man who was drowned yesterday morning in Sturgeon Lake, was recovered yesterday afternoon shortly after five o'clock.

FOUR FEET OF WATER.

After a three hours' search, the body was discovered in about four feet of water, just where it had sunk. It would seem impossible for a man to be drowned in that depth of water, but the bottom is composed of slimy mud to the depth of several feet, in which the young man had sunk.

EYE WITNESS TELLS STORY.

Mr. James Culp, who was one of the party, told the story of the drowning as follows; "We left Bald Point early in the morning, Sinclair being in a canoe with me and Lawson and Chas Lewy in the other duck boat. We paddled eastward across the lake and set our decoys in the bog just north of the first lighthouse. Sinclair and I pulled up our decoys about half past nine, and I noticed that the other fellows were also coming out of the bog, shortly afterwards I turned around and saw something that looked like a stump about half a mile from where we were. I thought something was wrong right away, and we paddled as fast as we could for it. We were horrified to see that it was an upturned duckboat when we reached the place and that Charles Lewy was hanging on to it, while Lawson was nowhere in sight. When we pulled Lewy in he was so exhausted he could hardly speak. He managed to let us know that Lawson was drowned and, being unable to make a search for the body, owing to the heavy clothes we had on, we paddled back and sent word to Lindsay."

All were from Beamsville, and Culp had been duck shooting on Sturgeon Lake before.

INQUEST UNNECESSARY

Dr. Blanchard, coroner for Lindsay, secured Sadler's launch and with Mr. Nugent and a number of others went in search of the body.

After hearing the story of Lewy, and the other two, Coroner Blanchard, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Deceased was only twenty-five years of age and is married, his young wife having been telegraphed the sad news of her husband's death. They had been married just two years. His parents are dead and one brother is living in the Northwest. By trade he was a barber and had been a resident of Beamsville for some time. As a citizen and a man he was well liked and respected, having been an I. O.O.F. member, and also a member of the Masonic lodge.

The members of the duck shooting party to which the victim of the accident belonged were Wm. Sinclair, a hardware clerk, Jas. Culp, a painter, Chas. Lewy and the deceased.

Can Sell Ice Cream on the Sabbath

The following London dispatch will be of interest to local restaurant men.

London, Ont., Oct. 14.—Magistrate Love decided this morning that ice cream may be sold on Sundays in local restaurants for consumption on the premises, but may not be taken away in package form. The decision came in the case of Peter Mandas of the Olympian Cafe, who was charged with selling ice cream on Sunday.

GREENWOOD AND THE LADIES.

London, Oct. 15.—Mr. Hamar Greenwood created some amusement in the House of Commons yesterday by asking the Speaker to abolish the privilge enjoyed by M.P.'s of bringing ladies into the members' lobby. The Speaker eventually ordered that no woman should be allowed to pass the doorkeepers.

FELL DOWN LOCK-UP STEPS, RECEIVED FATAL INJURIES

Lindsay, Oct. 15.—About eleven o'clock last night, Percy Sloan, an Englishman, was arrested by Night Constable John Short for being drunk and disorderly. The prisoner was in a bad state of intoxication, and while going down the flight of stairs leading to the lockup he fell, hitting his head against the cement floor. A nasty cut was inflicted in the prisoner's head and his companion of it. Accordingly, Dr. McAlpine was sent for and the wound was bandaged up, this injured man being taken to the Ross Hospital. An examination was made of Sloan's injuries this morning, and they proved to be more serious than first thought. The doctor stated this morning that his recovery is impossible owing to the skull being fractured.

The injured man is well known in Ops and has been in the employ of Mr. Percy Boughton of Ops, for the past year. He has been in Canada about four years and has been a resident of this neighborhood since coming to this country.

BIRD KILLER FINED.

Memphis, Oct. 15.—Following other severe penalties imposed under the recently enacted law to protect game birds in Tennessee, R. F. Mabry, of Sumner county, was to-day fined $2,500 for trying to dispose by sale of fifty quail. The birds were trapped, according to Game Warden King, who made the arrest, and killed by blows on the head. Many grouse quail were among the number. Mabry got the extreme penalty of the law.

COMMITTEE ARE RE-ARRANGING LIGHTS

The members of the Fire, Water and Light Committee have, through the courtesy of Mr. J. H. Yarmouth, of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., had the electric light at the corner of Sherbrooke and Hunter streets, placed in the center of the street, and hung about one-half lower. The result is a decided improvement in the service given by the light and demonstrates very satisfactorily what members of the Fire, Water and Light Committee have long desired to have carried out. All or practically all, lights and especially those on streets where there are trees, should be hung in the center of the street, so that it will show light in all four directions. The lamps should also be dropped several feet so that the rays will show under the trees, instead of over the tops of the branches as so many of them do now. The light referred to is a good example of the new idea, and citizens should go up and look at it.

J. R. STRATTON TO HIS CONSTITUENTS

The following is the substance of the address of Hon. J. R. Stratton to his constituents at the great mass meeting in the opera house on Thursday evening, held over from last yesterday's report of the event, was received with an exceedingly flattering demonstration of applause. It would be vanity for him to say that he was not delighted with the very cordial greeting he had received, but he had always been given such by his fellow citizens in his home town, where he knew everybody, and everybody knew him. He was delighted, but not surprised at so large an attendance at a meeting called in his interest. He believed that this large gathering had met to listen to the discussion of public questions. He was sure that they were not drawn together merely by curiosity, but by a realization of their duty in the serious matter of electing a man to represent them in Parliament. He supposed, did they supposed, that they were gathered for the purpose of doing something that would add to the history of the progress of this city of Peterborough. He was glad to see so many of the ladies of Peterborough present on this occasion, and he referred that the presence of the wives and daughters of his neighbours was not without its significance in this election. The ladies had no votes, though their time was coming, but they had an influence not to be despised, and of which he was proud to see the advantage. The people before him in this large assemblage. were pretty well acquainted with the conditions. There were very few of them to whom he was not accustomed to say "Good day" when he met them, and he had been going up and down among them all his life. They had known him in private life and in public life, and each one of them knew that it made no difference to J. R. Stratton who a man was if he were brought his attention. Now, Mr. Borden had been here, Mr. Roblin had been here, Mr. Hanna had been here, and even the man from Manitoulin, from whom some of the dregs of the Opposition party had expected a great exhibition, had been here, and they had come and gone without electrifying the citizens of Peterborough, and it was an easy matter to know why. First, because they had nothing to prove, and next, because against every assault he (Mr. Stratton) was able to present the effective defence of a straight-forward course as citizen. And although they had in that hall the leader of the Opposition, though the great power of the Conservative party had been levelled against him, he felt sufficiently strong in his integrity, and in the consciousness that he possessed of having always and at all times done the best he could for the people of Peterborough, he did not believe that the foolish aspersions by which he had been assailed, would affect their minds, and that

Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Nasmith House Destroyed

Lindsay, Oct. 16.—Early this morning the fine summer home of Mr. M. Nasmith, Toronto, at Ancona Point, near Bobcaygeon, and on Sturgeon Lake, was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Nasmith and his son, H. P. Nasmith, were in the place and had to escape in haste. The contents were all burned, including a piano, a number of articles had been removed to Toronto, however. The building was valued at $1,500. The cause of the fire is a complete mystery.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Fresh, pure blood can be made sure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, It clarifies and purifies the blood, thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

● ● ● ● ● ●

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Petes May Play in Toronto Saturday

The baseball season in Peterborough is closed for 1908, although the Petes may journey to Toronto a week from today to meet the Park Nine, or who ever wins the Toronto City Amateur League championship which will be decided this afternoon. Tony Burns said he could not arrange any games with Palmerston, but expects to complete arrangements for next Saturday.

Successful Social Held at St. Luke's

The social tendered by the Ladies' aid of St. Paul's church to the young people of the church, and especially to the Normal students and Business College students, was very successful and girtatly enjoyed by the young people. An informal program was rendered after which a social hour was spent in introductions and then refreshments were served.

Young People Entertained at St. Paul's

The A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's church held a very successful and enjoyable evening in honor of the Normal students who are members of the Anglican church. There were about a large contingent from St. John's number of the Normal students, and eighty present including quite a A.Y.P.A., headed by Rev. Canon Davidson, Mr. H. Potter, president of the St. Luke's A.Y.P.A., acted as chairman. Addresses of welcome were extended to the visitors by Rev. H. Langfeldt, rector, and Mr. G. R. Browning, the people's warden. Dr. Parks of the Normal school staff, replied on behalf of the students.

During the evening a splendid program was rendered, and at the close refreshments were served. This was one of several evenings which the young people expect to spend with their friends.

Temperance Sunday In City Churches

Sunday will be "Temperance Sunday in the city churches and special sermons in the temperance cause will be preached by several ministers and temperance workers from outside the city. Two mass meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House one in the afternoon and the other in the evening.

The following arrangements have been made for the services in the churches.

Rev. D. H Spence, Toronto, secretary of the Dominion Alliance, will preach at George street church in the morning and at Murray street church in the evening.

Rev. Nathaniel Smith, Toronto, will preach at Knox church in the morning and at St. Paul's church in the evening.

Rev. W. G. Clarke, B. A., of Port Hope, will be the speaker at Mark St. church in the morning and at Charlotte street in the evening.

Mr. Owen Hitchcox, Toronto, a well-known temperance worker, will speak at St. Andrew's church in the evening.

Mr. Dwyer, of Toronto, will speak at Bethany Tabernacle in the morning and at Park street church in the evening.

Rev. F. J. Lynch, Toronto, will preach at St. John's church in the morning and will conduct the evening service at All Saints' church.

Daly Refuses to Put Up Side Bet

Carney Burns received a letter yesterday from Tom Daly of Brantford, refusing to put up a side bet of $100. He agreed to fight, however for 60 and 40 per cent. of the gate receipts. This is not satisfactory to Burns who insists on the side bet and unless the Brantford glove artist agrees to the side bet, it is very probable that he will not meet Burns.

Negro Committed for Murder of Stratford Woman

(Special from The Times.)

Stratford, Oct. 16.—Frank Rough wood, the negro who was charged with the murder of Mrs. Wm. Peak, was committed for trial at the Spring Assizes. He pleaded not guilty, and still persists in his innocence. At the preliminary hearing he was not represented by counsel, but it is understood his case will be conducted by J. C. Makins at the trial.

U. S. Fleet in a Severe Storm

(Special from The Times.)

Tokio, Japan, Oct. 16.—The delay of the United States battleship fleet in arriving at Yokohama was due to a tremendous storm off the north coast of the island of Luzon, one of the Phillipine group. The storm began on the morning of the 12th and continued until the afternoon of the 13th. One man was drowned, and the fleet suffered considerable damage. The fleet is due to arrive at nine o'clock on the 19th.

Ross Summers Attacked Girls, Was Arrested

(Special from The Times.)

Windsor, Oct. 16.—Ross Summers, 20 years old of Cornwall, Ont., was arrested in Detroit tonight on a charge of attacking two young girls, the daughters of a respectable Oxford county farmer, on September 15th last, after which he escaped to Detroit, and evaded the gang who set out to scour the country for him. He will be taken to Woodstock jail to stand trial.

Big Reception to Hon. R. L. Borden in Lennoxville

(Special to The Times.)

Lennoxville, Que., Oct. 16.—Although the Borden meeting tonight was organized in less than 24 hours in order to take advantage of the few minutes the honored leader of the Conservative party could spare on his way through to the Maritime Provinces, it was a decided success, and Mr. Borden was given a splendid reception. The town hall was uncomfortably crowded the isles all available space being filled. A new feature was the presence of a large delegation of students from Bishop's College, who enlivened the meeting with college yells and songs and had had the hall decorated with banners, etc.

Mr. Borden arrived at Sherbrooke, at nine o'clock, and was hurried to Lennoxville in an auto. During his speech he said, "I do not appeal merely to the Conservative party, but I appeal to the honest and patriotic rank and file of the Liberal party. The men now in power have misrepresented them and have departed from the old Liberal doctrines."

Special Sermons

Two special sermons will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt in St. Luke's church on Sunday. In the morning he will speak on Sunday school work, and in the evening on temperance. All are welcome.

Brockville Woman Choked and Badly Beaten by Tramp

(Special from The Times.)

Brockville, Oct. 16.—Choked and badly beaten were the experiences of Mrs. Wm. Charlton, wife of a respectable farmer, living three miles from here. She was assailed by a tramp who had visited the house and asked for breakfast. The good lady asked him into the kitchen and when he got her alone he demanded money. Mrs. Charlton screamed and ran to the door to call the male members of the household, who were in the barn doing the chores. The tramp, however, grabbed her by the throat before she got the door open and dealt her a blow which felled her to the floor unconscious, in which state she was found half an hour later. The tramp went through the house in search of money and was rewarded by finding $1.05 on the pantry shelf. He then escaped and has not since been caught.

Naughty Men in Toronto Arrested

(Special from The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Five men were arrested here today for selling obscene post cards and literature. Two of them are wholesalers while a Barrie dealer who had received previous orders sent another order for "1000 cards worse than the others." He will be summonsed. Half a dozen appeared in the police court this morning on a similar charge. Cards to the value of $6000 have been seized.

Disastrous Forest Fires Caught a Train, 16 Burned to Death

(Special to The Times.)

Alpena, Mich., — The forest fires raging here have done a tremendous amount of damage. A very accurate report of last night's horrible wreck, caused by the spreading of rails on the Detroit & Mackinac R.R., when the relief train from Metz endeavored to run through the fire was wrecked and burned, has been received. The death list stands now at fourteen with two more burned to death in their home which was close to the track where the wreck occurred and was burned by the forest fires. The dead are:

Fireman A. Lee, of Alpena; Brakeman Wm. Barrett, of Alpena; Mrs. Geo. Circori and three children, Mrs. John Konitesy and three children, and Mrs. Ed. Hurdle and three children, all of Metz, and John Norwicki, jr. and wife, who were living in the house beside the track, and were burned to death.

Many passengers were injured on their way to Posen, between Metz and the wreck.

The unfortunate train was a relief train sent to Metz to bring the inhabitants here on account of the forest fires, and it is said that had they taken the train when it first arrived they could all have been brought here in safety. They were however insistent upon saving all their household goods, and delayed until the fire swept the track.

The train consisted of some wooden cars and one steel gondola. Into this were crowded 30 or 40 men, women and children with household effects. At Norwick's siding the rails spread and the engine ploughed into the roadbed. The flames swept over the doomed cars and set them on fire, igniting at the same time the household goods in the car with the people. Three mothers and nine children stayed inside the steel car until the sides became red hot and all were cremated.

Fireman Lee sought safety in the boiler tank on the engine, and was literally boiled to death. Brakeman Barrett died on the engine.

The engineer and another member of the train crew saved their lives by creeping along the track on their hands and knees to the nearest village, although they were badly burned. It is reported that the engineer is black from his burns and will likely die. The other fellow will live.

Sixty people who spent a night of terror on the south-bound train from Chiboygan, being hemmed in all night by fires at La Roque, have just arrived on a relief train.

The fires this afternoon are dangerously near Rogers City. La Roque also seems to be doomed unless rains come within a few hours. The women and children have all been sent away from this village. Farms between Metz and Rogers City have been ravaged by the fires.

In a despatch from Hawes, Mich., it is learned that Henry C. Kemp, wife and two children were burned to death this afternoon of last night. The four charred bodies were found in the ruins of the farm house tonight.

BIG CONSERVATIVE RALLY AT BUCKHORN

Once more a large gathering greeted Mr. J. H. Burnham, the Conservative candidate. Last night he journeyed out to Buckhorn, and held a meeting in the town hall which was crowded. Mr. Wilson, the village blacksmith occupied the chair, and the audience was most appreciative and enthusiastic.

The first speaker was Lt.-Col. Miller, and he said, Why has the government gone to the country before the time was up by a whole year? The answer is the dread of approaching bad times. We must work to keep our heritage our glorious in good condition and free from the hand of the spoiler. Liberals and Conservatives are both Canadians but we must remember that members of both parties at times in the history of administrations have forfeited our confidence. Mr. Borden will unquestionably win in the next election and so will Mr. Burnham. The electors are much more independent and strong-minded than they used to be. Laurier's immigration was destructive of Canada.

The Ross rifle was unnecessary. The Lee-Enfield was perfectly good in every way, and our present stock was good for 25 years longer, therefore the Ross rifle cost Canada unnecessarily one million dollars. The old rifles become scrap. He thought it was merely a chance for graft. The Ross rifles was not endorsed by Britain. Then the Laurier government gave the Ross Rifle Co. 10 acres of land at Quebec out of which the company made more than half a million dollars profit. One speaker at Mr. Stratton's little meeting on Thursday night at Peterborough, said that certain red coats were made in Canada under Sir John at a cost for making of 25 cents. This was wholly untrue. They were made in England at the regular price and the proof is in the records at Ottawa. Mr. McFarlane owes an apology for his ignorant statement to the people of Peterborough. It was an attempt to steal an advantage by making a bold and untrue statement. Things got in such a tangle in the bookkeeping at Ottawa that Sir Wilfrid employed eight or ten New Yorkers at an average of $50 a day for each one to unravel the tangle. Five hundred dollars a day for a long period. Col. Miller excited great laughter by his annunciation of the ice-breakers' outfit. He ridiculed Mr. Stratton's claims to have built all the public improvements in the county. Many of his claims are made out of whole cloth. His administration was rarely in the public eye, always looked out for the grafters whose support he was chiefly anxious to secure. He conducted a splendid address of over an hour's duration by reference to the entire secrecy of the ballot and the need of greater patriotism.

Mr. Burnham dwelt at length upon the issues of the day especially criticising the new provincial boundaries proposed by the Laurier government.

The meeting closed with the usual cheers.

St. Andrew's Church

Communion services will be held in St. Andrew's church on Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock services. The preparatory services were held last night when Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville, preached a very appropriate sermon to a large congregation.

RUGBY

Two good rugby games are scheduled for this afternoon at Riverside Park when a double-header will be pulled off in the junior City League. At two o'clock the Y.M.C.A. and Collegiate Institute will clash and a grand game should be the result. Dr. McPherson has been working out the school team four afternoons a week and they are in superb shape. The "Y" have not been losing any opportunities to practice either and will be ready for the battle.

The second game between the T.A.S. and Rough Riders should be equally interesting. The absentees are in much better shape than they were last Saturday and will give the Rough Riders a hard fight. It should be close all the way.

BUILDING PICKS UP.

Reports From Trade In Canadian Cities Show Prosperity.

To determine with a fair accuracy the exact building conditions that exist throughout the country generally, "Construction" has secured statistics from eleven representative cities of the Dominion, showing the aggregate cost of buildings for which permits were issued for the first eight months of 1908, as compared with 1907.

In eleven cities reported, the cost of buildings for the first eight months of 1908 was $24,194,915, as compared with $28,950,569 for the same period of 1907, thus showing a decrease of 26.84 per cent.

In nine cities for which figures were secured for the month of August, the aggregate cost of buildings for August, 1908, was $3,854,984, as compared with $3,194,536 for the corresponding month of 1907, thus showing an increase of 20.67 per cent.

From this it can be seen that Canada's principal centres have turned a decrease of 26.84 per cent. for the eight months of 1908 into an increase of 20.67 per cent. for the month of August, 1908, as compared with the same periods of 1907.

It will be noted that Regina shows the largest increase (389.13) per cent.), Toronto the smallest increase (6.05 per cent.), Vancouver the largest decrease (23.96 per cent.), and St. John, N.B., the smallest decrease (19.96 per cent.) for the month of August.

Fort William has the largest increase (30.15 per cent.), Edmonton the smallest increase (8.5 per cent.), Montreal the largest decrease (50.32 per cent.), and Winnipeg the smallest decrease (37.3 per cent.), for the first eight months of the year.

In view of the general opinion that Winnipeg suffered most from the money stringency, it is worthy of note that the decrease in her building was much lower than that of any of our larger eastern cities.

Only three of the cities reported, show a decrease for August, viz.: Vancouver, Calgary and St. John, N.B., while only three show an increase for the eight months of the year, viz.: Vancouver, Edmonton and Fort William.

Reports as to prospects for the remainder of the year were generally bright and it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the year will finish well. There seems to be a large amount of building, that was contemplated early in the year, and for financial reasons had to be postponed, that is being proceeded with this fall.

Sir John's Battle Cry.

It was in his address to the electors issued at the opening of the campaign of 1878 that Sir John A. Macdonald used that oft-quoted and stirring sentence—"A British subject I was born—a British subject I will die."

The wish therein expressed was realized shortly afterwards, when Sir John passed away at Ottawa. Mourned by the entire Canadian people his remains were borne back to Kingston, to which, seventy-one years before, he had come from Scotland, a poor lad, to make his way in a new land.

Sir John's expression of determination to remain a Briton, and which struck a responsive chord in the heart of the Canadian electorate, was used almost word for word some years earlier by that great Nova Scotian, Joseph Howe. When addressing a gathering of electors during a time of considerable unrest, and when mutterings of disloyalty were heard in certain parts of the province, Howe, in the course of his speech, said: "I will live and die a British subject." He died not only a British subject and a citizen of Nova Scotia, but an officer of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, whose creation in the form it took in 1867 he strenuously opposed.

The Siffleur.

The following note by Dr. Hector, the geologist who accompanied one of the early explorations of British Columbia under Captain Palliser, refers to the mountain woodchuck, which the French trappers called siffleur, or "whistler," on account of its cry. The animal is common near the timber-line throughout the northern Rockies.

"We saw (on Castle mountain) several bands of sheep, but did not get a shot; however, we killed two of the marmots or siffleurs. This animal is the size of a badger, with coarse hair, and no proper fur. It has large incisor teeth like those of the beaver; it lives among the rocks, and has a large nest, in which it lays up stores of provisions for winter, during which season it never comes abroad, but whether it hibernates or not the Indians do not know. It returns to its hole late in September, at which time it is very fat, and quite as good eating as the beaver, having the same rich flavor."

Disaster Furnaced Him.

Charles Dynes, storekeeper of Sapperton, B.C., a suburb of New Westminster, was awakened by fire in the store below his room. He, his wife and five children fled in their nightclothes just in time to save their lives. His wife and her baby of two weeks were both ill. The building and contents burned to the ground.

The same morning representatives of insurance companies decided to immediately pay the damages. Dynes went to New Westminster for his claim. He received the money and was riding home on the front end of a street car. At a switch the car lurched and threw him off. He was thrown under the wheels and cut in two.

The Irish of It.

The Minister of Agriculture for the fair province of Alberta is Irish. It is hardly necessary to label him after reading the following:

This son of Erin was down at Magrath, in the southwestern corner of the province, where he was addressing the farmers. In the course of his remarks, he urged upon them the necessity of following a line of "mixed farming," and told them not to try and "carry all their eggs in one basket." Then came a display of the Emerald in these words:

"We must alway look 'forward' for something to fall 'back' on."

VALUABLE REEDS FOUND.

Miss Agnes Laut, the Novelist, Discovers Oriental Matting Material.

Miss Agnes Laut claims she has discovered in the Saskatchewan river the reed which is used by the Chinese and Japanese in making matting. No reed outside of the Orient has been found with the same fibre. Miss Laut says:

"The scientists of the United States Government have been for many years engaged in a search for the reed from which matting is made in China and Japan. An attempt has been made to cultivate it on swamp lands in the States, but so far all these attempts to cultivate the plant in the United States have failed.

"The imports of matting into the United States from China at present amount to about twenty million dollars per year.

"This reed is known to scientists as 'phragmites communist,' and I saw a field of it which was seventy miles long in the vicinity of Lake Winnipeg. The plant grows to a great height, and is known to the Indians as 'the reed which grows like a tree.' Hudson Bay people call it 'muskrat reed,' from the fact that the rats feed on its roots.

"It is the exact reed which is used so largely in China and Japan for the production of matting. It would seem that in this reed we have in Western Canada material for a new and important industry. If the Government of Canada should do what the United States is doing in the matter, it would at once investigate the extent of the territory on which the reed is to be found and send scientists to China and Japan to investigate the methods of gathering in the raw material and the manufacture of the matting."

OLD ESSEX FAMILIES.

The Wigle Family Is First In County With Scratch a Close Second.

In the riding of South Essex, Ont., a citizen named Darius Wigle is the Conservative candidate for the Federal seat. Recently Mr. Wigle gave reasons for the political faith that is in him, and incidentally mentioned that he possesses a farm of 650 acres. It would be strange, indeed, if a Wigle were not the owner of many Essex acres, for that country of peaches and tomatoes once virtually belonged to the Wigle connection. Next to the Wigle family comes that of Scratch, and an alliance of a Scratch and a Wigle—rather an odd combination of names—meant that the whole country came to the wedding. It is related that a minister who was departing from an Essex parsonage wrote to his successor in these terms:

"You will find an interesting field here and I hope you will be greatly blessed. Old Scratch called this morning and said he would be happy to entertain your family until the parsonage is ready. The 'new' parsonage was considered unfit, he remarked, and the chances are he figured it was the richest supplier in the congregation, with such a handsome an one hardly none in Ontario outside of Essex and Lincoln.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Story with a Moral

The other day a man travelling on a short line train noticed, protruding from an overhead rack, a dress suit case which he recognized as belonging to a friend. He knew that his friend always got off at the station which they had just passed, and as he was not in the seat the conclusion was inevitable that he had jumped off the train and forgotten it.

The man called the conductor and explained the case to him. After some discussion, and a mild protest on the part of the conductor, that it was not a part of his duty, the suit case was put off at the next station, with instructions to send it back on the first train the other way.

The man, feeling that he had done an able and friendly act, settled down for the rest of his journey.

But not for long! The face of his friend—who had been in the smoker, and who happened on that particular afternoon to be going on to New London to attend a dinner party—loomed before him.

The moral of this is, of course, quite evident.

Be sure you're right and then mind your own business.

$50,000 for Treating Tuberculosis

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 15.—Lt.-Col. Jeffrey Burland has donated the sum of $50,000 to erect a dispensary here for the treatment of tuberculosis in the Province of Quebec.

down a curse upon the heads of the sleeping revelers.

"Just see there!" he exclaimed. "Some vermin got wind of the paymaster's coming and are here to fleece the men."

A lieutenant sauntered up, putting out his hand for the glasses. "There wasn't a seal in those huts yesterday," he said.

"No, of course not," sputtered the other. "The devils stayed at Clark's till the punchers got back from Kansas City. Now they're on hand to keep our guardhouse and hospital full. By gad, if I commanded here I'd have the whole street fired!"

"Well," said the lieutenant, "the men have a way of disciplining that kind themselves. Some day when a favorite is cut in a brawl or cheated at cards they'll shoot up the place. If there's anything left it 'll move on."

"It won't do any harm to keep an eye on Shanty Town, all the same," declared his companion fiercely. "Remember the man that ran it last year? Slick, by gad! Why, the paymaster might just as well have stepped over there—he and his lik got every cent! He wasn't a 'bad' man, mind you—not brave enough for that—but keen nosed as a moose, conceited as an Indian"—

"Oh, Dick or Vic Something-or-other, I don't know what. He's a bragging renegade, anyway."

Unaware of a reconnoiter, the occupants of the line of shanties slumbered serenely on, and not until noon did high plumes of smoke, straight as the flag pole on the parade ground, announce to the secretly delighted troopers at Brannon their tardy rising.

Dallas, too, saw the busy chimneys, but while watching them intently from an open window, her attention was attracted all at once in the opposite direction. She heard coming out of the coulee a chorus of shrill talking, like the pow-wow of a flock of prairie chickens. Then a horse snorted and there was a low rumble of wheels. Thinking that it was her father, she leaned into sight. As she did so a team came scrambling over the scarlet brink, dragging a wagonful of men and women.

As the horses gained the level prairie their driver laid aside a huge blacksnake whip with which he had been soundly whacking them and looked about. The next moment Dallas saw him rein in his team and spring to his feet. He was looking toward the shack, and he raised his whip hand menacingly.

"Look at that! Look at that!" he cried wildly, his voice carrying through the clear air.

All looked where he pointed, and some one in the back of the wagon cursed.

"What d' you call that for luck?" yelled the man, shaking his mittened fist. "If Nick knew that!"

Dallas could not hear the mingled answers of his companion.

"Well, I call it d——d"—

A woman reached up and pulled him into his seat. There was another shrill chorus, the man whacked the horses till they reared, and the wagon went rumbling on.

Dallas watched it until it disappeared into the cut at the landing. Then she sank upon a bench. For a long time she sat, dumb and immovable her eyes on the door. When finally she got up she felt about her, as if over come by blindness.

Marylyn had not seen or heard the threatening wagon driver. Seated comfortably on the robe by the fire, she strung beads and hummed contentedly.

Dallas started toward her, stopped, then moved slowly back to the window, where she took up her watch.

Late that night she sprang from fitful, troubled sleep to hear Simon lowing and moving about restlessly. A few moments afterward there came a mule's long bray from below the shack, followed by the voice of the section boss urging on the team. She found her long cloak and hastened out.

She could not wait for the wagon to stop before calling anxiously to her father. "Did you find?" she asked, walking beside Batty.

Lancaster did not answer, but scaled feebly, as if worn with his long trip. "W'y d' y' fret a man 'fore he c'n git down an' into th' house?" he demanded. "Ah'm plumb frus t' death an' hungry."

She helped him over the wheel and through the door. Then she went back and in feverish haste stabled the mules. On entering the shack, now dimly lighted by a fire, she did not need to repeat her question. She read the answer in her father's face.

"No use," Lancaster told her, raising wet, tired eyes to hers. "Th' claim was gone 'fore ever we got here—filed on las' July." He lay down, muttering in a delirium of grief and physical weariness.

The fire, made only of dry grass, began to die, the room to darken. Dallas' face shadowed with it. She was thinking of the level quarter that was to have blossomed under her eager hands, that was to have brought comfort to Marylyn and her crippled father. And now the land was gone from them, had never been theirs. They were only squatters.

Any hour a nameless man—perhaps he who had gone by that day—might descend upon them and—

The ball of a bubbling pot slipped down the bar that held it, and the vessel clattered upon the hearth. She started as if a gun had exploded at her elbow.

CHAPTER III.

"Y-A-A-AS," drawled Lancaster reflectively, gnawing the while at a fresh slab of tobacco, "we jes' nat'ally mavericked this claim."

A fortnight had passed since his return from the land office. In that time his fear had slowly vanished, his confidence returned, and he had begun to show streaks of the bravado that in his stronger days made him an efficient section boss. Rosy dreams even beset his brain—dreams upon which Marylyn, despising her father's meaner structures, and kept in ignorance of what might at any moment raze them, plied many a rainbow palace. For to the young girl certain calico covered books on the mantel had invested the events of the fortnight just gone with a delightful tinge of romance.

Dallas, however, took a sensible view of their situation. She pointed out that the man who had made an entry for the land would in all probability return and that if he did not five years at least would pass before the railroad reached them. Meanwhile the quarter section should be properly filed upon for possession and farmed for a living. Now as she brushed the hearth clean with the wing of a duck she listened quietly to her father's confident boasting.

"It's this way, m' gal," he said—he compassed a goodly quid and shifted it dexterously into the sagging pocket of a cheek—"inside o' six months after a man files he's got t' dig a dugout or put up a shanty. He's got t' do a little farm work an' sleep on his claim. When that six months is up of, he ain't done no buildin' or farmin' th' claim's abandoned, an' th' first man comin' along c'n hev it.

"In this case th' govt in question ain't built, dug or farmed. If he was t' show up an want this quarter he could get it by payin' for our improvements. Ah reckon we'd hev t' sell an' pull our freight, but ef he was t' show up an' not pay like a honest man, they'd—they'd—waal, they'd likely be a leetle disagreement."

Dallas shook her head. "If he comes before his six months is up and improves, we got to go. That would be the only square thing. Ain't it so?"

"Waal—waal"— stammered Lancaster lamely.

"It is," she said. "He filed on the quarter, and we had no right to settle"—

"We hev settled, an' th' las' 's goin' t' be worth money," broke in her father.

She put up her hand. "We got to go if he comes, but"—she rose wearily—"if he didn't offer pay for our improvements how could we go or get through the winter or build again next spring? Our money's gone."

"Look a-here, Dallas," began her father crossly, "they ain't no use t' worry th' way you do. Winter is clost. It ain't likely th' man'll come along this late, an' ef he don' show up pretty soon he ain't got a chanst, 'cause when his six months is gone Ah'll make another trip t' Bismarck, contes' his entry, her it canceled an' file. Then we's safe."

She silenced him, for Marylyn was entering, and quit the shack. Outside, before the warped door, she paused.

"He's always so sure of himself, but (To be continued).

THE MONTH OF RIPENESS.

Thou languid August noon,
When all the slopes are sunny;
When, with jocund, dreamy tune,
The bees are in the honey,
When with purple flowers,
Aflaming in the sun,
The drowsy hours
Thread one by one
The golden pleasaunces.

Then is heart's musing time;
Then, of all the seasons,
Old Earth for inward rhyme
Is full of golden reasons—
Then the ripening gourd,
The sun-kissed garden wall,
The purpling hoard,
The flocks that call
Adown the distances.

Forego the saddening tear,
Thou month without alloy;
To younger seasons of the year
Resign the flag of joy;
But thou, be what thou art,
Full brooding to the brim
Of dreams apart,
Anr purlieus dim
Of leafy silences.

EVER SEEN HAMILTON?

Citizen of Ambitious City Is Loyal to Home Town.

An incident that flabbergasted Dean Williams, of Christ Church Cathedral, Quebec, and that betrayed a whimsical loyalty on the part of a Hamilton militia officer, occurred during one of the functions of the recent celebration in the old city.

It happened that during a lull in the proceedings, the dean, who became known to almost every guest, saw standing at his side the Hamilton man, and asked him what he thought of Quebec. The response was not quite enthusiastic enough to please the dean, and he said:

"Do you not think Quebec a beautiful city?"

"Ah, er, quite so," agreed the officer.

"But, sir," said the dean, with some eagerness, "the Duke of Norfolk was here, who has crossed the ocean seventeen times. He has seen everything worth seeing on the face of the globe, and he says there are only two cities that can touch this, and they are Edinburgh and Constantinople," declared the dean, with emphasis.

The officer listened with attention, and then suddenly responded: "Well, dean, has the duke ever been to Hamilton?"

Repairing the Boundary.

Sixty-six years have passed since the signing of the Ashburton Treaty between Great Britain and the United States by which the southeastern frontier of Canada was definitely agreed to. The international boundary line having been run, it was marked by iron posts erected along every highway where it passed from one country into the other.

But the posts have been falling into a state of disrepair and were overgrown with weeds.

The work of restoring these frontier marks has been carried on along the southern boundary of the province of Quebec and it is now pretty well finished. The posts have been reset and are now in better condition than they ever were before. In each case where the highway crosses the frontier the iron post has been set in a massive base of cement, and along the frontier at about every quarter of a mile smaller granite posts solidly fixed in cement have been set up, and wherever the line passes through woodland the trees and brush for a distance of fifty feet have been cut away. Our boundary line, separating the province from the adjoining states, is now clearly and permanently marked.

Germans in Canada.

Although the emigration to Canada from Great Britain this year has fallen off in numbers, the United States continues to pour an increasing stream of farmers and settlers over the International Boundary. These are attracted by the prospect of virgin soil obtainable at a low cost, and yet with similar climatic conditions to those prevailing in Minnesota and the Dakotas, where all the cheap land has already been taken up. The Canadian Pacific irrigation colonies near Calgary has absorbed many of these immigrants, and the sales of irrigated lands this year have easily eclipsed all previous records. No fewer than 20,000 acres have been sold recently to German farmers from North Dakota, and as this goes into cultivation at once, Canada will have a considerable German colony at the gateway to the Rockies.

Fast Horses in Toronto.

A Toronto man was in Montreal and while standing chatting on a corner, part of the fire brigade passed on its way to a blaze somewhere.

"That's odd!" exclaimed the Toronto man.

"What's odd?" asked the Montrealer.

"Why, in Toronto our firemen always let the horses walk returning from a fire."

"But they're not returning from a fire—they're going to a fire," exclaimed the Montrealer.

"Going to a fire!" The Toronto man gazed incredulously at the speaker. "Why, do you know," he said, "the horses in the Toronto fire brigade go faster than that when they're standing still."

His Own Name.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the famous musician, was once traveling in Canada when the train pulled up at a little wayside station, and he was told that, owing to a blockade further up the line, he would have to remain where he was for some hours. Sir Alexander was anxious to get to his destination, and the delay made him anything but pleased. "Some hours in this hole of a place," he exclaimed, "away from all civilization! Why, I hate its very name!" Then, happening to put his head out of the carriage window, he beheld the name of the station in large letters. It was "Mackenzie!"

THE ACT OF DYING.

Reasons For Believing That It Is an Easy Matter.

The mere ultimate process of dying may be a relatively easy matter. Any person who has been long ill probably suffers more on any given day of his life than he will suffer in the act of departing from his body. It is probable that a broken bone, a delirious fever, a disordered vital organ, may cause more anguish than the final struggle. I have my doubts whether the last pang is as bad as it seems, declares Elizabeth Stuart Phelps in Harper's Bazar. We are told by surgeons that chloroformed patients may give apparent evidence of acute agonies which they do not feel. Death itself is often an anaesthetic so merciful that what people call "living trouble" is obviously a worse matter.

I, for instance, who have never fainted and never been anaesthetized in my life, have twice become from serious causes unconscious for a short time, and I have often wished that I could make over to some recoiling soul whose name has been heard ringing upon the last roll call the unspeakable comfort which that brief experience has given me. There was no pang, no terror, no time, no chance, for either. One seemed to glide gently and swiftly down a warm abyss, flower scented, grass grown, safe and benedicent, into unutterable content. One melted into peace. One drifted into ecstasy beside which the deepest joys of consciousness are poor, pale things.

If one in truth should evade the body in such a moment, death would stand chosen as the supreme delight of living.

HIS THREE WIVES.

They Were All in One Picture, but Did Not Stay There.

Allan Cunningham in his "Lives of British Painters" tells a story of Copley, the father of Lord Chancellor Lyndhurst, which reveals what a portrait painter endures from the vanity and eccentricity of his sitters.

A certain man had himself, his wife and seven children painted by Copley in a family piece.

"It wants but one thing," said the man on seeing the finished picture, "and that is the portrait of my first wife. This one is my second."

"But," replied the artist, "she is dead. What can I do? She must come in as an angel."

"Oh, no; no angels for me. She must come in as a woman."

The portrait was added, but several months elapsed before the man again called at Copley's studio, and when he did a strange lady held on to his arm.

"I must have another sketch from your hand, Copley," said he. "An accident befell my second wife. This lady is my third, and she has come to have her likeness included in the family picture."

The painter introduced the likeness of wife No. 3, and the man expressed himself satisfied with the portraits of his three spouses. But the lady remonstrated. Never was such a thing heard of. Her predecessors must go. The artist painted them out. Then the man disputed the price. Copley eased him, and his son, the future Lord Lyndhurst, signalised his call to the bar by gaining his father's cause.

A Bad Dream.

It is not likely that any English speaking people understand so keen and punctilious a devotion to the niceties of language as that which characterises the French grammarians. We may help ourselves to understand it perhaps by reading a story told of M. Lamary.

One night he awoke and sprang out of bed with a wild cry. His wife came running. He was in alarm and despair.

"Why, what is the matter?" she gasped.

"I dreamed," said the professor. "Oh, I had a horrible, a heartrending dream!"

"What was it?"

"I dreamed I was talking, and I distinctly heard myself utter a sentence which had a grammatical error in it!"

Couldn't Miss the Chance.

One scarcely looks for humor in an undertaker, but that this, like most rules, has its exceptions was proved recently in Scotland. A tract distributer had affixed this text to a tree on the highroad, "It is appointed to man once to die." This was too good an opportunity to be missed by the local purveyor of coffins, who promptly added the following announcement: "Funerals economically furnished by Blank."

Honor.

"What they call 'honor' is a mighty curious thing," observed Uncle Jerry Peebles. "I know a man who would cheerfully starve himself to pay a gamblin' debt, and he still owes the preacher that married him twenty-seven years ago."

Art in the Soup.

The artist's wife leaned over and looked at her husband's soup after she had handed it to him.

"Oh," she cried, "look at the scroll the fat has made in your soup. Isn't it artistic? Don't eat it. It is so beautiful."

Forced Economy.

"Poor Tom, it cost him a terrible lot to give up his sweetheart."

"Then why did he?"

"Because it would have cost him a great deal more if he hadn't."—London Tatler.

CANADA'S ELEVATORS.

Dominion Boasts the Largest One in the World To-day.

As a necessary complement to the building of a great fresh water marine Canadian shipping interests required grain elevators and within the past decade and a half, the most modern plants in the world have sprung into existence at lake ports north of the international boundary.

Canada is in the grain-growing business, and in the grain-moving business now with a vengeance. Since the impulse of national expansion thrilled the country and brought great enterprises into being, $22,000,000 has been invested by Canadians in great buildings for the lifting, forwarding and storage of grain.

The story reads romance into a prosaic subject, for no healthy Canadian can fail to feel the thrill of national spirit when he is told that this country has the largest grain elevator in the world. At the head of the great lakes are Canadian elevators which can spill fifty thousand bushels of wheat into a big lake steamer in less than an hour. At Georgian Bay are great modern steel tank receiving elevators, which can snatch 30,000 bushels of grain an hour from a vessel's hold and at the same moment be filling a train of cars on the other side for quick despatch to the seaboard.

Becoming retrospective, there are hundreds of young men who marveled at the elevators which stood at Owen Sound, Midland, Prescott, Kingston, Collingwood and a few other ports fifteen years ago.

One great modern Canadian elevator can hold more wheat than all these little buildings of a past decade combined. They are insignificant today in the light of a great nation's larger needs.

MACKENZIE'S LETTERS.

Interesting Correspondence Presented to Ontario Archives.

Through the kindness of Dr. A. B. Cook, Alexander Fraser, provincial archivist, has received a couple of interesting letters written by William Lyon Mackenzie to Col. Carroll of Norwich.

Dr. Cook obtained the letters for the archives from Miss Caroline Carroll, daughter of Col. Carroll, and now the sole survivor of the family. Col. Carroll was one of Mr. Mackenzie's most intimate friends and sympathizers. On the eve of the outbreak north of Toronto, Mr. Mackenzie went out to Col. Carroll's house, then in Toronto Township, and requested his active assistance. The colonel point blank refused, stating that while he was in full sympathy with the demand made for constitutional changes, he deprecated violent means; and that if he took part at all in the rising, it would be as an officer of militia and against his friend.

After Mackenzie's flight he was befriended and hidden for some days by Mr. Holcombe in Pelham Township on the Niagara frontier, until he was safely conducted across the river. Mr. Holcombe was an intimate friend of Dr. Cook's, and in after years gave him minute particulars of Mackenzie's escape, which the doctor is drawing up into a statement for the archives of the province.

After Mr. Mackenzie was pardoned and entered into public life once again, his intimate relationship with Col. Carroll was resumed and the letters now presented to the archives deal with political matters in which Hincks and his supporters figure.

A Laurier Story.

During the royal tour of the heir apparent in 1901, Sir Wilfrid was obliged to turn down over-zealous admirers who sought to make his progress across Canada in the entourage of the Prince of Wales a sort of joint affair.

The royal train ran in two sections. The first, which ran half an hour ahead of the second, carried detectives, correspondents, Sir Wilfrid, and the Rideau Hall party. Going down through Northern Muskoka, en route to Toronto, the first section stopped for half an hour at one point to take in water and to have the wheels tapped. The local Liberal Association was promptly on hand with an address in honor of Sir Wilfrid, placing him in a very awkward situation. It would have been a gross breach of etiquette for him, as a subsidiary personage in the vast machinery of the British Empire, to accept an address on a tour in honor of the heir apparent. At the risk of offending the delegation which had planned this foolish political display, he sent them about their business, informing them that he was merely a private individual on this tour, and that honors were reserved for the prince.

Scots Criticize.

The members of the Scotch farming commission have taken home admirable accounts of the tour. They apparently found much to admire in Canada, and something to criticise. R. B. Craig declares the Quebec farmers to be conservative and interesting, but the worst farmers in the Dominion, while regarding Ontario farmers, he observes a Buchan man would cut more thistles with less dash. There is plenty of room in Ontario for men with capital, though land is not cheap, he says, and points out that a quantity of land is wasted in New Brunswick and Quebec for want of sheep, because each man must keep a useless dog. Agricultural colleges are the objects of warmest appreciation.

Model of Old Quebec.

Among the recent additions to the objects of interest in the archives branch is a complete model of old Quebec City, which was sent one hundred years ago to the British Government by Colonel By, the founder of Ottawa.

The model was sent probably for military purposes and has been in Woolwich arsenal since. Dr. Doughty has succeeded in securing it and it will repose in the capital hereafter.

Wolfe's chair, which was donated by the Prince of Wales, was another interesting historical relic now in the archives' branch.

WHIMS IN WILLS.

Curious Desires Have Actuated Many Testators.

The dryness of the law is sometimes alleviated by the freaks and whims that appear in wills.

Some persons have used their wills as means of paying off old scores. In 1770 Stephan Swain of the parish of St. Olaves, London, left "John Abbott and Mary, his wife, 6 shillings each for a halter for fear the sheriff should not be provided." In 1703 Philip Thickness willed that his right hand be cut off and sent to his son "in hopes that such a sight may remind him of his duty to God after having so long neglected the duty he owed to a father who once affectionately loved him."

Lieutenant Colonel Nash got even with his wife by leaving the bell ringers of Bath abbey £50 a year on condition that they muffle the bells of said abbey on the anniversary of his marriage and ring them with "doleful accentuation from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m." and on the anniversary of his death to ring a merry peal for the same space "in memory of his happy release from domestic tyranny and wretchedness."

Jasper Mayne, who died in 1650, must have been a person of humor. He left his servant an old valise, stating that it contained something that would enable him to drink. When the valise was opened it was found to contain only a red herring.

Occasionally a testator exhibits an original idea as to the disposition of his body. Sieur Benoit, whose will was probated in Paris in 1877, ordered that he be buried in his old trunk to save the expense of a coffin. He added that he was attached to the trunk, it having gone around the world with him three times.

FAKE PAINTINGS.

The tricks of the picture dealer?

They are not to be counted. Here is one that was played quite recently. A dealer ordered from an artist a tavern scene in the old Dutch style signed in the corner with a facsimile of Jan Steen's signature. When the smoky look of age had been given it the dealer eyed it with approval.

"Splendid!" he said to the needy artist. "It's a pity you shouldn't have the credit of it. Pray sign it with your own name. It may make your reputation."

The poor artist, delighted, painted over the signature of Jan Steen and set his own name there. Three weeks later the picture started for New York, consigned to a Fifth avenue merchant of paintings. But by the same boat went an anonymous letter to the custom house officials warning them that an attempt was being made to smuggle in a chef d'oeuvre of the Dutch school worth $40,000. The picture was seized. Experts were called in. They scraped off the signature of the artist and found underneath that of Jan Steen. The importer had to pay a duty of 50 per cent—that is, $20,000—and in addition $8,000 duty. Three days later, however, he sold his Jan Steen (guaranteed by the United States government) for the round sum of $80,000. Thus he made a fair profit, for the original cost of the picture was $14—70 francs paid to the poor devil of an artist.

The Reason Inopportune.

"Of all the embarrassing predicaments, the one that I was in was the worst ever," said a prosperous downtown business man, addressing the partner in their office on the fifteenth floor of one of the Broadway skyscrapers.

"I got in the elevator a few moments ago," he continued, "and the draft on me shot rearward caused me to sneeze. I felt it coming, and so I opened my mouth for a hearty 'achoo' and popped my $150 set of false teeth. Say, when that car full of fifty stenographers began to snicker I could have gone through a keyhole without touching sides, top or bottom!"

Forces a Discharge.

"The Japanese servant has many curious traits," said the man who keeps one, "besides his constant habit of eating raw fish, but he is inordinately polite, as a rule. For instance, he never will give you notice that he wishes to leave you. Instead his work will grow steadily worse and worse till you can't stand it any longer, and so you fire him. It's always done purposely to avoid the necessity of telling you outright that he is tired of you and wants to quit."

Social Analogy.

Mrs. Subbubs—That Mrs. Newcome just moved into the Dudley's old house on Saturday, so I called today. Mr. Subbubs—Well, well, how like poker this social game is! Mrs. Subbubs—How do you mean? Mr. Subbubs—Why, in poker you also "call" when you want to see what the other person's got.

The Missing Feature.

"That meadow scene looks far from natural," declared the stage manager.

"What can ail it?"

"Begosh, I believe it's the absence of advertising signs!"

Sneaky.

Magistrate—Sneaky sort of man? What do you mean, sir? Witness—Well, sorr, he's the sort of man that'll never look ye straight in the face until your back's turned."

There's no phosphorescence in flowers to speak of, but they may lighten up many a darkened spot in life.—Manchester Unica.

Very Prevalent in Young Women

A Condition of "White-Bloodedness" is Fast Increasing.

It is always associated with languor and sensitiveness to cold. All the mucous surfaces, such as the gums, lips and eyelids, are blanched and waxy looking, the skin is pallid and colorless.

The pulse becomes rapid and feeble; there is also loss of appetite and enfeebled digestion, palpitation of the heart, breathlessness and tendency to faint. In extreme cases there is complete disappearance of the menstrual flow and dropsical swelling of the limbs.

Physicians know of no remedy so prompt in results as Ferrozone, which contains all the elements lacking in debilitated blood.

Ferrozone not only improves the present quality of the blood, but actually forms more blood—the rich, red kind that nourishes and feeds the organs that require assistance.

"About a year ago," writes Mrs. S. G. Stanbope, of Rockway, "my daughter complained of feeling tired. She was very pale and listless, and kept losing strength until too weak to attend school.

"We read of a similar case, that of Miss Dennett, Stirling, Ont., being cured by Ferrozone, and this induced us to get it for Elaine. It took three boxes of Ferrozone to make any decided improvement, but when six boxes were used my daughter was beginning to be her old self again. It didn't take much longer to make a complete cure. It has made a new girl of Elaine. She has gained ten pounds in weight and looks the picture of perfect health. She is stronger and enjoys the best of spirits."

Every growing girl and young woman can make herself strong and healthy with Ferrozone. Price 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

"SUFFRAGETTE" TACTICS

Just what the British suffragettes think they gain by such freak demonstrations as that with which they greeted the opening of Parliament, is hard for more men to conjecture. They certainly do not gain the respect of the people. They do not establish in the thinking mind the feeling that the woman vote would surely be a calming and conservative influence in politics. They do, however, give strength to the suspicion that women voters would be impulsive, careless of effects, and not too careful how they attained results they believed to be good. It is beside the question to say that many male voters are afflicted with the same weakness, especially the latter. This is true; but this is not the section of the present electorate that we want to increase.

These demonstrations of partial insanity must be losing the women franchise movement a large part of that support which was drawn to it by a belief that it would inject a desirable element into the body politic. These friends of "the cause" did not claim so much that the women had a right to vote or that the vote would do them any particular good, as that the State had a right to their soothing, non-partisan and highly moral influence, and that their entrance into politics would do the State good. These antics in the name of "woman suffrage" must give these superficial thinkers pause. Are they quite sure that it would be a good thing for the political situation to trust these lawless Amazons into the fray? Would they always act honorably—as, for instance, the lady who got into the Commons chamber by a breach of faith did not? Would they stand for unmuzzled sanity? Would they never make fierce partisans when they once become immersed in the political struggle?

If these demonstrations are intended to show that the woman vote would represent "force", quite as much as the male vote, they are dead failures. A few police can keep a whole procession of them back. Without the help of the male rowdies they attract, they would amount to nothing on the streets of London. What strength they seem to have, they owe to their feminine immunity from the sterner and swifter methods of repression. Once they were treated as men would be treated under similar circumstances, their exhibition of "force" would become ridiculous. The fact is that the "suffragettes" are making a great mistake. They are copying the methods of male agitators who did constitute force. They should have relied on the force of persuasion which is woman's invincible weapon. If they had kept to their old position of promising us a high-minded and non-party vote, we might have succumbed; for this is the boon we seek among the present voters in vain.

Stratton's Address

with the aid of the electors before him, he would be the next member for West Peterborough in the House of Commons. (Loud applause.) They (the people before him) were the judges, and it was their duty to select their representative in the Commons, and he (Mr. Stratton) was more than willing to leave the issue to the people, who had known him through life. In this contest they had heard some reflections upon himself of a personal character. The Conservative candidate, in his opening address, made the business of the Home Life Assurance Company his particular concern, and had made an effort to insinuate that there had been something in his (Mr. Stratton's) relations with the Home Life that was discreditable. Well, the controversy was known to every man who chose to inform his mind, and it was enough for him to say that the people who were financially interested had given striking proof of the confidence which they were willing to repose in him (Mr. Stratton.) It seemed reasonably clear, under the circumstances, that Mr. Burnham would have to find some other means of helping himself into Parliament besides the effort to throw mud on the skirts of a man whose political and personal garments were clean. (Applause.) He felt sorry for Mr. Burnham that he had not associated with people from whose contact he might have derived some higher ideal of political life. He (the speaker) had sufficient confidence in the common sense and sterling intelligence of his neighbours to be convinced that knowing as he was they would accept him as he was. (Cheers). He felt that with all the Hannas and the men from Manitoulin they could bring into the county, he had lost none of the confidence with which the people of Peterborough had been accustomed to honour him. The opposing party had done its best in the effort to down him, but they would realize that he was "still in the ring," though somewhat battered, yet not disfigured, and as capable as they could desire of filling the place to which they would elect him on October 26th as their representative in the House of Commons at Ottawa. (cheers) and by a good big majority, (great cheering.) He felt encouraged before this great audience, and especially by the presence of so many ladies who had honoured this gathering, and the enthusiasm which they had manifested was very gratifying to him. He knew the influence which they could exercise, and he knew, too, that you could not excite the interest of the ladies except in a righteous cause. (Cheers.) While the ladies had no vote at the present time, he recognised the influence which they wielded and he was gratified for their sympathy, the more because he knew that their sympathy was rarely misplaced, and that it would not be extended to him unless he had in some humble manner proved himself worthy of it. (Cheers.) His opponent, Mr. Burnham, who had brought into the city the leader of his party, Mr. Borden, and Mr. Roblin, the premier of the Tory province of Manitoba, who had since his appearance in this hall been sent home in disgrace as a convicted slanderer, had made an attack upon him (Mr. Stratton) on account of a business transaction of the Home Life Insurance Company, when that institution was merged with the People's Life. He emphatically denied Mr. Burnham's qualification to deal with such a subject. How could they expect a crusty old bachelor like Mr. Burnham to know anything about "Home Life" matters (Loud applause)? and laughter.) Seriously, referring to this slander, of which Mr. Burnham had made himself the instrument, he thought it was sufficient to say that the majority of the shareholders, and many of the directors of that company were counted among the leading Conservative business men of the province, and the fact that these men, whose money was at stake, and who really were the only people concerned in the handling of their affairs had year after year elected and re-elected him (Mr. Stratton) to the highest position they had at their disposal, ought to be enough to convince anyone of the silliness of this among Mr. Burnham's other silly statements He (Mr. Stratton) felt really sorry for Mr. Burnham. During the next five years, the term for which they were about to elect him (loud cheers) to Parliament, he would be glad to use his influence to help him find a home, notwithstanding that he himself had been dispitefully used by that gentleman. (Applause.) But he realized that this great audience had not assembled to discuss these personal matters, which had no real connection with the issues of the campaign. However much he regretted it, he was compelled to advert to the statements which Mr. Burnham had put on the centre of the stage in his opening meeting in this place. He did not think it necessary with the people among whom he had grown up from childhood, to whom his life was an open book, to defend himself against Mr. Burnham's insinuations, because the proffer of such a defence would imply doubt of the confidence of his neighbours which he did not entertain. Mr. Burnham did not seem to be able to comprehend that a man could as he (Mr. Stratton) had done, handle hundreds of thousands of dollars without some of it sticking to his fingers. (Cheers). Mr. Burnham had started out with loud professions of a desire to con- They all knew how he had carried out this proposition, by the contemptible and cheap slanders that had been circulated concerning himself. He (Mr Stratton) felt himself so well grounded in the esteem of his fellow citizens that he believed his reputation was safe in their hands, and that their knowledge of him was such that no tongue of malice could be used to his hurt. (Cheers.). Among the alleged claims that Mr. Burnham had presented in intimation of a reason why he should be permitted to go to Parliament, was his statement that he had, while the other people were helplessly asleep, written in the Review some articles on "Rural Mail Delivery." But while he was dreaming the Government was acting, and the rural free mail delivery was becoming an accomplished fact throughout the country, as rapidly as the arrangements could be made, and within a very short time the people of West Peterborough will have a daily mail at their gates, a realization of what rural free delivery means. (Cheers). Now, it is not any wonder that his friend, the enemy, was in favour of "rumal mail delivery," since it had been developed that rural deliver of mails had been practised—delegates from the northern sections of the county had been brought in to this city recently, with all their expenses paid, to pack the convention by the Conservative machine, to outvote the city delegates, and ensure the nomination for himself. They had also been offered from Mr. Burnham's Review newspaper the tempting proposition of a $10 reward for the best essay on "How the Grand Trunk Pacific will ruin Ontario Farms." Had any of them secured this regard? Had any one read these essays? He thought not, (laughter) and he might offer a million dollars instead of ten, and still get no takers, because the topic which suggested it was too foolish for any sane person to occupy his attention with. Mr. Burnham's idiotic suggestion regarding the Grand Trunk Pacific would not appeal to the common sense of the electors of this riding, and his absurd views upon this nation-building project, as printed in the Review, would only bring him into contempt and ridicule. (Applause.) It seemed a waste of energy before an intelligent audience such as filled the capacity of this hall, to give attention to Mr. Burnham's doleful tale of what the Grand Trunk Pacific might do to the country. We have had an experience, and we know better. Mr. MacFarlane had dwelt at some length upon the manner in which labour had been treated under a Conservative Government, and how it had been accorded consideration since 1896. Perhaps some of us did not sufficiently realize the place of labour among the factors that make for national growth, stability, and progress. We have at the command of the captains of our progress, five sources of national wealth, and upon these all prosperity must rest: the farm, the forest, the fisheries, the mines and the manufacturing industries constitute the elements out of which national progress and prosperity are wrought. The brain that conceives and the hand that acts, are at the bottom of our everyday progress, and no government would perform its full duty that did not recognize the importance of the great producing element of labour. It was not difficult for them to recall that during eighteen years all that had been done for labour was the enactment of a labour lay, law—under which, as had been said the worker might once a year, and at his own expense, have the privilege of a holiday. He did not intend to disparage the holiday—far from it, and he gladly gave credit to his opponents for what had been done in this instance "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is an old proverb, and as an employer he realized that the holiday is not a bad thing for the employers, while it is a good thing for those who toil. But that should not lead them to forget that it was the present Government which had given the first real and practical recognition to the right of labour, and to the place which it ought to occupy among the institutions of the country. If the sweatshops had been abolished, as had been explained by preceding speakers it was to Sir Wilfrid Laurier that they owed it. And if public regulations had been put in force that ensured the highest wage scale to the man working on a government job, it was due to the administration. The Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier had not contented itself with mere empty expressions regarding labour, but had put itself on record in an unmistakable manner as the friend and the champion of the man who toils. And that was nothing more than a natural recognition of the foundation upon which the Liberal party was based. The leaders of the Liberal party, and he himself, their candidate, had worked up from humble beginnings. They all knew what toil was, and when they were placed in a position to influence legislation, it was merely a natural sequence that labour found a friend. (Applause). Now, regarding the great question, which was really the most important question before the people to-day, that of transportation, which concerned the movement of our crops so that the producer could get the greatest result and which even more affected the manufacturers whose interests was advanced by having made available the quickest and the cheapest means of reaching the field of consumers, our present Government had done more to extend the facilities upon which the welfare of the farmers and the manufacturers depended, than any administration that had preceded it. And the people had realized the benefit, and they, in common with the people before him, were going to acknowledge it in their votes. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Burnham had not only attacked the Canadian Pacific as an "inexcusable" enterprise, but he had questioned the wisdom of the Grand Trunk Pacific, which was being constructed under a mandate of the voters of the country four years ago, and in his (Mr. Burnham's) present attitude on these questions, he condemned the work of Sir John A. Macdonald, and repudiated the efforts of our Master Builder, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to give fulfilment to the patriotic ambition of his predecessors, would not appeal to patriotic men. His attitude on those questions demonstrated his absolute unfitness to represent the best interest of the county in the House of Commons at Ottawa more strongly than any words that he (Mr. Stratton) could place before them. Mr. Burnham tells the people of this constituency that he does not approve of the development of the great resources which belong to the people of Canada in the west. He affected to be solicitous for the welfare of the Ontario farmer. Mr. Burnham seemed not to have the capacity to comprehend, as he thought all the intelligent electors of Peterborough did, that what the great west produced in wealth, we of the eastern provinces enjoyed the benefit of. Mr. Burnham's ideas were such that if they had been shared in an degree by our people we would still be in the backwoods of progress. It is to the progresive, commonsense policy that has been applied to the affairs of the country by a statesman who loves his country, and who has the genius to make it great—Sir Wilfrid Laurier. (Loud applause.) Let them look at figures: Our trade, the volume of what we sell, has in twelve years, increased to the enormous sum of $411,000,000, and this result means $172,000,000 more than the trade of Canada during the whole eighteen years of Conservative misrule that preceded the policies of the Laurier administration. This was an enormous commercial advancement—the figures were too big to be easily comprehended, and the credit was due simply to the common sense policy which Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues had so successfully applied to the affairs of Canada. (Applause.) Under the practical application of that policy, for they were doers and not dreamers, through the improvement of our transportation facilities, by rail and by our waterways, we have seen that the export of farm products had grown from $50,000,000 in 1896, to the enormous sum of $121,000,000 in 1908. And this progress was accompanied by a remarkable development of our manufacturing industry, which was not subsidized, but stimulated by a tariff that gave them raw material at the lowest cost, and had put an end to the "slaughter market" operations of the United States' manufacturers. In the twelve years of Liberal rule the Government has spent $121,215,115 in the public works which made our progress possible. That is a good deal of money, but it covers the creation of the cold storage facilities which have given our products their proper value in the European market, the provision of warehouses at Fort William and Port Arthur, Montreal and the seacoast cities, the improvement of the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence channels, which altogether has so commanded the movement of the great agricultural product of the interior that to-day New York, Buffalo, Boston, and all the cities that are concerned in the movement of the western product are in alarm at the position which Montreal has assumed, and it is a proud thing for us to reflect that out of a Canadian inland port which has been made by the enterprise of our Government, a seaport has been created from which we have this year handled more grain than all the cities of the Atlantic coast line of the United States combined. (Cheers.) The progressive policy of the Government has in twelve years added to our population 1,219,430 settlers in the Northwest, and these men did not come empty handed, for they added by their means to our visible possessions no less than $64,440,000. Why, in the last year the settlers who came from the United States to seek the greater freedom and the larger liberties that we in Canada enjoy, brought with them no less than nine millions of dollars in effects. This great sum was exempt from duty as "settlers' effects," but in addition to that, upon dutiable goods which they brought in, the customs received a revenue of no less than $2,000,000. Let us consider how that influx into the great west affects us. We have here 500,000 families settled in this new country, for whom it is easy to estimate that the average expenditure is $500, or a total of $10,000,000, which goes to buy the goods they need and which are supplied from the Ontario manufactories. And that is the reason why our factories are prosperous, in spite of Mr. Burnham's foolish wail about building up the west at the expense of the east. (Applause.) In this present year of grace the grain produced by that great western empire of ours is estimated at 125,000,000 bushels. Think of it! At the lowest posible market value, $60,000,000 added to the wealth of the country to keep commerce in operation and to make a market for the factories of Ontario—of Peterborough. And these results are to go on, and multiply, through the operation of the great Grand Trunk Pacific transcontinental line. This project has been criticized by Mr. Burnham, who has also condemned the Canadian Pacific. To-day we are exporting a grain crop, as the result largely of that railway, that will bring into this country one hundred millions of dollars of created wealth, to be shared between the western farmers and the eastern factories. We have a larger and a richer country than the United States, free from earthquake and cyclone, with a better climate, a richer soil and inexhaustible resources in the forest and the mine. The results of the Grand Trunk Pacific will duplicate or triplicate what has followed the Canadian Pacific. The Province of Ontario must inevitably more and more progress in the expansion of its industrial enterprises to keep pace with the enormous market in this great west of the present, and greater west of the future, for manufactured products. Already Hamilton, Midland and other places, are seeking to concentrate for their own benefit the advantages being opened up. Peterborough, already a manufacturing centre, on the main arterial line of transportation, which is to be perfected by the enlargement of the water channels, possesses a wonderful future, if its representatives are vigilant and energetic enough to force upon the Government just recognition of its claim to leading consideration in the prosecution of public enterprises to develop adequate communication between the east and the west. Ontario is undoubtedly in the near future to become the Pennsylvania of this Dominion and it is up to an efficient representative of its interess at Ottawa to make the city of Peterborough the Canadian Pittsburgh.

In conclusion he would say that though he had been painted in the darkest of colours by the friends of his opponent in this campaign, that did not disturb him, for he felt that the people of Peterborough, who knew him best just as he was, making no pretension to being a saint, but honestly and fearlessly doing his duty to himself and to his neighbour, and he was satisfied to leave the issue in their hands. (Cheers.) Therefore he asked them, irrespective of politics, to vote for him, for the prosperity of Peterborough, and if he were elected he would serve them just as faithfully as they knew he had for eighteen years in the Ontario Legislature and Government. As their member he would know no politics but would do his best to advance everything that would help to advance the welfare of the people of the city and county. (Loud applause.)

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big moneylender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of serfdom, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with reed, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless these are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its heads, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the abject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

The Province of Ontario must inevitably more and more progress in the expansion of its industrial enterprises to keep pace with the enormous market in this great west of the present, and greater west of the future, for manufactured products. Already Hamilton, Midland and other places, are seeking to concentrate for their own benefit the advantages being opened up. Peterborough, already a manufacturing centre, on the main arterial line of transportation, which is to be perfected by the enlargement of the water channels, possesses a wonderful future, if its representatives are vigilant and energetic enough to force upon the Government just recognition of its claim to leading consideration in the prosecution of public enterprises to develop adequate communication between the east and the west. Ontario is undoubtedly in the near future to become the Pennsylvania of this Dominion and it is up to an efficient representative of its interess at Ottawa to make the city of Peterborough the Canadian Pittsburgh.

In conclusion he would say that though he had been painted in the darkest of colours by the friends of his opponent in this campaign, that did not disturb him, for he felt that the people of Peterborough, who knew him beat just as he was, making no pretension to being a saint, but honestly and fearlessly doing his duty to himself and to his neighbour, and he was satisfied to leave the issue in their hands. (Cheers.) Therefore he asked them, irrespective of politics, to vote for him, for the progress of Peterborough, and if he were elected he would serve them just as faithfully as they knew he had for eighteen years in the Ontario Legislature as Government. As their member he would know no politics but would do his best to advance everything that would help to advance the welfare of the people of the city and county. (Loud applause.)

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN.—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent, at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big money-lender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are dispossessing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Canital Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless these are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was falling to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the object party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the G.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough as given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offluence and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 28 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years o Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,220,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,706, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lakes and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $54,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $60,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing centre, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the county has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

Is Curtis Dead or Alive?

An old mystery is revived in the announcement that the British Columbia Government will make another effort to determine whether Sir Arthur Curtis is dead or living somewhere in the province under an assumed name. That the request for light on the strange disappearance of the third Baronet Curtis comes from his son, Reggie, now the fourth Baron Curtis, is the opinion of the Marquis De Fontenoy, who writes of the matter in the New York Tribune. A son's anxiety to know the circumstances of his father's fate needs no explanation ordinarily, but in the case of the Curtis mystery, if the missing man should be found a desperate situation would ensue. His wife is married now to another man, and has children by the second union. Sir Roger's mother would surely want the mystery left as it is.

A SAVAGE TONGUE LASHING.

It was ten years ago last June that Sir Arthur Curtis suddenly left camp with an Indian guide on the way from Ashcroft, a point on the C.P.R., to the Klondike. Sir Arthur was one of a party led by Roger Pocock, founder of the Legion of Frontiersmen, an organization that has been described in The Mail and Empire, and author of "The Frontierman," a book published a couple of years ago. Pocock is an Englishman who has roughed it in most parts of the world, and was commanding the little party of which the Baronet was a member. Pocock may have been disgusted at the ineptitude of his charge for backwoods life, or he may have had some other grievance. At any rate, one night in June he "cut loose" and gave Sir Arthur such a "roasting" as he had never had before.

WORDS PAST FORGIVENESS.

Words that could never be withdrawn, as Pocock later on admitted, were applied to Curtis, and the Baronet abruptly quitted the camp at midnight. He was never seen again, although the conscience-stricken Pocock and the other members of the "Frontiersman" Pocock takes the full party spent ten days in an effort to pick up his trail. Then their provisions ran out, and they were obliged to resume their journey. In "The moral responsibility for driving Curtis into the bush, and admits that his language was unjustifiable, for he speaks in high terms of the missing man. He also notes that he had to face a suspicion of having murdered him. Upon the fate of Curtis Pocock can throw no further light, although he mentions hearing rumors of Sir Arthur's reappearance in London.

TROUBLE AT HOME.

In the British Columbia newspaper, T. Wm. Cole, another member of the party, expressed his opinion that Curtis did not wander away to die in the woods. Cole believes Sir Arthur to be alive, and declares that some time before the row with Pocock the Baronet told Cole it was his intention to slip away, from the expedition, and enter the Klondike on his own hook. Once there, he said it was his desire to change his name. Cole surmised that Sir Arthur had had domestic worries, and that he wished to leave behind him all connection with his old life. Mr. Cole's idea that Curtis lives is strengthened by the general opinion among explorers that a man with an Indian guide in the Mud River country could hardly get lost.

ON WITH THE NEW LOVE.

The haste with which Lady Curtis legally ridded herself of the missing man was a subject of general comment ten years or so ago. Six months after he had disappeared his wife applied to the courts to have him declared legally dead. It is rather remarkable that her petition was granted, in the absence of any legal proof of the man's death, and so shortly after he had wandered off. But the court pronounced him dead, and not long afterward Lady Curtis was married to Col. Robert M. Brady, of Montegal, whom she has borne several children.

It will save this lady an awkward situation if her first husband does not yield.

duplicate the performance of James Burke Roche, brother of the Earl of Fermoy. Mr. Roche also disappeared en route to the Klondike. His companions searched for him in vain, but finally discovered a skeleton which they identified as that of Roche. They conveyed the remains to the nearest settlement, and there interred them setting up an eulogistic tombstone. Some weeks later Roche turned up in town, and saw the tombstone. He took a photograph of the inscription, which he proudly produces as evidence of his high character.

London, Oct. 1.—For the first time in English history a kilted regiment has done duty as King's guard at the Royal Palaces in London. The honor has fallen to the 1st Battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Princess Louise's Regiment, formerly the 91st Foot. It is the only infantry regiment in the service which bears Balaclava as a battle honor on its colors.

The presence of the battalion in London on guard duty is due to the new system, introduced when the Duke of Connaught was inspector-general, of giving every regiment a period of field training. All the battalions of guards are now engaged in the manoeuvres in Hampshire. Three battalions of the line were called in to take their place in London, and among them was the 1st Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who are stationed at Chatham. The two other regiments furnishing guards are the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry and the Norfolk Regiment.

Much interest was taken in the Highlanders by the many foreign visitors in London just now. Numbers of French visitors, including priests attending the Eucharistic Conference, watched the kilted and bonneted sentries at Buckingham Palace with great interest.

Labor Laws in New Zealand

London, Oct. 15.—New Zealand, that land of startling social experiments, is apparently about to try another scheme of industrial arbitration. The existing scheme, which has been in force for some years, is pretty widely regarded as unsatisfactory, if not a downright failure. Under it people have become increasingly reluctant to invest capital in industrial enterprises, the cost of living has greatly advanced, to the natural dissatisfaction of the working people, and indirect taxation has increased by about $5 a head of the population.

In such circumstances it is not strange that a new law has been proposed, making sweeping changes in the system. In place of the old boards of conciliation, which will differ from the boards in much more than name. Each council will consist of a magistrate and assessors from the industry involved. If a council fails to effect a settlement of a dispute it may be referred to the Court of Arbitration, which is to comprise assessors from the industry involved, who shall not, however, be interested in the dispute. This court is to have extraordinary powers, among them that of fixing arbitrarily a rate of "needs" wages, which means such as workmen of average skill and energy would earn, and also an "exertion wage", for work done above the average standard. For industrial disturbances severe penalties are prescribed. For a strike a fine of $50 will be imposed upon the strikers, with $5 more, for every week the strike is maintained. For a lockout the fine is $1,000, with $250 additional for each week of its continuance. Special and heavier fines are prescribed for strikes in bakeries, slaughter-houses and coal yards and on railroads, and in other industries directly affecting the health or welfare of the public, and the fines are made collectible by levying upon the wages of the strikers either due at the time of the strike or earned in any subsequent employment.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say

SEEING AND LISTENING.

Nearsighted Man Wears Glasses in Talking, but Not in Reading.

"Here's a sort of queer thing," said a nearsighted man. "I am very nearsighted. Strong glasses are indispensable to me for ordinary, general seeing in my goings about, but when I sit down to read I take off my glasses and bring the print up to within the natural focus of the eye. It seems to me that reading with the natural eye I read with a more intimate and a clearer understanding.

"So much for my reading without spectacles, and now here is the thing that is queer to me. If when I am reading thus, with my glasses off, somebody comes along to speak to me, why, then, to get a clear understanding of that question I must have on my spectacles.

"So I say, or I would say if this happened at home where I know the people, 'Wait a minute till I get on my spectacles,' and I would put them on and then say, 'Now go ahead,' and really, with my spectacles on, with my power of seeing at its best, with the sharpest definition of things in general to the eye, I get the clearest apprehension of things said to me.

"So in reading I do best with my glasses off, but in understanding things said to me, in listening, I do best with my glasses on. There is one modification to this—where there is no light, as in a dark room, where I can't see, I can understand equally well with or without glasses."

QUEER TITLES.

Bestowed on His Favorites by an Emperor of Haiti.

Among the whimsical titles which appear on the pages of national history few are more apperently frivolous than the Duke of Marmalade, the Count of Lemonade and the Earl of Brandy. They are or were, however, real titles bestowed by a genuine monarch on three of his favorites, and that, too, during the last century.

In 1811 a revolution occurred in Haiti, and Christophe, a negro, declared himself emperor. Through conspiracy and plot, his life often attempted, he retained power till 1820, preserving to the last the pageantry of a royal court and creating a numerous nobility. Among them were the three already mentioned, and the oddity of the titles has suggested to many writers the frivolousness of the African character.

In fact, however, all three names were those of places, the first two being originally plantations, but latterly towns of some importance. This not being generally known, a misapprehension has arisen with regard to the titles themselves, which, however absurd, were scarcely more so than some which were bestowed in France and Germany during the middle ages.—Pearson's Weekly.

Liberty.

The spirit of liberty is indeed a bold and fearless spirit, but it is also a sharp sighted spirit. It is a cautious, sagacious, discriminating, farseeing intelligence. It is jealous of encroachment, jealous of power, jealous of man. It demands checks, it seeks for guards, it insists on securities, it intrenches itself behind strong defenses and fortifies itself with all possible care against the assaults of ambition and passion. It does not trust the amiable weaknesses of human nature, and therefore it will not permit power to overstep its prescribed limits, though benevolence, good intent and patriotic purpose come along with it. Neither does it satisfy itself with flashy and temporary resistance to illegal authority. Far otherwise. It seeks for duration and permanence. It looks before and after, and, building on the experience of ages which are past, it labors diligently for the benefit of ages to come.—Daniel Webster.

The Blue Sky.

The blue sky which reveals itself as the hemispherical vault of the firmament in the absence of clouds is the far depths of the air sending back to the observer some part of the solar illumination which they receive. The light thus returned to the eye is "blue" simply because the particles of the air are of such exceedingly diminutive size that they can effectively deal with only the smallest of the luminous vibrations—that is, with the "blue" undulations. There are a few faint intermingings of the other colored rays in the blue of the sky, but they are in such trifling quantity that the blue swallows them up.

The Cricket's Chirp.

The variation of speed in the chirping of crickets depends so closely on temperature that the height of the thermometer may be calculated by observing the number of chirps in a minute. At 60 degrees F. the rate is eighty chirps a minute, at 70 degrees F. 120 per minute, and the rate increases four chirps to the minute with a change of one degree. Below a temperature of 50 degrees F. the cricket is not likely to make any sound.

Vague.

Lady of Uncertain Age—Ah, major, we're none of us as young as we were, Major (absentmindedly, but vaguely aware that a gallant answer is indicated)—My dear lady, I'm sure you don't look it.—Punch.

He—Oh, yes. That's one of the most treasured recollections of my youth.

Not ignorant of misfortune, I learn from my own [illegible] the principal.—Virgil.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

THE ROAD TO WEALTH.

It Is the First Thousand Dollars That Counts.

"The thing that counts," said a man of independently large means, accumulated by hard work, saving and wise investments, "is the first thousand dollars. When you've got that amount together you are beginning to get somewhere, and with that start you will want to keep on. The red ink interest entries that you see put down in your savings bank book twice a year will strike you very pleasantly indeed. As interest on your thousand dollars you'll get $35 or $40 in a year. Your money has begun earning money for you.

"You've got an income now, and you'll want to add to it. You will leave that interest in the bank, to be added to your principal, and now your interest will begin to draw interest, and, to be sure, you will keep right on adding to your principal, too, and every six months you'll see those red figures growing bigger and bigger, pretty figures to contemplate, and you'll keep right along saving. But the thing that really counts is the first thousand dollars. Get that and you're all right, and you'll always be glad you saved it.

"For there really is nothing like financial independence or like having at least some money laid by. Then if you want money you've got it. You don't have to go to friends to borrow and take the risk of being refused, the risk of being compelled to go without what you need. If you've got money in the bank you can go there and get it. There might come a time when you would need money for your family or for yourself very much. It's a grand thing to have it where you can get it.

"There's nothing mean about being saving and accumulating money. On the contrary, it is every man's duty to make himself financially independent. I don't mean at all that a man wants to set out to accumulate great wealth. There is no great fun in that. But what he does want to do is to get together enough to live on modestly."

DODGES OF COAL MINERS.

They Have Many Ways of Adding Extra Pennies to Their Wages.

In coal mining, as in other trades, there are many tricks played. Seams below three feet are paid extra tonnage, generally a penny per ton extra for each inch in the reduction of the thickness of the seam. Certain days are set apart for the purpose of measuring, and many schemes are resorted to by the miner to make the measurement as low as possible. Thus, according to the inequalities or irregularity of the floor and roof, a place may measure 3 feet one day and the next only 2 feet 9 inches. The miner takes advantage of this fact by letting his place stand for a whole shift, and sometimes a day, when he comes to a reduction in the thickness of the coal seam, and it pays him, too.

In other cases stone bands run in the seam of coal, and they vary in thickness also, but the miner is paid extra tonnage for the increase in the thickness of the band. Thus, you see that it means a considerable addition to his income to obtain an increased measurement.

A popular trick among mine managers is to work the near and most accessible coal in the mine, with no regard to system so long as they succeed in obtaining a large output of coal. Having worked all the best districts, they look out for another situation, and you will understand the position of the next manager and the enormous difficulties and expense to work the mine.

Dis-Composing.

The sports had been a great success, and Colonel Proudem, delighted to be recognised as a magnate in the Midlands, had puffed out his chest with pride when he presented the prizes to their winners.

Eagerly the next morning he picked up the local newspaper, to see if his speech had been reported. A smile spread over his face as he read the preliminary remarks about his glorious services to his country, his many active engagements with the enemy; but suddenly he stopped:

"This battle-scarred warrior——"

But the colonel could read no further. In a furious rage, he drove off to the newspaper office, and demanded a public apology. This was immediately promised, and regrets tendered for the mistake.

The next morning his feelings may be imagined as he read:

"We regret that through a printer's error, yesterday we styled Colonel Proudem as a 'bottle-scared warrior.' We should have said 'bottle-scarred.'"

Vegetable Stones.

"There are vegetable stones," said a geologist. "Stones, that is, that grow in vegetables.

"Here is a tabasheer. It is found in the joints of certain kinds of bamboo. It is always round and brown, like this. Here is the cocoanut stone. You find it in the endosperm of the Javanese cocoanut. Round or pear shaped, it has always this milk white luster, like a pearl. The smaller stones, with its pearly luster is a little tarnished, is found in the pomegranate. It is pure carbonate of lime. These stones are formed from silicious and calcareous juices circulating in the plant organism. They are the result of a diseased condition. Man himself, you know, occasionally puts forth stony growths, and they must be removed or the human stone grower dies in excruciating pain."

The Human Finger Bowl.

"I'm fond of the table d'hotes," said the table d'hote fiend, "but they are ruining the manners of the people. The other night I saw the prettiest girl at a table across from me, so pretty I could hardly keep my eyes off her. She was dressed in white, with a big white hat covered with a white veil, and had lovely blue eyes, and when she had finished eating her pear she licked every finger she had on both hands."

THE UNEXPECTED HAPPENED

And They Did Not Get So Far Ahead of Their Wives After All.

During the Exhibition in Toronto, a certain Presbyterian minister and his wife, from a staid Scotch settlement in Western Ontario, came to visit friends on Bloor street for the fortnight. The days were well filled with shopping and "exhibitioning," but one evening—a Wednesday evening, too—there arose the question of where to go.

"We've been to an organ recital, an illustrated lecture and a talk on China," said the hostess thoughtfully. "See here!" she ejaculated, lowering her voice significantly, "let's go to Shea's; there's no harm in it—and when you're going back to that dead-and-alive place for the rest of the year, I think you need a little diversion."

"But what would I say to John?" said the minister's wife, after a few half-hearted protests.

"John—bless me—I don't know," said Mrs. A——. "I believe he's taken my husband to prayer-meeting. We'll go, anyway." The women had been chums at boarding-school, and the prospect of Shea's seemed like an old-time escapade. Therefore, to Shea's they went, and were enjoying the fourth number on the program when Mrs. A—— frantically clutched her guest's arm.

"Will you look at those two men—there? It's your John and my Henry—and I believe your husband is wearing one of Henry's coats."

Just at this moment the smiling husbands caught sight of the two women and bowed their heads in confusion. The rest of that program was as a painful dream to John, who had been a firm disciplinarian, and had more than once expressed disapproval of certain frivolous tastes displayed by his wife. And it was all in vain afterwards for John to assert quaveringly that he thought a minister should see those things in order to be able to warn others.

DISTINCTION FOR CANADIAN.

Sydney, N.S., Girl Is First to Win Oxford Musical Degree.

Miss Burchell, of Sydney, Nova Scotia, is the first colonial girl to win the distinction of having passed the final examination for the Degree of Bachelor of Music, Oxford University. In 1908 she passed at Oxford the "Preliminary (Arts) Examination for Students of Music," and the First Examination for the Degree of Mus. Bac. For the Second Mus. Bac. examination candidates are not obliged to go to Oxford. They are required to submit for examination a musical exercise of their own composition. This must be a vocal work with accompaniment for a string band. The following movements are expected: a five-part chorus, a song or duet, an unaccompanied vocal quartette, and a five-part fugue. The work may be either sacred or secular. Miss Burchell chose a sacred subject, giving it the title, "The Light of Men." She had the good fortune to have her first work accepted by the examiners.

The Third (Final) Examination was successfully passed in May of this year.

In April Miss Burchell passed the examination for Associateship of the Royal College of Music, at that institution in London. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is president of the Royal College.

Miss Burchell studied under Mr. Peter LeSueur, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., formerly music master of the Methodist College, St. John's, Nfld.; and under Dr. C. W. Pearce, Mus. Doc., Cantab., F.R.C.O., of Trinity College of Music, London.

She is the daughter of Mr. H. O. Burchell, C.E., of Sydney, N.S., formerly Government engineer of Newfoundland, and afterwards director of public works, British Honduras.

To Look For Castaways.

H. M. S. Algerine, now at Esquimalt, is preparing for a cruise to Christmas Island, scene of the Asen wreck, and other islands of the South Pacific. Until a few years ago a cruise was made annually to the islands of South Pacific to investigate the possibilities of castaways being found on an inhabited islands and to renovate graves, etc.

With the addition of Algerine at the Esquimalt station, the practice is being revived.

Enquiries by salvage companies regarding the possibility of solving the steamer Asen, wrecked on Christmas Island, have disclosed the fact that the engines have broken away and the hull is breaking. No hope of salvage is entertained. The Canadian-Australian line agents say the steamer Manuka will undoubtedly call at Christmas Island, as instructions to that effect will be cable from Sydney, to which port the survivors of the Asen will be taken.

Room For Settlers.

Reports received from British Columbia land surveyors sent out to examine and survey land along the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway represent that the area fit for settlement is very much larger than was generally supposed. From present indications, all the land along that railway in this province, with a few isolated exceptions, will be taken up by actual settlers within a short time after the road is built. When the enterprise was projected it was thought that the British Columbia section would not be traffic-producing. There is, however, as a matter of fact, every reason to believe that it will be the seat of many and varied industries.

Kitten Came to Life.

A Toronto resident recently immersed three young kittens in a barrel of water, with the intention of drowning them. They were taken out after some time, apparently dead, and were buried. Next day one of the kittens was found lying comfortably beside her mother, alive and well. The old cat, it was ascertained, had scratched up the grave and secured the only kitten which had any life in it and had brought it back to health and strength.

A POUND OF FEATHERS.

It Is Really Heavier Than a Pound of Lead.

The favorite question with the school committeemen of olden time was, we are told, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of lead?" The first rash answer almost always used to be, "A pound of lead." Then, of course, from the older pupils would come the reply, "Both alike."

If this question was asked to-day the old time querist might receive a decided surprise, for the pound of feathers could easily be proved to be the heavier. A simple experiment is all the evidence needed.

With any accurate scales weigh out a pound of lead, using ordinary shot for convenience. Pour the shot into one of the pans of a balance. For the feathers a light muslin bag will be needed, and care must be taken that feathers and bag together do not weigh more than a pound. When the bag of feathers is put into the other pan of the balance the beam will, after a few oscillations, come to rest exactly level.

So far the verdict "both alike" seems to be proved. But place the balance on the receiver of an air pump, with lead and feathers undisturbed. Cover the whole with the glass bell jar and exhaust the air. Slowly the feathers sink, and the lead kicks the beam. The pound of feathers is heavier than the pound of lead.

The truth is that what we call a pound was not such in fact, for the atmosphere buoys up everything within it in proportion to the bulk of the object, and the feathers, being of greater bulk than the lead, are supported by the air to a considerably greater extent than the lead. Removed from this supporting medium, their true weight is made evident.

Charles Reade propounded a similar question in one of his novels. A Jewish trader is made to ask, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of gold?" After awhile he explains to the satisfaction of his audience of miners that the feathers are the heavier.

Gold, he explains, is weighed by troy weight, while feathers are weighed by avoirdupois, and as the twelve ounces in a pound troy contain only 5,760 grains, while the avoirdupois pound contain nearly 7,000 grains, the pound of feathers is, of course, 1,240 grains heavier than the pound of gold.

Some Costly Toys.

The presentation by President Falliores of a costly toy railway to the Czarevitch reminds us that one of the first model railways, or anything like a large scale, was the most prized possession of the ill-fated Prince Imperial when a boy. It was constructed in the gardens of the Tuileries, and is said to have cost 50,000 francs. In the private grounds of Mr. T. H. Shriver, a wealthy resident of Denver, Colorado, is a still more remarkable miniature railway. On a circular track, 400 feet long, with a gauge of 8 3-4 inches, Mr. Shriver drives a train of eight Lilliputain carriages, carrying a dozen or more passengers. The Rev. H. L. Warneford of Windsor is the proud proprietor of "the Chicago and Jericho Railway," with its cuttings and tunnels, stations and signal-boxes; while a Manchester gentleman, Mr. P. H. S. Leigh, has (or had not long ago) in a specially-constructed room a similar railway, of 270 feet in length and 6 inch gauge, over which a £300 engine draws exquisite models of passenger and luggage trains.

Human Ostrich.

A remarkable case is under treatment at the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. In June a young postman was sentenced to nine month's imprisonment for appropriating small postal orders, and after his removal to prison he began to swallow all manner of things. First, he swallowed a portion of a blanket, then 24 iron pins, each about two inches long, a considerable number of stones, pieces of iron, and bits of a water jug which he smashed. When he told the prison officials what he had done they disbelieved him, but on being taken to the infirmary the various articles were located by the X-rays. A consultation was held by the doctors, but it was deemed advisable not to perform an operation. The patient is still confined to bed, though apparently quite well and normal in every respect, notwithstanding his extraordinary experiences. In the infirmary he is known as the human ostrich.

Edison as Humorist.

The great American inventor, T. A. Edison, who is at work perfecting a motor powerful but small enough to bring the aeroplane within a measurable distance of success, is partly deaf in his right ear. In one way this an advantage, as it enables him to pursue his work undisturbed while surrounded by all the noise of a busy shop. When offered an infallible cure for his deafness, he once remarked, "Why should I try it? Think of the lot of stuff I'd have to listen to that I don't want to hear!" On another occasion a would-be wit said, in ordinary tones, "I guess he'd hear if I asked him to have a drink." The inventor looked the young man who spoke squarely in the eye. "Yes, perhaps I should," he said; "but no, not to-day, thank you!"

His Deep Concern.

The kind old lady noticed a small lad entering a cobbler's with a small package.

"What have you there, sonny?" she asked kindly.

"Ma's slipper," replied the lad. "You see, there is a tack out of place in it, and I want to have it fixed before ma notices it."

"Ah, what a considerate little boy! I suppose you are afraid the tack might hurt your mother's foot?"

"Well, it isn't exactly that. You see, the tack is sticking out on the sole, and this is the slipper ma spanks me with."

PUBLIC PUNISHMENT.

The Days of the Whipping Post, Stocks and Branding Irons.

Up until the end of the war and a little while after the whipping post and stocks stood not far from the northwest corner of the courthouse and between that building and the present postoffice, and there the last whipping took place, though as it began it was sought to be stopped by a federal officer. The sheriff was, however, simply carrying out the mandate of the old court of pleas and quarter sessions.

In those days the stocks and the whipping post, too, were special attractions, notably to boys. The latter were allowed to ridicule people who sat in the stocks, which held their hands and feet, but not to throw anything at them.

Of course this deprived the boys of some degree of pleasure, yet they contrived to get a good deal of fun out of the thing anyway. It seems odd now even to think of such scenes as these must have been. Figure to yourself passing by the courthouse green at Charlotte or Raleigh and seeing a gentleman held by the ankles and wrists by wooden bars, sitting there in the sunshine for all the world to look at.

Those were the days of the branding iron too. A set of gyves of iron, in use for holding the ankles or wrists, are on exhibition here, but of branding irons there are none. These were used here in January, 1865, for the last time.—Raleigh Cor. Charlotte Observer.

VANITY OF CONVICTS.

The Way Some Men Spruce Up in the Penitentiary.

"The vainest lot of men I ever did know are behind these walls," remarked a convict in the penitentiary. "For fastidious dressing and cleanliness I have never seen anything like it. Those who have been accustomed to sleeking up on the outside grow much worse in here, and those who never even combed their hair on the outside have it as cleanly parted as they can. I know of a hundred instances where convicts have risked being paddled or having time taken away just for the sake of shaving. They get hold of a razor or improvise one and keep it in their cells. They all have mirrors in their cells along with the calendars.

"I know of one instance of a trusted prisoner who begged for weeks to be allowed to wear a hat instead of the prison cap because he thought he did not look well in it. Whenever they get an opportunity they press their trousers. They save collars for Sundays and appear very clean and neat and nice in chapel. I guess it is all because they have time to think about themselves more than ever. If a man has nothing but himself to think about he takes more pride in himself. Or maybe they want something with which to pass away the time in their cells."—Columbus Dispatch.

Blankets of Bark.

In Ecuador, one of the South American republics, the bark of a tree which grows on the slopes of the Andes is utilised for the making of blankets. The blanket is over six feet long and over five feet wide and is as soft and pliable as though it were made of flannel. It is about the thickness of a good flannel blanket and can be rolled up and put in a strap without hurting or injuring it. This tree or bark blanket is merely a strip of bark cut from a section of the trunk of the blanket or demajagua tree. The Indians make a cutting around the trunk to get it, and they prepare it by soaking it in water until it is soft. It is then pounded so that the rough outside can be stripped off and the inside alone left. The inside is of fine fibers so joined together by nature that it makes a beautiful blanket, warm enough to be used as a cover and soft enough for a mattress.

A Clock Case Made of Pennies.

A novelty in clockmaking consists of a timepiece whose case is made of English pennies. The coins, of which there are ninety-six, all bear the date 1797 and were beaten out to almost double their original size and then riveted together, while the figures were made of small strips of copper cemented on to the face. The clock stands fourteen inches high and is eight inches broad at the base. That "time is money" is an adage with which we all more or less agree, but this is a case in which the saying might be reversed and still remain true. The clock is owned by a resident of Lateral Bank, Ilkley, Yorkshire, England.

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Aigone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state, read what J. W. Jarrell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the trimples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health gain. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, search out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Fell Into Well

The nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bradin, Concession St., Ashburnham, had a narrow escape from being drowned Thursday afternoon. The child's father was repairing the pump and had taken it out, leaving the well open. While Mr. Bradin was in the house the boy playing around, stepped into the well, falling about twenty feet. The lad's father was attracted by the boy's screams and rushing to his assistance threw a rope down and brought the lad to the top by means of it. He was somewhat scratched about the face and hands besides being badly drenched.

He arrived in the morning and was busy all day renewing old acquaintances. Fred is looking fine and he says he feels the same. He will only be a short time, when he will return to the West to prepare for the winter's campaign.

Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church, was in Montreal this week attending the annual meeting of the Grande Ligne Mission Board. He returned home yesterday morning. Rev. Mr. Webb was to have officated at the Cotton-Harding wedding on Thursday, but on account of his absence Rev. J. G. Potter performed the ceremony.

The Jack Lake Fishing Club left yesterday morning on the steam yacht Rob Roy, for Mount Julian from which place they will drive to Jack Lake where they will spend a couple of week's fishing. The staunch little yacht was well loaded which provision and a jolly party of fishermen were on board. The weather is ideal and they contemplate a most enjoyable outing.

A Food Lesson

That the Teacher Won't Forget

Teaching school is sometimes very arduous work. If the teacher is not robust and in good health, she can't do her best for her scholars or for her own satisfaction.

When it becomes a question of proper food for brain work, as in school teaching, many teachers have found Grape-Nuts ideal.

"I have been for many years a teacher, and several months ago found myself in such a condition that I feared I should have to give up work,' writes a N.Y. teacher.

"So nervous was I, that dizziness and spells of faintness were frequent and my head and stomach gave me much trouble.

"Several physicians who treated me gave me only temporary relief and the old ails returned.

"About three months I dropped all medicine and began eating Grape-Nuts morning and night. Now, my head is clear, pain in stomach entirely gone, and I have gained in flesh. I am not only continuing in school but have engaged to teach another year.

"I owe my restored health, a brighter outlook on life and relief from doctor bills, to Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Young Ladies' Open Meeting Last Night

First Musical Program of the Season —Enjoyable Entertainment

The first open meeting of the Young Ladies Literary Society of the T.A.S., was held last evening in their hall, and in every way was a grand success. Rev. Dr. O'Brien opened the meeting by giving a very instructive lecture based principally on the good work and advancement this society has done since it was first organized.

The musical numbers were also very good. Recitations were given by Misses Carrie White and Emma Derocher. Some of the pupils of the convent contributed musical including Misses B. Giroux, Marion Gorman and Harriet Pierce. The Mandolin Club were also in attendance and gave three excellent selections. The evening all through was very enjoyably spent and no doubt the rest of the meetings throughout the year will be the same.

Belleville Has a $12,000 Hospital

Ald. Bradburn, chairman of the Property Committee, with Aldermen Gillespie and Johnston, has returned from Belleville where he visited the isolation hospital, which was erected there a short time ago. He reports that that city has a very fine building which cost $12000 and which is conducted in connection with the hospital. Such a building as Belleville has is too expensive altogether for the requirements of this city and is not in favor with the members of the council or with the people. It is generally conceded, however, that accommodation will have to be provided for the accommodation of patients suffering from contagious diseases. But to get something which will suit the aldermen and the people appears to be no easy matter.

A popular idea is to erect two small buildings, one for scarlet fever and one for diphtheria, and that each of the hospitals take charge of one of the isolation hospitals. For the city to erect one building and have a caretaker, matron, etc., would be an expense altogether unwarranted by the number of cases, which it would cost. The two hospitals very little extra and the city could even pay for the cure of the patients treated.

The isolation hospital has now been hanging fire for several years and the necessity for the institution is becoming greater each year. The city has had one or two unpleasant experiences with patients suffering from contagious diseases, and this year's council will do well to take some definite action before their present term has expired. It will, in fact, be a fitting climax to their splendid record for doing things the past year.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive our Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Brigade Called to Extinguish a Blaze

About half past twelve o'clock yesterday noon a telephone message from the House of Providence gave an alarm of fire on Concession St. The brigade responded at once and found upon their arrival that a board on a fence had been on fire and a post had also been scorched. The extent of the damage has not yet been figured out by the underwriters. There was more harm done to the fire fighting apparatus and the horses than to anything else, although the people were greatly excited.

The cause of the fire is not known to the brigade. It might just be mentioned, however, without any reference to the present case that parents are altogether too generous with matches and too lenient with their children. It is a common thing to see a small child playing with a box fire close to the house or fences and that there have not been disastrous fires is not the fault of the parents.

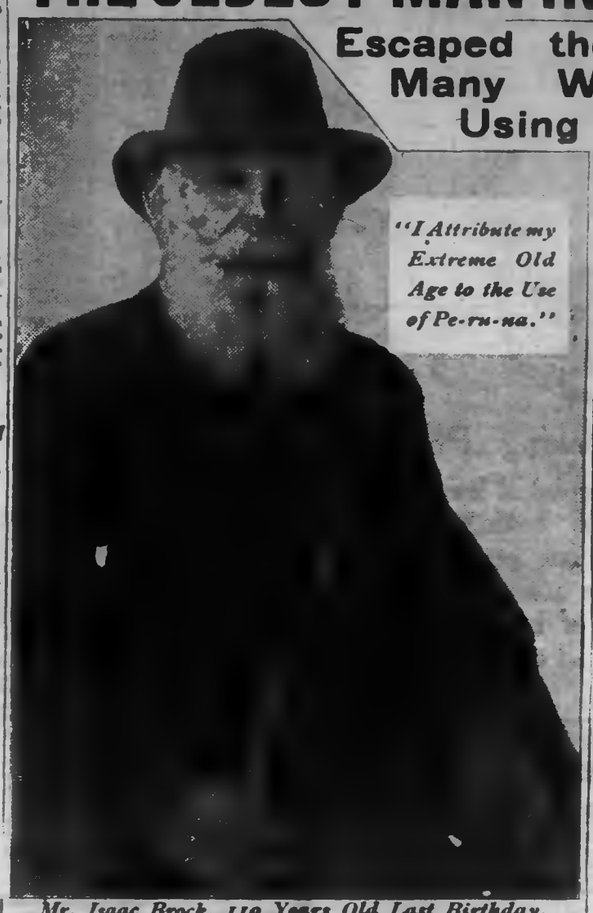
Local Merchants were Stung by Young Girl

It is not an uncommon thing for retail merchants to get stung, and in many ways. In fact the majority of them have been stung so often that they are getting pretty wise. Nevertheless a young girl, in fact a child, to all appearances possessing all the innocence of a child, has successfully worked a scheme on at least three George street merchants. Where she got the idea the merchants are wondering and where she got the nerve is also causing a little speculation. Her plan was to enter a store and leave an order for several articles, including candy, dates or some other delicacy and ask to have them sent to a certain house, remarking however that she would take the candy, or other dainty, with her. Of course when the goods were delivered no one knew anything of the order and the stuff had to be taken back. Thus the little girl secured a good supply of her favorite confections without any price.

The merchants have learned the girl's name, but whether they will prosecute or not has not been decided. At any rate all retail merchants are hereby given a warning to beware of such tricks.

THE OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters By Using Pe-ru-na.



"I Attribute my Extreme Old Age to the Use of Pe-ru-na."

Mr. Isaac Brock, 119 Years Old Last Birthday.

ISAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLennan county, Texas, has lived for 119 years.

For many years he resided at Bosque Falls, eighteen miles west of Waco, but now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas.

Some time ago, by request, Uncle Isaac came to Waco and sat for his picture, holding in his hand a stick cut from the grave of General Andrew Jackson.

Mr. Brock is a dignified old gentleman, showing few signs of decrepitude.

His family Bible is still preserved, and it shows that the date of his birth was written 119 years ago.

Born before the United States were formed.
Saw 22 presidents elected.
Pe-ru-na has protected him from all sudden changes.
Veteran of four wars.
Shot a horse when 99 years old.
Always conquered the grip with Pe-ru-na.
Witness to a land suit at the age of 110 years.
Believes Pe-ru-na the greatest remedy of the age for catarrhal troubles.

IN speaking of his good health and extreme old age, Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have, he ought to have found out a great many things by experience. I think I have done so.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper thing for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate. For 119 years I have withstood the changeable climate of the United States.

"I have always been a very healthy man, but, of course, subject to the affections which are due to sudden changes in the climate and temperature.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Pe-ru-na, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy.

"It exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this disease.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Pe-ru-na was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh I tried Pe-ru-na for la grippe and found it to be just the thing."

In a later letter, Mr. Brock writes:

"I am well and feeling as well as I have for years. I would not be without Peruna."

Yours truly,

Isaac Brock.

A letter dated July 3, 1908, written for Mr. Brock by his wife, Sarah J. Brock, states:

"Last winter I had just gotten up out of a spell of sickness, when I commenced taking Peruna. I think it improved my health very much."

In a postscript, Mrs. Brock adds: "He receives a great many letters inquiring about what Peruna will do. I do not answer them all, as I think they can get a bottle and try it."

Seventy-Six Appeals Against the Assessment

The time for appeals against the assessment for 1908 expired on Thursday night. City Clerk Armstrong reports 76 appeals, and that the Court of Revision has decided upon November 3rd, as the date for the first sitting of the Court of Revision to hear those appeals. The court this year, while having a good list to go through, are not up against anything like the proposition they were last fall when 323 objections were made against the assessment.

RUGBY

The T.A.S. Athletic Club's senior rugby team will journey to Toronto this morning, where they will clash with the F.A.A.C. a team at Rosedale grounds in a senior O.R.F.U. game. The locals have not had much practice but are in fairly good shape and expect to make a creditable showing although they realize that in the T.A.A.C. team they are up against the strongest team in Toronto with the exception of the Varsity four-team. They had a good practice at Brock street rink last night.

FREE! GIVEN AWAY!

Special Offer to Ladies

I will send ten days treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weaknesses, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 24th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 boxes of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more boxes will produce a permanent cure. Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial boxes free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many baptisms in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Coomby in the noble work, believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1903.

Dear Friend.—Sometime ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicine had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years afterrible suffering and undergoing three operations, I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms tonegents?

Gratefully yours.

Miss G. T., 257 Brock street.

Address enclosing 2-cent stamps for Free Sample, circulars and other testimonials.

Wedding Bells

HENNESSEY—PERDUE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Luke's church, Downeyville, on Tuesday morning, Oct. 6th, when Miss Polly Perdue was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Herbert Hennessey of Emily more. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McGuire, and the wedding march was played by Miss Mollie O'Brien. The bride wore a dress of Alice blue silk, with white picture hat. She was attended by her sister, Miss Kate Perdue, who wore a suit of blue with hat to match. Mr. Michael Hennessy, brother of the groom, was best man. After the ceremony they were conveyed by a handsome team of Peterborough greys to the bride's home. In the evening they left for Peterborough, where they will make their future home.

Young Englishman Drowned--Wm.Bailey's Boat was Upset

Two Men Got Into Bailey's Little Canvas Canoe --Accident Happened About Five O'Clock, Body Recovered About Seven

Archie Benning, a young Englishman, was drowned Sunday afternoon about five o'clock, while out boating with Mr. Wm. Bailey. Benning was between 18 and 19 years of age, and came out to this country about three years ago and has since been working among the farmers. Some time ago he got out of work, and on Friday he went to stay with Mr. Skippen on McGill street, who got him a job and he started to work on Saturday.

Sunday the deceased went to see Mr. Bailey and persuaded him to go boating. The owner of the boat objected for some time but finally consented. The two got into the craft, which is one made by the owner for his own use. It is of canvas and only eight feet long. The two had not gone very far away from the new wharf at the end of the street car line when the frail ship upset and landed them both in the cool waters of the Otonabee. Bailey was successful in reaching the shore, but his companion, not being able to swim very well, was drowned.

Soon after the accident quite a crowd gathered on the scene, and a search was made for the body which was recovered by Ernest Sanders about seven o'clock. Bailey went home and changed his clothes and returned to assist in the search.

Coroner Dr. Gray was notified but he had not decided up to the hour of going to press whether to hold an inquest or not. In the meantime Mr. Comstock took charge of the body, and removed it to his undertaking establishment.

Local Option Not Favored by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt

The opposition of Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, pastor of St. Luke's church on the temperance question, was clearly defined by that gentleman in his sermon on Sunday evening. Sunday was Temperance Sunday in all the city churches of all the Protestant denominations except St. Luke's, special speakers sent out by the Dominion Alliance, occupied the pulpits. Dr. Langfeldt, however, delivered a temperance sermon in the evening in which he gave plainly his views. He took as his text, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection." The meaning of which is, "I deal a knock down blow to my body and carry it away as a slave." This does not necessarily refer to any physical actions. Paul looked upon the body as the chief seat of sin, including not only the material body but the mind and the heart. The sin of all must be subdued.

Self discipline is to check our sin, after a thorough investigation of ourselves we have found out that sin. But we cannot overcome our sin without the grace of God working in us. He that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. No half measures would do. Local option to a drunkard is only a half measure. Once try to enforce it on all; one try to force the people by legislation and the question will take on an entirely different aspect. The speaker did not believe in falling in line with everyone and with what everyone said. When we endeavor to force the people in this matter we are creating a new commandment which is contrary to the teachings of the whole gospel. An individual can see any rule he likes for himself, but there is nothing but the grace of God that can save a drunkard. No matter what legislation is enforced. In localities where local option has been tried, instead of decreasing excessive drinking it has increased it. It has also created secret drinking hives. Young men thus see the law defied and it is indeed a very bad example for them.

In conclusion the reverend gentleman stated;—Let us enforce the present license laws and assist the commissioners in their work. If licensed sellers persist in breaking the law let us compel the commissioners to call them off and do away with their license. Let us use our influence for the uplifting of all. Life is one continued struggle but we must fight on and with the help of God we will succeed in the end.

Another Rally at Mr. Stratton's Committee Rooms

The largest crowd that has yet packed Mr. J. R. Stratton's committee rooms was present on Saturday night at the weekly rally. Besides the large crowd of men quite a number of ladies were present and all were enthusiastic, in fact it was the most enthusiastic gathering that has met in the Simcoe street rooms during the campaign. Mr. Stratton's supporters are working hard as is also the candidate himself and all of them report everything very encouraging and hopeful. They state that there is no doubt of Mr. Stratton's election and by a good majority.

The program of speakers included Messrs. J. R. Stratton, F. O. Kerr, Wm. Eyres, G. M. Sager, J. J. Hartley and Andrew McFarlane. The speakers were full of enthusiasm, and roused the workers to a high pitch, making them more determined than ever to make the next ten days telling ones for their candidate.

Mr. Stratton was enthusiastically applauded when he arose to speak. He did not talk at great length as he had put in a big week's work, and has another big week ahead of him. However he gave the boys a word of encouragement, and urged them to keep up their good work.

Mr. Stratton's meetings for week are;

Monday night at Galway.
Tuesday night at Swamp Lake.
Wednesday night at Buckhorn.
Thursday night at Nogie's Creek.
Friday and Saturday nights he expects to be in the city.

Captain Lost His Certificate

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—As a result of the report of the inquiry into the burning of the steamer Princess at Warrin's Landing, Lake Winnipeg, in which eight lives were lost, Commander Spain this morning cancelled the certificates of Captain Stevens and Chief Engineer Cornish. The report blames the crew for carelessness and censures the officers for a lack of discipline.

R.L.Borden's Manifesto to Canada

(Special to The Times)

A manifesto was handed out by Hon. R. L. Borden at Halifax Saturday night, the concluding paragraphs of which are;—

"The destiny of our country is in the hands of the young men. It will be more so in the years to come. Do they believe the present prosperity of Canada is due to the present government, or that the men who compose the present cabinet can alone be trusted with the public affairs. Can prosperity come from the accountant of the public treasury benches, or does it come from the industry, energy and capacity of our people employed in the development of our nation's resources.

"The defeat of the present government will mean a victory, not only for the Conservative party, but for the honest bank and file of the Liberal party and all those of the people of Canada.

"To them I promise a cabinet worthy of their highest ideals, and truly representative of this great country which I shall serve."

Alex Stewart, K.C., the Candidate

STEAMER COLLIDED WITH A SCHOONER OFF VANCOUVER

(Special to The Times.)

Vancouver, Oct. 18.—While off Victoria on its way to Alaska last night the steamer Cottage City, Capt. Jansen, crashed into an unknown schooner. The upper works of the steamer were completely demolished and Purser Wm. Jones was thrown into the water while an unknown Italian had a leg broken, and several other passengers were slightly injured. Shortly after the collision the George E Starr in charge of Capt. Ellamers bound for Bellingham, appeared on the scene, and took the Cottage City passengers on board, and took them back to Seattle. The Cottage City was later picked up the Whitcomb, and towed back to Seattle.

Italian was Stabbed in the Back

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 18.—There was an Italian stabbing affray here today in which several Italians became embroiled in a dispute, supposedly over a game of cards. In the mix-up an Italian named Rigi, was stabbed in the back. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was ascertained that his injury was not serious. His assailant is known and the police are after him.

Ten Thousand People Heard Sir Wilfrid

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—Ten thousand people turned out to the monster demonstration held here Saturday evening in honor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. A torch light procession formed early in the evening, and wended its way to the Arena rink where the speaking was held. By the time the speakers arrived the rink was filled and overflowed, many being unable to secure even standing room. It was the biggest gathering of the kind ever held here. Other speakers besides Sir Wilfrid Laurier, were Hon. Wm. Patterson, minister of customs, Hon. Chas. Murphy, the new minister of state, Senator Belcourt, and Sir Hal B. McGiverin, Sir Wilfrid's running mate in Ottawa.

Lucky lot of the premier's running mate was his prophecy he could see in the result of the polling on October 26th, and it is summed up in one sentence by me:—"I am a confirmed optimist on October 26th, as I am in my own existence."

Petes Lost to T.A.A.C., Score 28-0

Peterborough's senior rugby club went down to defeat on Saturday afternoon before the T.A.A.C. at Rosedale. It was the fastest game of the season and was certainly a credit on all the locals. The score was 28-0 in favor of the T.A.A.C.

The next game will be played on the Riverside Park grounds next Saturday afternoon. When it is expected that the local back division will be somewhat strengthened. The boys will also get in a lot of hard practice so as to have a chance to overcome the big lead.

At 2.15 on Saturday at Riverside Park the P.C.I. Rugby team put it all over the Y.M.C.A. by the score of 17—0. From the time it fores Dr. A. W. Charlesworth blew his whistle to start the game till the time papers blew it to stop the ball was always in the "Y's" territory. The game was clean throughout, and the following players lined up for the game;

P.C.I.—Perrye, Kirn, Gibson, Meldrum, Giroux, Quinlan, Anderson, Mayfield, Monaghan, Leahy, Sheehy, Hall, Goode and Dobbin.

Y.M.C.A.—Wade, Muncer, Ray, Pogleston, Patterson, Latimer, Hillier, Caniff, Storey.

The second game was somewhat of a close variety, the score being 8—5 in favor of the Rough Riders against the T.A.S. In no way does the score indicate that the Rough Riders had it all their own way. At many stages throughout the game it looked as though T.A.S. would put it over their opponents. The features of this game were the splendid punts of Laing for the Rough Riders, and Lackin of T.A.S. formerly center half of St. Jerome's College, Berlin.

The line-up of these teams were as follows,

Rough Riders 9—Wareham, Hayes, Porter, Cahill, Lang, Hefferman, Hollingshead, Giroux, Eastwood, Hayes, Sheffield, Quinlan, Forsan and Corkery.

T.A.S., 5—O'Hern, Dunoon, McGill, O'Brien, Kennealey, Henry, Molloy, Clancy, Fitzgerald, Larkin, O'Donnell, Drescher, Galvin, Foley.

The T.A.S. will journey to Lindsay tomorrow where they will play the Junior O.R.F.U. team of that town. The following players are asked to be on hand in the rink tonight;—Drescher, Holland, O'Hern, Larkin, O'Brien, Kennealy, Fitzgerald and others.

Hurtubise Lost to Conkle's Unknown

Not a little interest was taken in the wrestling bout in Hamilton on Saturday night between Gene Hurtubise and Conkle's unknown. The unknown turned out to be Kieser of Auburn, N.Y., and he is a good one too. He threw Gene twice, the first fall in 30 minutes and the second one in eight minutes.

The Blood Made Strong

TIREDNESS AND WEAKNESS OVERCOME.

A Joyous Letter.

"I admit because I neglected early treatment I am entirely to blame for the condition of weakness that for nearly two years made my life a real misery," writes Mrs. Hazen, of Beauport. "At first I felt sort of flat in the morning and could do no more than pick at my breakfast. Later I remember my sleep was disturbed, that dreamy, restless sleep, from which you finally awaken, feeling as if you could never get up. Then I became thin, lost my color, got nervous and fearful about nothing, and kept thinking about myself all the time, and was irritable, cross and easily made cry. What would have become of me if I had not taken Ferrozone, I can't imagine. Ferrozone put new life into me from the start. It strengthened my nerves and brought back my color, and in a little while, less than three months, no healthier and brighter woman could be found anywhere. I highly praise Ferrozone and advise sick people to take advantage of its health-conferring properties."

Ferrozone quickens the powers of both body and mind, simply because it forms lots of blood that's full of life and vitality. Ferrozone creates appetite, gives strength, vim and endurance, it's good for old people, good for everybody that needs better health. Thousands of men, women and children use Ferrozone every day and all say it's the best nourishing, strengthening tonic made; try Ferrozone yourself. 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50. Sold by all dealers.

Dr. Hammond will Open Office Here

Dr. E. A. Hammond, son of the late J. E. Hammond, Esq., has arrived in the city from London, England, and will soon open an office for the practice of his profession, at the corner of Smith and George streets. Mr. Hammond is a graduate of Trinity University, Toronto, but has been in the Old Country for some time pursuing special lines of study and practice in heart, stomach and skin diseases and consumptive ailments at the great hospitals especially devoted to their treatment. He also spent some time in the wards of the Rotunda Hospital in Dublin, in maternity practice and gynecological research. Dr. Hammond, therefore, comes well equipped with the latest special knowledge and experience in relation to the subjects specified above.

U. S. FLEET ARRIVED AT YOKOHAMA--GOT A GREAT RECEPTION

(Special to The Times.)

Yokohama, Oct. 18.—The U. S. battleship fleet dropped anchor in the harbor here this morning at 9.30 o'clock. Owing to a heavy fog over the bay there was some delay in the arrival. At 8.45 a.m. a gun from one of the 16 Japanese battleships boomed a salute as the Yokoston, slightly in the lead of the U.S. fleet appeared through the fog. The fog shortly afterward lifted and the whole fleet came in review and anchored.

Thousands of flag staffs all over the city flow the stars and stripes, while mile after mile of street is literally walled with Japanese and American emblems. The harbor is aflame with stars and stripes, while the dock is filled with steamers and and tugs waiting for the excursionists who are going out to see the fleet. This is a real American day here and all foreigners are treated like Yankees.

Nominations in City Hall Today

The nominations for the Dominion elections will be made today at noon at the council chambers in the town hall. So far as is known only two candidates will be put in the field, viz;—

J. R. Stratton, for the Liberals.
J. H. Burnham, for the Conservatives.

The affair will be very formal, and there will be no addresses delivered.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

UNKNOWN MAN SHOT TWO BOYS IN MONTREAL

(Special to The Times)

Montreal, Oct. 18.—Without the slightest provocation, an unknown man, supposed to be a lunatic, drew a revolver, and deliberately shot Harold Patterson, 14 year-old son of Col. Patterson, and Gordon West, an 18-year-old companion, on the outskirts of Longueil's across from here. Patterson is in a local hospital, and in a dangerous condition.

Gordon West was shot in the thigh, and his condition is critical. The man's identity is unknown and the police will have a hard job to locate him.

Forest Fires Doing Much Damage

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Last night a distinct appearance and odor of smoke was noticed in the city, so much in fact that numerous telephone enquiries were received by the different newspaper offices, for information as to where the bush fires were. One man in North Toronto, declared he could distinctly see a reflection to the far north.

A large army of men are now fighting day and night against the bush fires raging for the past two or three days in the vicinity of Barrie, Orillia and Huntsville, and which thousands of dollars worth of damage have already been done to property and which momentarily threatens to get beyond control. Near Barrie many farmers' outbuildings have been destroyed.

A swamp 20 miles long the southern border of which four miles out of Barrie is in a distinct fire, sending great clouds of smoke into the town, nearly choking the citizens at times. From Huntsville it is said that Long Foot chemical works, 500 cords of wood have been burned. Several buildings at Rainy Lake are also said to have been destroyed by fire.

The smoke is drifting south to Lake Ontario, fairly stifling the people in the northern communities.

Rain was prayed for in many of the churches on Sunday to clarify the air, and also to extinguish the fires.

At the Toronto Observatory last night it was reported that smoke was general throughout the Province and there is no rain in sight.

Inthon Bible Class Had Large Attendance

The "Inthon" Bible class of the George street church had a full house yesterday afternoon. Fifty members, nine visitors and Mr. Robertsons' class who paid the "Inthon's" visit were present.

Mr. W. E. Dyer was also present and gave a splendid address on the methods of Bible class work, in place of the regular lesson discussion. Mr. Dyer is an able speaker on Bible class work and is extremely interested in the welfare of the young men.

That crowd of fellows you saw going down George street yesterday afternoon, were not looking for the "Mysterious Mr. E." but were going to the temperance meeting at the Grand. Fifty-one members marched down headed by Colonel Bobs, chairman of the Membership Committee.

Mr. F. A. Sisson, the class artist, knows how to handle the crayons alright by the manner in which he decorated the class blackboard.

The class are both sorry and glad for Mr. G. Deprose, chairman of the Visiting Committee, and his assistants. Sorry that he and his workers have nothing to do. Glad that none of the class are sick to keep him busy. However, he will be right "on the job" when any sickness turns up.

Mr. E. G. Clark, chairman of the Devotional Committee, thinks that a few of the members ought to volunteer to take charge of a class in the Sunday school when any of the regular teachers are absent.

All are, no doubt, anxious to hear more about the literary entertainment that is going to take place next Friday night, under the supervision of Mr. R. J. Soden, chairman of the Library Committee. Particulars will be found in another column.

A splendid feature about the "Inthon" class is the friendly hand-shake at the close of the discussion. It makes a fellow forget that lonely feeling and want to come back.

All the men residents and visitors in Peterborough to come to the class, will be given the glad hand, and made to feel as much at home as possible."

"COME ON FELLOWS."

Temperance Sermons in the Churches Sunday, Two Big Mass Meetings

Great interest was taken in the cause of temperance yesterday in all the Protestant churches. The day had been set apart especially, and the Dominion Alliance of Toronto sent several speakers down to occupy the pulpits. The object was to start the campaign to educate the people to local option, the course which has been adopted by the temperance people to bring about the end for which they have been working for several years, viz., "The abolition of the Bar." It is the intention to carry on a campaign in the city, and to bring on a local option election as soon as it is felt the people are ready, probably in January, 1910.

Following were the speakers and where they preached;

Rev. H. H. Spence of Toronto at George street church in the morning, and at Murray street Baptist in the evening.

Rev. Nathaniel Smith at Knox church in the morning and at St. Paul's in the evening.

Rev. F. J. Lynch at St. John's in the morning and at All Saints' in the evening.

Rev. W. G. Clarke of Port Hope, at Mark street church in the morning and at Charlotte street in the evening.

Mrs. Owen Hitchcock spoke at Park street church in the morning and at St. Andrew's church in the evening.

Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening a mass meetings were held in the opera house, and at both the large play house was packed to the doors. In the afternoon the speakers were Mrs. Owen Hitchcock, Rev. Jas. Lynch and Rev. H. H. Spence. The Salvation Army Band enlivened the proceedings with several choice selections.

In the evening a sing service was held and then Rev Mr. Spence gave a short talk and illustrated it, with stereopticon views.

At the Theatre

"Out in Idaho," a play true to nature in every respect, was presented at the Grand on Saturday, matinee and night, and a large audience greeted each performance. Seventeen well trained, refined players, represented the troupe, and too much praise cannot be given to them for the way their various parts were handled. The acting of Jim Dexter and his sweetheart "Joe," also took well with the audience, especially in the second act. The Grand this year still continues to present to the theater-goers of Peterborough some of the best plays on the circuit. On Wednesday next John Griffith, one of the best of the many Shakespearian actors, will present one of the most of author's greatest tragedies, viz; "Othello" and no doubt a large crowd will be on hand to hear one of the greatest treats of the season in the dramatic line.

Dame Nature Hints

—When Food is Wrong

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food; the old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried all kinds of breakfast foods, but they were all soft, starchy messes, which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have any headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way. Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

"There's a Reason."

Mrs. Gould Wants More Alimony

New York, October 17.—That Howard Gould's income was formerly $200,000 a year, but since the business depression of last year, it has been reduced to $400,000, and that he has lost $100,000 this year, was stated by his counsel in an argument before Justice Bischoff. Mrs. Katherine Clemmons Gould, wife of Howard Gould, who is suing him for divorce, and for an increase in her alimony from $25,000 a year to $12,000, asserted that her husband's income was $200,000 a year. Delancey Nicoll, counsel for Mr. Gould, replied that while this was once true, Mr. Gould says it is not so now.

Very Prevalent in Young Women

A Condition of "White-Blood-ness" is Fast Increasing.

It is always associated with languor and sensitiveness to cold. All the mucous surfaces, such as the gums, lips and eyelids, are blanched and waxy looking, the skin is pallid and colorless.

The pulse becomes rapid and feeble; there is also loss of appetite and enfeebled digestion, palpitation of the heart, breathlessness and tendency to faint In extreme cases there is complete disappearance of the menstrual flow and dropsical swelling of the limbs.

Physicians know of no remedy so prompt in results as Ferrozone which contains all the elements lacking in debilitated blood.

Ferrozone not only improves the present quality of the blood, but actually forms more blood—the rich, red kind that nourishes and feeds the organs that require assistance.

"About a year ago," writes Mrs. S. G. Stanbope, of Rothesay, "my daughter complained of feeling tired. She was very pale and listless, and kept losing strength until too weak to attend school.

"We read of a similar case, that of Miss Decoret, Stirling, Ont., being cured by Ferrozone, and this induced us to get it for Elaine. It took three boxes of Ferrozone to make any decided improvement, but when six boxes were used my daughter was beginning to be her old self again. It didn't take much longer to make a complete cure. It has made a new girl of Elaine. She has gained ten pounds in weight and looks the picture of perfect health. She is strong-er and enjoys the best of spirits."

Every growing girl and young woman can make herself strong and healthy with Ferrozone. Price 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

AMERICAN POLITICS

The registration of voters in New York City has increased in Republican districts and fallen off in Tammany strongholds. Mr. Murphy, the Tammany leader, says that they must be Republicans who have failed to register in these districts; but the inference which is generally drawn is that the Tammany "braves" are not as enthusiastic for Bryan as they would be for their own ticket. Tammany is essentially a New York City organization; and its chief care is national contests and its chief care in national contests is to be "regular". It is "regular" enough this year. It is supporting Bryan. It has decorated the streets of New York with his portrait. But if it does not get its voters on the lists, they cannot poll for Bryan when the election comes.

In the state contest, Governor Hughes is said to be in danger. The sporting vote is against him, and the money interests are not too fond of him. But he enjoys the unique compliment of constituting the issue on which the election will turn. The fight is for Hughes and against Hughes. Chandler only appearing as the man who will be Governor if Hughes is defeated, still the fight on Hughes by the race track people will undoubtedly rally to his support the Up-State Republicans who are enthusiastically behind him on this issue. We are also told that the Hughes burden will endanger the national Republican ticket; but probably more danger arises from the indifference of the interests which are usually active. The Republican campaign fund was never so small. President Roosevelt has taught the financial magnates that they do not own the Republican party; and they are not investing as much as usual in it this year.

Ohio is declared to be in doubt, and the Republicans are almost inclined to concede Nebraska to Bryan. Indiana, however, they claim as certain; and they even talk of carrying Kentucky. La Follette is expected to bring Wisconsin into line; and Illinois is pretty well removed from the doubtful column. As from the first, the result appears to rest with New York; and the probabilities in that State are Republican. The Roosevelt group say that nothing but a landslide can elect Bryan; but it precisely upon a landslide that the Bryan forces are calculating. They claim a sweep of the Northern and Western States, which will put their man well ahead. Their Vice-Presidential candidate they expect to carry his home state, Indiana, while Governor Johnson is said to be good for Minnesota.

Curiously enough the Democrats are generally conceded many State victories which will not be duplicated with the national ticket. Whether this will mean a Democratic House of Representatives remains to be seen. If mocratic, the Senate will find itself in warm quarters, no matter whether Taft or Bryan lives at the White House. Some day the American people will have to "reform the Senate." That phrase has a familiar sound; but it is a matter of more importance to our neighbors than to ourselves. Our Senate may be burden and an exasperation; but it is not a block on the line of progress.

Thugs in the West Booming

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.—Under the most favourable conditions the Manitoba Medical association held its first annual banquet and organization meeting at the convention held here last week. Over One hundred were in attendance and stirring addresses were delivered by many of those present. The following officers were elected for the first year: Dr. G. R. Jones (Winnipeg), president; Dr. J. A. McDonald (Brandon), vice-president; Dr. J. R. McRae (Neepawa) second vice-president; Dr. Jasper Halpenny (Winnipeg), secretary; and Dr. R. W Kenny (Winnipeg), treasurer.

SCOTLAND INVITES MANITOBA CURLERS8.

The Manitoba Curling association will send ten men to Scotland to take part in the banquet of the Royal Caledonian club next winter. This was decided upon at the regular meeting of the Manitoba association held here last week. At Winnipeg the great annual carnival this season will be held on February 10, 1909, at which his excellency Earl Grey's new championship cup will be contested for. Earl Grey has been asked by the Executive of the Manitoba Curlers' association to accept of the office of honorary life patron.

GREAT NORTHERN ACTIVE.

Twenty-five men in the employ of the Great Northern Railway are surveying out a line between the Canadian boundary at Emerson, Man., and the city of Winnipeg. The proposed line will come northeast of the Red river, traversing through a rich section of wheat country which is now served entirely by the Canadian Pacific railway. The Great Northern purchased terminal property in Winnipeg two years ago, to the extent of $3,000,000, and it is understood that this property will now be improved by the erection of suitable station and freight sheds for the use of that company.

NEW BANK BUILDING.

A deal involving $80,000 was completed last week when the Bank of Montreal purchased the Canada Permanent building site, at the corner of Main street and Portage avenue. The property has a frontage of 128 feet on Main street and 128 feet on Portage avenue east. Considering the standing of the Bank of Montreal and as an institution conspicuous for its conservatism in real estate investments, this purchase of one of four of the best corners in the city further demonstrates that those who are most familiar with Winnipeg's possibilities are acquiring central properties upon which they are erecting the most magnificent and costly of structures that even outclass those in the metropolitan cities of the east and south.

ACTIVE BUILDING OPERATIONS.

Another important feature in the real estate and building situation here firm of F. W. Heubach, Limited, who will build forty new residences just across the river in Norwood, at an aggregate cost of $150,000. This property to be built upon is what formerly constituted the Winnipeg golf links. The houses are all to be of different architectural design and each residence will be built upon fifty foot lot, commensurate with the plans as designed for this new residential section of the city.

The contract has been let for two large freight sheds for the joint use of the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern, to be located near the Union depot in the C. N. R. yards. The contract goes to J. H. Trembly, of St. Boniface, for $32,740, and the buildings are to be completed and ready for use by February 15. Both sheds will be built of structural steel and will be; 500 feet long, one being 40 and the other 60 feet wide. A gang of 100 men will be at work on the grounds in a few days.

ALONG CANADIAN NORTHERN.

Four weeks ago your correspondent said something of the towns and cities of the province of Alberta, concluding with a few impressions of Edmonton, its capital city.

Come with me now on the return trip from Edmonton into Winnipeg over the Canadian Northern Railway. To those who wish to confine their energies to the growing of grain, there is perhaps no finer stretch of clear open rolling prairie land that can be found west of the Great Lakes than is that belt tributary to this road for three hundred miles east of Edmonton. So new, so virgin, are the lands along this great main line that a failure in production has not yet been recorded. Railways make farms and farms make more railways. Feeders that feed at the rate of 30 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre are the limbs that will yet bear fruit to such an extent as will make this main trunk line of C.N.R. one of the greatest grain carriers on the continent. Edmonton, the live city of Alberta, Vegreville, Vermillion, Lloydminster, Nort Battleford and thirty-four other live towns have sprung into existence since the Canadian Northern started to serve their communities in 1905. These are the towns you get off at if you are interested in the grain and live stock industry, and around each you will find satisfied settlers, bankers, brokers, and commercial men who have the same confidence in their respective districts as Wm. Mackenzie and D.D. Mann had when the end of their steel rails was a thousand miles to the eastward.

Coming east from Prince Albert only the edges are skirted of that vast western forest belt 500 miles long and 150 miles wide. At Prince Albert the great Saskatchewan river affords floating facilities for millions of logs that are annually consumed by the five big up-to-date mills of that town. Up here comes the homesteader when his prairie work is completed to work in the timber woods for the winter. His net earnings are invested in the spring in the finished product of the mill and he goes back with his car billed to some prairie station and his labor is thus turned to account in the building of a permanent home in the broad wheat fields of Saskatchewan.

Of the lumber mills operating along the "Wheat, Water and Wood" line of the Canadian Northern railway, there are fourteen east of Prince Albert and

"OXOL"

The word "Oxol" does not mean one food, or one preparation No; "Oxol" is a name given to all goods for horses, cattle, swine and sheep, prepared by Messrs S.K. & F.C. Windsor of Australia, New Zealand, England and Canada.

The veterinary preparations as well as the compressed bales of fodder placed on the market of the world under the name of

are all of the greatest possible order of merit and may be used by farmers, graziers, dairymen, and all owners of stock with the full assurance that these goods have the power in a very short time to double their incomes by feeding, fattening and curing all animals, which to them mean money.

One agent only in each district who has sole contract of the local trade for agent's name. See future advertisements, etc railways want ties, telephone and telegraph lines want poles, and the thousands of new settlers coming into the provinces must have lumber for building purposes. Are you a sportsman? If it's duck, geese, prairie chicken, deer, moose, bear, elk, or the timber wolf you want, think of the "Wheat, Water and Wood" route of the Canadian Northern from Prince Albert east to the shores of Lake Winnipegosis, the next day you lay out your itinerary and I would advise you taking some plain old fashionable rice sacks in place of the dainty copper riveted shoulder pouch one generally carries.

Dramatic Story of The Counterfeiters

Milton, Oct. 16.—Though a clue to the finding of the hidden counterfeit money in the old sheds or barns near Boyne yesterday evening was given by the memorandum book found in a house at Toronto, the main credit is due to Governor McGibbon of the jail here.

The story is a dramatic one. After Crozier was brought to the jail he had so many callers that they kept the Governor busy, and the sheriff ordered that none were to be admitted without his permission.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Crozier, who had a Toronto lady friend with her, applied for permission. It was granted, but the governor was told to allow no secret communications. He took the ladies to Crozier and after some talk, Crozier began to edge away from the governor, his wife going with him. He then took a written agreement of some sort from his pocket and said aloud, "Are you sure you understand this reading?"

Of course, the governor watched closely from behind the pair, and says the saw Crozier pass something. Then he saw Mrs. Crozier's hand go into her coat pocket. The governor then- it appears,, put in a hand, too, and said;

"What have you there, Mrs. Crozier?"

Crozier said, "I'll burn it."

The governor said, "'No, you don't.'"

TRIED TO CHOKE HIM.

Crozier put one hand into the pocket, the governor says, and tried with the other to choke him, but he raised the heavy key in his free hand and said, "Stand back or I'll brain you."

REQUEST TO A FRIEND.

The documents the governor thus captured were plans of the two old barns near Boyne, with dots showing where something was concealed in each, and written instructions for finding them, with a private request to a certain friend to get and destroy them.

The plans were rolled tightly, and made as small as possible. A string was tied around them.

The governor handed the plans to Crown Attorney Dick, who summoned Detective Parkinson by telegraph. The detective arrived from Hamilton at 4.45, and set out for the barns with the crown attorney and constable almost immediately.

In one barn the money was easily found. In the other, as the dot on the plan was not quite in the right place, a good deal of digging was necessary.

MONEY UNDER FLOORS.

Milton, Ont., Oct. 16.—Another big cache of counterfeit money was found last evening. The clue, it is understood was given by the memorandum book found in a house at Toronto, an entry being in it about the old stable by the creek at Oakville.

The detectives drove to the old stable yesterday, accompanied by Crown Attorney Dick, and Chief Constable Chapman.

The stable is on Mrs. Campbell's farm, across the road from the shack. Mr. Douglas of the shack farm, acted as guide. After a long search in the stable, and after the floors had been torn up, a big deposit of bills was found buried in the ground below the floor. The bills have not yet been all counted, but many were counterfeits of various kinds. One roll amounted to one thousand, five hundred, and there were a couple more the total being perhaps three thousand.

The searchers found the bills in two cans labelled "Lipton's," and a small lard pail. Returning to Milton, the bills were counted, and were found to total $7,210. The bills included 270 Quebec Bank tens, 244 Standard Bank tens, 136 Farmers' Bank fives, 50 Farmers' Bank tens, 142 United States (Indian Head) fives, and 28 Imperial Bank tens. The Imperial Bank bills were lacking the signature of the president.

The capture near Buffalo on Thursday included 150 Farmers' Bank of Canada $10 notes; 80 Farmers' Bank of Canada $5 notes; 100 Standard Bank of Canada notes for $10, and 138 United States $5 silver certificates, making a total of $3,165.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent, at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big money-lender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the abject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Beaufort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the G.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be treated with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Quaker Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measure for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave, Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as in the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at heart, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influences, with the Government, and in the world offiances and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 84 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 168 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 38 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,768, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lake and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent caters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $66,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and insensibly of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

he can't do anything. And Maryiya—oh, I wish there was some one with us now—some one that 'd help us if anything went wrong."

Of a sudden, looking down at her hands, her eyes fell upon the crimson stripes left across her palms by the plow, and, in fancy, a horseman was riding swiftly toward her from the east again, while she leaned on the cross brace and waited.

"Twenty miles," she said thoughtfully—"twenty miles," and turned the marks under.

Sun baked, deep of rut and straight as the flight of a crow lay the road that led northeast from the swift, shoally ford of the Missouri to the cattle camp at Clark's. It began at the rough planking upon which the rickety ferryboat, wheezing like some asthmatic monster, discharged its load of soldiers or citizens and ran up through the deep cut in the steep, caving river bank. From there over the western end of the Lancaster quarter, across the coulee under a hub depth of muddy backwater—at the only point where the sumac grown sides sloped gradually—it took its level, unswerving way.

Twice only in its course did it touch the ravine curving along near by it—once, six miles from the ferry landing, where on the limbs of a cluster of giant cottonwoods that grew in the bottom of the gully a score of Indian dead were lashed, their tobacco pipes, jerked beef and guns under the blanket wrappings that hid them, and again at Murphy's Throat, four miles farther up, where the coulee narrowed until a man standing in its bed with arms outstretched could place the tips of his fingers against either rocky wall. Beyond the Throat the crack in the plains grew wider and shallower, veered out to the eastward and at last came to an abrupt end in a high meadow below the distant river bluffs.

For decades the road had been a buffalo trail, a foot wide and half as deep, that in the dry season guided the herds in single file from the caking meadow to the distant waters of the Missouri. Then the travois poles of Indian tribes gave it the semblance of a wagon track, the center of which was worn bare by the hoofs of laden ponies and the feet of trudging squaws, and finally the lumbering carts of traders, the Studebakers of settlers and those heavier wagons that roll in the rear of marching men made of the track a plain and hardened highway.

Down it that morning, approaching to the accompaniment of loud talking, the tramping of horses, the cracking of whips and the jingling of spurs, came a long procession. Yet so absorbed was Dallas in her plowing that not until the head of its column was close upon her and there was barely time to go to the bridles of the frightened mules did she see it.

A mounted, unarmed officer led the way, with dashing foxhounds running about him. On either hand rode his staff and his scouts, Arickaree Indians in patched breeches and dusty blankets. And behind, full bearded, all military look gone from their boots, hats and uniforms, came the cavalry, riding two and two and flying torn and faded guidons.

Dallas had no chance to view the front of the command, for the mules claimed all her attention by hauling back on their bits. But now they quieted a little, and she was free to watch the dozen or so musicians who came next, mounted, with their brass instruments in hand. She saw that these men were nudging one another and directing at her glances which were bold and amused.

Something of her father's hatred of soldiers stirred her. She grew defiant, yet only for a moment. The musicians trotted by, and now Indians were passing—men, women and children, whose stolid faces disclosed no hint of grief or hatred for their captivity. The braves, twenty in number, formed the head of the band and kept no order of march as they spurred forward their rugged, footsore ponies. Their Springfield rifles, knives and tomahawks had been taken from them, but they still carried their once gay lances and shields of buffalo hide covered with rude pictures of the chase and battle. But, though on other occasions these would have betokened the free warrior, they now only emphasized by contrast the blankets that trailed ingloriously from their wearers' shoulders to the ground and the drooping feathers of the conquered chiefs.

"Feel My Soul Fleeing"

Cincinnati, Oct. 17.—With the hand of death upon him, Dr. J. J. Blair, 61 years old, a wealthy manufacturer of medicines, described in writing his sensations. The poison that he swallowed, cyanide of potassium, was his undoing, however, and he probably did not record as much of the final passing as he planned.

"I feel the soul fleeing," were the last words he wrote. The pen with which he had been writing was still clutched in his fingers when his young wife reached the body.

The suicide was dramatic, and had evidently been planned for some time. Early in the afternoon Dr. Blair wrote a letter, which he asked his wife to mail for him. While she was gone he drank the poison, and then sat down to make notes on his death.

"I have just sent my wife out to mail a letter," he wrote. "She little thinks that when she returns I will be dead. I have taken cyanide of potassium and already feel myself going into a strange sphere. It is sublime. Five minutes have passed and I feel the soul fleeing."

Then followed a blur, showing that the aged physician had tried to write more, but the poison had taken effect. A few moments later he was found dead. Ill health furnished the motive for the suicide.

Dr. Blair chose the historical Stony Point, a tiny river peninsula in Riverside, a suburb of Cincinnati, as the scene of his spectacular, and dramatic suicide.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten crippled limbs or cure chronic cripples, nor turn logy blood back to flesh again. That is impossible—but I can now surely kill the pains and purge the system of curable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Berlin—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of rheumatism; but now, at last, I truthfully cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like gritties and pains, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as easily as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous waste products pass from the system, and the cause of rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no reason—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend our help.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

News Nuggets

An Irish maid in the service of a Washington family recently sought permission of her mistress to take an afternoon off for the purpose of consulting a dentist. Upon her return the mistress said: "Well, Rosalie, did you have the tooth filled?" "I did, mum." "And what did the dentist fill it with—gold or amalgam?" "I don't know just what it was, mum; but from the way I feel, I should think it was with thunder and lightning, mum."

Berlin, Oct. 17.—Emperor William has invented a new hub and brake for railroad trains and automobiles, which is described as offering the greatest possible guarantee against accident arising from the failure of the present brakes to operate.

The accident on the elevated railroad of Berlin revived the Emperor's interest in this branch of work, and he spent part of his recent holidays in the country in working out the present device. Experiments with it have not yet been completed.

Emperor William, who at one time was a pupil of Professor Slaby, will resume his studies in advanced technical science at the professor's laboratory after the end of the winter social season.

Ottawa, Oct. 17. — August last the story of the shooting of a whale at Grands Mechins, Quebec, by Mr. J. J. Collins, C. E., of Strathcona avenue, who was engaged there building a Government pier. The animal was 72 feet long, and was calculated to be worth $1,000. As a matter of fact, it went over that figure. Mr. Collins has returned home, and gives the chief products of the leviathan as 32 barrels of whale oil at $30 per barrel, two barrels of spermacetti at $150 a barrel, and 600 pounds of whalebone valued at $300, making a total of $1,060, to say nothing of the by-products.

Mr. Collins says he had been on the look-out for this animal during two summers he was working at Grands Mechins, and the shot that caused his death was indeed a fortunate one for the well-known engineer and contractor.

Shenandoah, Iowa, Oct. 19.— Esther Cook, a school girl, is dying and Harley Bright, her sweetheart, is dead as the result of a double tragedy in the home of Lebbus Bright last night, believed to have been either a deliberate attempt at suicide and murder or the result of a pact.

Late in the evening neighbors, hearing shots, rushed to the place and found the windows and doors barricaded. A door was broken down and the young persons were found lying on the floor. A small rifle lay on the floor near the boy, who died without regaining consciousness.

The girl, who is still unconscious, was soon to have appeared as a witness for the state in a charge against young Bright and his sister. They are accused of having enticed another girl away, and the presumption is that either he and Miss Cook had quarrelled over the case or had agreed to die together.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sent on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

Were Pleased with the Ozone Plant

Mr. T. F. Matthews of the Peterborough Water Commission, and Mr. Henderson, superintendent of the works, were in Lindsay yesterday and visited the ozone purification plant which is being installed. The water was turned on and the filter and sterilizer worked to perfection. The Peterborough representatives were greatly pleased with the showing made, and will report to the Board of Commissioners on their return.

In all probability the water will be running through the new filter some time next week.—Free Press.

Reconstruction of G.T.R. Time Table

A reconstruction has been made in the arrangement of the complete time tables issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System which will be appreciated by the travelling public. Where tables are shown of the condensed time of trains between the several points where through equipment is run, this equipment is shown directly opposite the time table giving passengers the information they desire in the easiest possible way and without turning to other pages to find what equipment is on several trains shown. To make railway time tables plain to the travelling public is a problem, with the railways but this new, innovation has overcome a considerable amount of trouble which has been experienced in the past, in knowing what equipment could be found on through trains.

Rally in Conservative Club Rooms Saturday Night

The final Saturday night rally in the Conservative Club rooms in the interests of Mr. J. H. Burnham, was held on Saturday night, and was marked by a very large and enthusiastic crowd of workers. Mr. Burnham was the first speaker, and in opening he stated that he had been informed on good authority that the local Grits had circulated a report that Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, of Winnipeg, formerly one of the most prominent Conservative workers in Peterborough, was supporting Mr. Stratton's candidature. Mr. Burnham in order to prove that report to be false, read the following telegram received that evening from from Mr. Dennistoun;—

Winnipeg, Oct. 17, '08.

J. H. Burnham,

Peterborough,—

Hear Stratton claims my support Deny it publically. I urge all my friends to support you.

R. M. DENNISTOUN.

The reading of the message brought forth a round of enthusiastic applause. The Conservative candidate occupied the rest of the time he took up in relating his experiences of the past week which had been most pleasant and encouraging. He urged all his supporters to work hard for the next week and to watch the enemy closely. He closed by stating that his honest and positive belief was that he would be elected and that Hon. Mr. Borden, would have a big majority in the Dominion.

Mr. Garvin, one of the leading Conservative workers in this riding arrived in the city Saturday night, and was present at the meeting. He was warmly received when he was introduced and stated that he intended being in the riding for the balance of the campaign to do all he possibly could for the return of Mr. J. H. Burnham. In referring to the timber grafts he stated that he was well acquainted with Mr. Fraser of Ottawa, who has been so prominently before the public. Mr. Fraser is an able lawyer, and Mr. Garvin does not think for one minute that Fraser made any profit out of the timber deals, but that Mr. Sifton's friends and grafters were the ones who got the money. Mr. Garvin took up the matter of graft at Ottawa, and stated that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not the man of honor and sincerity that he is supposed to be. He knew of all cases that graft was practiced, and he upheld his colleagues in preventing the opposition investigating the various charges.

Other speakers were Messrs. Jas Kendry, T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., Willam of Monqreal, and others.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Thousands feel just the same,—feel the enervating influence of spring, whether that brings out latent symptoms of, disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flannigan of Bedeau Junction — here is her experience.

"I will never again suffer the tortures of deadening spring illness — never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I tried through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, Bathem,—Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite —I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic, blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Women who are continually pale, tired and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, nothing sweeter, hearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that surely need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c at all dealers.

Park St. Baptist Church Corner Stone Laid by Mr. Stratton on Saturday

One of the great events in the history of Park street Baptist church took place Saturday afternoon when the corner stone of the new place of worship was well and truly laid by Mr. J. R. Stratton. Since Park street Baptist church was organized, it has enjoyed a steady and continued growth, and it is the earnest wish of all that it will continue to prosper as it has in the past. The ceremony on Saturday afternoon was a very interesting one and was witnessed by quite a number the members of the congregation and friends.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford the past, had charge of the services, and after the devotional exercises he called upon Mr. Stratton to lay the stone. The silver trowel was presented to him by a little boy, and after the stone was laid he was presented with a bouquet by a little girl. Mr. Stratton delivered a short appropriate address, in which he expressed his pleasure at being present, and in seeing the city increasing, not only materially, but spiritually. Other speakers,—Rev. Mr. Webb, of Murray street Baptist; Rev. Mr. Kath and Rev. Mr. Potter of the Presbyterian church; Rev. Mr. Pearson and Rev. Mr. Manning of Pearson and Rev. Mr. Manning of the Methodist church, Rev. Mr. Jones of the Lakefield Baptist church, and Mr. Howard of the Lakefield Baptist church.

During the afternoon a collection was taken up which amounted to over $400, a very gratifying contribution.

While the new church is being erected the congregation is holding service in the old building which has been moved across the road.

HISTORY OF PARK ST. CHURCH

The building of the new church marks a rapid advancement in the history of the congregation. The present building was erected in 1865 when the membership only numbered thirty-five, to which now is 179. This is an evidence of the steady increase which has taken place each year, and of the growing population of this city.

The Murray street Baptist church was built in 1841. This congregation grew to such an extent that it was decided to open a Sunday school in the south end. One was started on Dalhousie street in 1888. Then seven years later the present church was opened when members of Murray St. congregation residing in the south part of the town to the number of thirty-five. From the very first, the congregation has been self-supporting and never yet have they had to receive assistance from a mission board. The new building will cost seven thousand dollars and this money has been mostly raised by the congregation and by a canvas of the friends of the church.

The first pastor of Park street was Rev. O. C. Elliott, who was succeeded by Rev. A. H. Brace, who left here last summer for Cobourg. Through Mr. Brace's untiring efforts the new church was started and since the arrival of Rev. Mr. Riddiford, the present pastor, the work has gone ahead rapidly until Saturday the corner stone was laid. It is expected that the new edifice will be ready by January next.

THE NEW BUILDING.

The new building is to be of red brick and will be 72x44 feet. It will have a basement 9ft. 6in. in height, and an octagon tower will give a finished appearance to the structure. The main auditorium will seat 450 people. The basement will have four class rooms and a kitchen. It will accommodate about 250 sunday school children. The church will be heated throughout by a furnace. It is situated on the corner of Park and Stewart streets and will have on Park street. It will be an imposing edifice when completed and will be a credit to Peterborough's already large number of beautiful churches.

Moslem Visitor Tells of Great Secret Cult

Montreal, Oct. 19.—A Musselman, in a flowing blue gown and a dark crimson fez with a long black tassel, caused considerable interest around the lobby of the Windsor Hotel this morning. His name is Aba-el-Kadr, and he is travelling with Mr. James de Conlay, who is himself a traveller and explorer with a large amount of experience.

Mr. de Conlay has recently been travelling in the Great Desert of Africa, and has come into close contact with the Snussi, a secret order of Moslems. This order is one of very far-reaching influence, and at present has the object in view of calling back the Arabs to the desert.

Situated in the Libyan desert, 500 miles south of the Mediterranean, and 300 miles west of the Nile, is the capital of this vast religious and patriotic movement, which is feared by the British and French, as its strength is estimated to control 45,000,000 of people.

No infidel has ever seen the Prophet, who is leading the cult, but during the last twenty-five years a dozen persons have tried, but without success—as they were either dispersed or massacred.

At Siwa the Snussi country begins, where everyone not of the cult is turned back. Individual attempts to reach the base of the organization are impossible as the oases are 60 miles apart and their positions unknown.

The leader of the cult, who is said to bear the "mark of the prophet", as did Mohamed and Moses, is held in higher regard than the Sultan of Turkey, who is the Kalifa of the Church.

Jarabub, the old capital, was at one time the seat of the university established by the Snussi. This university was attended by over 3,000 students, but was removed to Kufra; over 300 camels were required to transport the library alone of the Snussi.

The prophet Snussi is very closely guarded, going about always veiled, and his face has been seen by less than a hundred of his closest followers.

Aba-el-Kadr speaks seven languages but writes only one and is glad once more, to be under the Union Jack, as his treatment in the United States was not enjoyable, for while there he was stoned by children on almost every occasion that he ventured out of doors.

Britain the Arbiter, Says Turkish Authority

Montreal, Oct. 19.—Colonel Bay Pasha, of the Turkish army at Constantinople, granted another interview to-day on the developments in the Near East crisis during the past few days. He made special comment on the possible results of Bulgaria's declaration of Independence, of a conference of the powers of Western Europe, and of a war, if it should prank out.

"Was Western Europe prepared for Bulgaria's declaration?" the Colonel was asked.

"There was not the slightest surprise at the proclamation, for the powers were well informed regarding developments in the Balkan peninsula. But I am greatly surprised to learn that the police of Sofia, Bulgaria, have ordered the Bulgarian newspapers not to publish any further news regarding the movements of the army."

"What is the significance of the proclamation?"

"This is a blow directed at the 'Young Turk' party in Turkey, and not calculated to disturb the peace of Europe."

"What would be the probable result of a conference of the Powers?"

The Colonel said: "I can't see any benefit to be derived from a conference, the result of such, a conference would be the granting of independence to Bulgaria and Roumelia, the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria and the union of Crete with Greece, and, perhaps the opening of the Dardenelles."

"What will be the profit to your country?" was asked.

"It will afford her an opportunity to get back as Austria for trying to crush the 'Young Turk' party. Bosnia and Transylvania will be given to the Roumanians, and Hungary will declare her independence, leaving Austria very small and crippled in her military forces."

Referring to the Berlin Treaty, Colonel Bay Pasha averred that the repudiation of that treaty would precipitate hostilities in Europe, embroiling every considerable Power. If the Berlin Treaty were ignored by the Powers Europe for years to come would be a volcano. The nations of Europe were very jealous of one another, and Lord Beaconsfield did much to do away with this jealousy by framing and having signed the Treaty of Berlin, which was virtually a marriage contract. Great Britain, he stated, was quite able to force the rest of Europe to observe the Berlin Treaty and avert trouble. The fate of Europe, especially of the Near East, was in the hands of Great Britain. Said the Colonel: "I hope the British people will not allow the Berlin Treaty to be repudiated, because it is not for the twentieth century to witness a disruption of the European Powers."

Colonel Pasha has little faith in the possible benefit accruing from a conference of the Powers. He said: "We all know very well that an international conference nowadays is nothing more or less than a diplomatic comedy."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

The Result of the Nominations in Ontario and Quebec

(Special to The Times)

Toronto, Oct. 19.—As a result of yesterday's nominations of candidates for election to the Dominion House of Commons, only two were elected by acclamation, viz.,—

W F McLean, Conservative, South York; and Hon. Rudolph Brodeur, Minister of Marine, Liberal, for Rouville, Qu.

Five Toronto Conservatives, two Liberals, and two Conservatives are opposed to each other.

In Frontenac, Dr. Edwards, Conservative candidate of the convention and Metzger Avery, Conservative member for the last house, were nominated.

Against Major Beatty, Conservative for London, there is J. W. McCandless, a Labor man. The Liberals after several attempts failed to get a man who would enter the field.

In Center York, Capt. John T. Wallace, son of the late Clark Wallace, will oppose Dr. P. D. McLean, Liberal, who defeated him in a by-election by a very small majority. The prospects are bright for a surprise on the 26th.

In South York, Armstrong, Conservative, is spoken of to give Hon. Mr. Aplesworth a big surprise.

It was expected that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would have no opposition in Quebec East, but an acclamation there would have seriously interfered with Sir Wilfrid's candidature in the Capital. As a part of the Liberal campaign, Ald. Fiset, a Liberal, and his $200 deposit appeared at the last minute. Election by acclamation in Quebec East, would have prevented Sir Wilfrid running in Ottawa, as the Dominion Act provides that member of Parliament can be elected to another seat. It is expected that before the end of the week Sir Wilfrid may be forced to state which constituency he will represent in case of his election in both.

In only one constituency in Ontario is there more than two candidates in the field, viz.;—Sam Landers the Independent Labor man. The Labor party has three candidates in the field; Landers in East Hamilton, O'Donohue in South Toronto, and McLandlass in London. The last named would not have entered the field had a Liberal been nominated.

Proceedings in connection with the nominations at Ottawa, reflected the keenest of the political feeling there. Thos. Birkett, the English speaking Conservative, found it very difficult at first to get a hearing. Dr. J. L. Chabot, the French speaking Conservative, spoke briefly in both languages and was given a good hearing. The trouble broke out again, however, when Hal McGiverin, Sir Wilfrid's running mate, arose to reply, and the storm did not abate until Hal promised to attend to the disturber outside after the meeting.

Although Sir Wilfrid failed to make any reference to the demands of the civic service employes for increased pay he had addressed a letter to McGiverin, assuring him that he approved of what he had said on the subject, who promised the civil service employes that after the new classification is completed, the members of the service who have not been benefitted will receive an increase as recommended by the commission to date from Sept. 1st last.

The nomination meetings were the liveliest ever held here. All the candidates indulged to a greater or lesser degree in personalities. At times the gathering became tumultuous, but the results brought no surprises. The candidates nominated were;—

North Toronto—Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Conservative, W. H. Shaw, Liberal.

Center Toronto—Edward Bristol, Conservative, T. C. Robinette, Liberal.

West Toronto—E. H. Oster, Conservative; J. H. Duthie, Independent.

South Toronto—A. Claude Macdonald, Conservative; J. J. O'Donohue, Labor.

East Toronto—A. E. Kemp, Conservative; James Russell, Independent Conservative.

Nominations were Quiet in West Peterborough

Nominations for the House of Commons took place at the office of Sheriff Hall at twelve o'clock yesterday. The proceedings were of a formal nature. Mr. John Hampden Burnham, editor, was placed in nomination by the Conservatives, and Mr. James Robert Stratton, publisher, by the Liberals. The nomination papers and a deposit of $200 were handed in by the two candidates.

Great Meeting of Lady Temperance Workers

There was a large gathering of the W.C.T.U. members at the Y.M.C.A. parlors yesterday afternoon a great Mass Owen Hitchcock of Toronto. The chair was taken by Mrs. J. G. Potter in the absence of the president. After the devotional exercises the afternoon was given up to the speaker of the day. Mrs. Hitchcock portrayed the home life where parents took liquor, and when so often young men first learned the taste of liquor there and afterwards fell in with associations which led them to the drunkards' grave. She urged the ladies to do their utmost to overcome the liquor traffic.

Steroptican Views on the Life of Christ

A large number gathered at St. Andrew's school room last night, to see the steroptican views of the Life of Christ, which were shown by Mr. W. E. Dwyer of Toronto, who is the Canadian manager and lecturer for the world's famous Tiscott society. The entertainment was under the auspices of the Young People's society and it was most successful. The views included many from the Old Testimony as well as those beautiful pictures of Christ. The chair was taken by Rev. J. G. Potter and Rev. Mr. Riddiford of Park street Baptist church, led in prayer.

A Wise Mother's Story

Let all Mothers and Daughter Read Carefully and Profit By It.

"I am convinced," writes Mrs. A. B. Hereford from St. John, "that a majority of young girls who die of consumption do so because their mothers neglected their health at the critical time when a carefulness insures vigor and sound health, if a girl's health is neglected from her eleventh to sixteenth year her body will be weak and she becomes a ready victim of typhoid anaemia. And in many cases consumption itself. In my sixteenth year my youngest daughter showed signs of failing strength. Some dyspeptic troubles developed, her heart became weak and palpitation frightened her dreadfully. She was irregular in the important bodily functions and rapid loss in a weight and a ruddy complexion pointed to a rapid decline.

She disliked making her troubles known to our doctor, a feeling I felt I should respect, and so by good fortune I was led to use Ferrozone with most gratifying results. My neighbor next door, Mrs. Woods, had found Ferrozone so good in nervousness that she persuaded me that it would restore Flossie's health, and from the time the second box was commenced her improvement was constant. She is now a big, strong girl, ruddy and plump, able to study hard and to take her share of household duties. I am an earnest advocate of Ferrozone. We all use it now as a tonic as it is certainly woman's best friend."

All dealers sell Ferrozone, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50; procure a supply today.

Convention of Epworth Leagues Yesterday

The annual convention of the Epworth Leagues of this district was held yesterday in Charlotte street Methodist church, where the usual business was transacted, and the program arranged before hand was carried out. There were three sessions, in the morning, afternoon and evening, and all were very largely attended. Great interest was taken in the work and all the reports were favorable and showed advancement. The speakers in the evening were Rev. Mr. Rogers of Millbrook and Rev. Keith of Knox Presbyterian church. The chair was taken by Rev. Henderson of Charlotte street church.

Council Not Able to Talk of Monument

A special meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was held last night for the purpose of hearing a deputation and of taking up one or two other matters. Those present were Mayor Rush, Ald. Neill, McIntyre, Tovey, Butler, Johnston, Gillespie, Elliott, Bradburn and Morgan.

The latter went to the council to Miss Wallace in reference to erecting a monument to the memory of the late Mrs. Nicholls, was taken up by the committee and was thoroughly discussed. Miss Wallace's suggestion as that the council give her an order to construct the monument. The figure is life size or a little larger.

Miss Wallace is one of the best known sculpturesses in the Dominion, and being a native of the city the local people are very proud of her success. The mayor and council were all favorably impressed with the scheme suggested by Miss Wallace, and would be very glad to give her the order.

At the present time, however, the council is unable to give any definite answer to the letter as there is another matter, viz., that of the public library, which must be settled first. It is understood that Mr. R. Hall and Ald. Bradburn will this week make a trip to one or two cities where there are new public libraries for the purpose of getting ideas and to try and come to some decision as to what will be done in regards to a library here. As soon as the library question is settled one way or the other the monument matter must be left in abeyance.

Mrs. Haines Accuses Brother of Capt. Haines of Causing the Trouble

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Haines affidavit in reply to her husband's application for a divorce was made public today. In it she declares that when Capt. Haines returned from San Francisco to Fort Hancock on Sandy Hook, May 29th, he accused her of being intimate with Wm. E. Annis, basing his allegations on a letter he said he had received from his brother, T. Jenkins Haines.

Mrs. Haines denied the accusation, and at her suggestion the captain invited Annis to their home. After which they all went to Coney Island in Mr. Annis' automobile. On the following day Mrs. Haines said her husband went to call on his father, Gen. P. C. Haines. He returned at two a.m. on June 1st. He pulled him out of bed and accused her of having had relations with Annis and threatened to shoot her. General Haines called that day and when he learned of the captain's accusation said he would shoot Annis on sight.

Later Capt. Haines' brother called, and at his solicitation she took a glass of whisky. Then her husband ordered her to sign a paper which was not read to her. Thus she believes was the confession they say she made. That night a surgeon called to treat her for a mark over her eye which she said she got from the captain. Early next morning the captain appeared with a pistol and drove them all out. My husband told me, she said, that I would have to get out of the house and that if my mother would not take me in I could go and live with Annis. As my husband dropped his pistol to the floor, his brother said, "We will save that for the other party." I believe my husband's action and charges against me are prompted by T. Jenkins Haines who threatened to injure me for refusing his advances. He endeavored to make advances to me on several occasions, even going so far as to enter my room, and I repulsed him. He swore he would have revenge.

By "FOOTLIGHTS."

Glau and his crew right chorus from the "A replica" company have returned to New York in what may be described as greatly reduced circumstances. Not as to finances, for it the Rand, not yet in numbers, slim, but in avoirdupois—that is to say, upon flesh. The latter thing has lost out in this respect, much to its advantage.

It is no the people out west will support slim ballerinas, and as Glau and our famous "balloon chorus" carried, so to speak, no weight with them. They treated that prima donna collection of fat New York beauties with an unprecedented coldness. Consequently, Glau faced the problem of reducing the entire front and rear rows at once, or shipping them back—"excess" baggage. It was a terrific job, as all who saw the "A replica" before it left this tolerant town will admit, but our ingenious townsman tackled it and succeeded—broke all records, in fact. And thereby hangs a tale worthy of any fat lady's attention.

Glau didn't rehearse his flock into shape, nor starve them into despair yet worry them verbally, into shadows. He paid salary, regularly and let them eat and drink as they listed. He simply hung up a new rule in the dressing rooms to the effect that every lady five and five foot seven who weighed in excess of 150 pounds must take a teaspoonful of cod liver oil at breakfast, dinner and supper, and at bedtime. Go about whatever else routine might do, of the following, Queen Helene Mulinalia, 3-4 ounce fluid extract Cascara Aromatic, and 4-4 ounce Peppermint Water.

They did it and in a month averaged a loss of a pound apiece. "That's a dandy receipt," says Glau "Simple, pleasant, harmless and a worker from the word "go." With it could easily reduce fat reduce half as good."

HOPE FOR WOMEN WHO WANT TO VOTE

"As well may a man stop half way down Niagara as expect to go on withholding political equality from woman."

Thus words from Rev George Jackson last night made the men of Sherbourne street church sit up and take notice. The sermon, based upon the war song of Deborah, recorded in the fifth chapter of Judges, was announced as a special one to women, but the pastor took occasion to administer some sharp reproofs to the men who look askance at the movements of this age for the enlarging of women's sphere.

"This story of Deborah," proceeded Mr. Jackson, "must be particularly inconvenient reading for those men who believe that the moment woman steps outside the four walls of her home she is a trespasser, a trespasser, forsooth, upon man's peculiar domain. Knox, for instance, gallantly declared that to put the crown upon the head of Mary, a woman, was as unseemly as to put a sandal on the back of an unruly cow;

THE DAY NEAR AT HAND!

"You all know that woman's political enfranchisement is at present being hotly contested in Great Britain. Not alone in Great Britain, but in other parts of the world, it is my honest conviction that the day is near at hand when political inabilities grounded wholly on differences of sex will be a thing of the past."

"Why should women be discriminated against?" asked the preacher. "Our boys and girls receive the same education at school; the young men and women in the colleges sit at the feet of the same professors; women sit with men on hospital boards, and assume other responsible positions in the great world outside the home. As well may a man stop half way down Niagara as expect to go on withholding political equality from woman."

Mr. Jackson paused. "Perhaps I should not have said this much. Perhaps you think this not the place to declare such sentiments. But my aim is to awaken you women to a serious mindedness, to a quickened sense of responsibility. Women's political enfranchisement is coming. It is nearer than you may think. What are you mothers doing to prepare yourselves and daughters for the coming responsibility?

"'Ye kine of Bashan' are the words which the prophet Amos hurled in the face of the fine ladies of Samaria for their moral thoughtlessness, their cruel unconcern. Unless I am entirely mistaken, God's quarrel with the woman of this generation, too, is their petty frivolity.

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

"If I had the ear of the women of Toronto, which I have not, I would tell the ladies of Rosedale and other well-to-do quarters: "Curtail if you can't cut off; curtail your nightly balls, your whist and bridge parties, and the ceaseless whirl of hollow social gaieties, where, because there is no love, there is no gladness. Begin to read. Prepare yourselves for the work to which God is always calling you.

"Queens you must always be. There is no putting aside that crown. There are social evils rampant in our country, evils, which we cannot speak of here; they make us giddy to think of. You women of Toronto must save us from their awful woe. There is not a young girl in all this crowd into whose hands God has not put the making or unmaking of some man's life. There are, as has been said, two rocks at which men must harbor or shipwreck—God and woman. You women may provide a shelter for a worthy man's life or else a grave where some good name will be forever buried."

WILL BRING DOWN 50,000,000 BUS: OF WHEAT THIS FALL

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—For the first half of this month 7,000,000 bushels of wheat have been received for inspection. The total quantity since September 1st was 17,500,000, which is more than one-sixth of the whole estimated crop for western Canada. If navigation remains open as long as it did last year 50,000,000 bushels will reach the lake this fall.

Bush Fires Threaten a Small Village

(Special to The Times.)

Bowmanville, Oct. 19.—A bush fire which has been smouldering near here for the past month burst into flames yesterday, and spread rapidly to the village, destroying several houses on the outskirts before it was checked. Later on today the village again was in jeopardy, and every available man is working to extinguish the flames.

One Man Killed, Three Injured

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 19.—A brick arch supporting a big water tank in the Harris abbatoir, collapsed this afternoon and killed one man and injured three others. The arch was fifteen feet long and eleven feet wide, and had just been completed. The men were removing the false work from underneath when it gave away. Fully twenty-five tons is given as the cause.

Fire Destroyed Barns and Live Stock

(Special to The Times.)

Woodstock, Oct. 19.—James Purtell, farmer, near Hawtry in South Norwich, suffered heavily from fire early this morning, losing his barns, all his crops and implements, as well as his horses and implements, as well as a thoroughbred Percheron stallion and forty hogs.

Bring Action for Slander

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 19.—As a result of the Frontenac speeches at Cataraky today, Dr. J. W. Edwards will bring action for slander against Metzger Avery, member of the last parliament, for statements he made concerning Dr. Edwards' stand in the election of 1901. There was a lively time at the meeting. Both candidates dealt chiefly in personalities.

Chemong in Great Danger of Fire

The bush fires on the Chemong reserve are causing a great deal of alarm to the people out there and it is feared that if they continue to rage as they did Sunday, the village will be swept away. Yesterday Mr. Dan Whetung, Jr., was in the city and stated that yesterday morning a strong northwest wind was blowing towards the village. The fires were burning fiercely and spreading at a rapid rate. Mr. Whetung's fence, for a quarter of a mile was burned down Sunday and the fire has swept through the lots of Mr. A. E. Kennedy and Mr. Trew.

The conflagration makes a grand illumination at night. The people are hoping that it will rain soon as the blaze is getting dangerously close to their dwellings.

Minister of Marine Has Resigned

(Special to The Times.)

Paris, France, Oct. 19.—M. Casson Thomson, Minister of Marine, has resigned office as a result of a vote taken in the Chamber of Deputies deploring the neglect of his department as indicated by the Sena disaster. Growing dissatisfaction with the methods employed in the Marine Department culminated in an argument in the chambers in which M. deLanessa led the attack. In a strong speech he stated that the long series of accidents in the navy was directly due to "Ministerian Anarchy," and culpable neglect of the Navy Department.

Will Not Buy Her Independence

Paris, Oct. 15. — A special despatch from Sofia to the Matin quotes the Premier as saying that Bulgaria would refuse to make pecuniary compensation in return for recognition of her independence.

"We have not proclaimed Bulgaria's independence," said the Premier, "in order to ransom her for a sum of money. If we must ransom Bulgaria again, we prefer that it be with our blood."

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 15.—The newspaper Devni Liet publishes what purports to be the text of a secret treaty between Bulgaria and Austria. There are three clauses in this treaty.

In the first Austria authorizes Prince Ferdinand to declare the independence of Bulgaria, and promises to maintain the Coburg dynasty in Bulgaria.

The second provides that if complications arise through the announcement of the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Prince Ferdinand will take the part of Austria.

The third sets forth that the Austria and Bulgaria governments will work in common accord in the affairs of the Balkan Peninsula.

NO ULTIMATUM.

Paris, Oct. 15.—M. Stancieff, the diplomatic agent of Bulgaria in Paris, is in receipt of official advices from Sofia, which deny the alarmist rumor current here yesterday of Bularia's purposes.

Bulgaria has no intention of sending an ultimatum to Turkey, or of ordering mobilization of her forces. On the contrary the outlook for a peaceful adjustment with Turkey and the powers is now regarded in Sofia as practically assured through the International Conference. M. Stancieff said he did not give credence to the bellicose language attributed to the Bulgarian Premier, and explained that Bulgaria was ready to make whatever money compensation was proper on account of the Oriental Railroad and Eastern Rumelia. He characterized as absurd the report from Belgrade of a secret treaty between Bulgaria and Austria-Hungaria.

Continuing the conversation M. Stancieff expressed surprise that the United States had not yet recognized the independence of Bulgaria.

Thank Offering

The annual thankoffering of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of St. Andrew's church, will be held this afternoon, when Rev. Canon Davidson will give an address on the women's work. A large attendance is requested as it is open to the public.

New York, Oct. 20.—A few years ago the Broadway Building Company purchased a plot of ground at the southeast corner of Broadway and Maiden Lane, 75 by 113 feet, for $1,250,000. The building involved another outlay of $1,000,000. This week they sold the property for $6,000,000.

Daily Mishaps

MAKE ZAM-BUK A DAILY NEED.

Scarcely a day passes without some member of the family getting hurt. Maybe the breadwinner's work makes him peculiarly liable to cuts or lacerations; the boisterous youngsters are always running in to mother with bumps and bruises; and housework abounds with painful knocks, burns, scalds, and sprains for the fair sex.

Promptly dressing an injury with Zam-Buk means speedy relief from smarting pain. That's why the children like it. But it means much more—that your hurt will heal up quickly and perfectly, without festering, without gathering, and without harbouring disease germs. That's why the "grown ups" like it.

Mrs. Sears, of L'Original (Que.) says:—"Five doctors and treatment in three hospitals failed to cure me of chronic ulcers and sores. They were so bad I could only walk by aid of a crutch and a stick. Zam-Buk has cured me! and I have put my crutch away. I am 75 years old and in all my life never met with anything to equal Zam-Buk." All druggists and stores sell at 50c., a box or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25. Cures cuts, burns, bruises, piles, eczema and skin injuries and blemishes.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sent on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted, and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

WEST PETERBORO ELECTION

The present week will close the election campaign which has for some time past been waged with such vigor between the opposing political forces throughout the Dominion, and on Monday evening next the result of the issue in West Peterborough, as elsewhere, will be known.

The Times, as has always been its course, has neither prejudice nor favor, for one party or the other. What most concerns this journal is the progress of the county and the building up of the manufacturing industries of the City of Peterborough, which have so splendidly advanced, and have been of so great advantage to the welfare of every citizen in this community during the past decade.

These material advantages, of which we have had the benefit during several years past, appeal more strongly to the average citizen of Peterborough who is not influenced by prejudice, than any call of any political party. For these things concern the individual welfare of every citizen.

As between the contending parties and opposing candidates The Times has no choice on the one hand, or predelection on the other. But first, and before all, it is concerned in the progress of Peterborough city in prosperity and in the development of the industrial interests which no citizen of Peterborough can deny have been the means of great benefit to all of us.

Surveying the whole ground of contention, the charges that have been made on either side against the other, that to our mind, in either case have little foundation, we are of the opinion that there can be very little doubt that the Laurier administration will be sustained in this election—perhaps by a reduced majority, but it is still to be borne in mind that the present government will probably remain in control of our public affairs for the next five years at least.

Now, then, where do the interests of Peterborough lie?

Looking candidly, and with impartiality over the field, we must concede in agreement with the Montreal Star, that there can be little doubt of the return of the Laurier administration perhaps by a smaller majority, but still by a support which will continue the control of the national affairs in his hands for the next five years.

It is but fair to acknowledge that, during the past twelve years, and more, especially during the past four years in which Mr. Hall has represented us well, that this county and this city have been given a greater consideration in the expenditure of public money than they have ever received before, of which we have the substantial evidences that need no recounting.

And it must be evident to the dullest mind that those benefits which we have been receiving are not likely to be increased by our sending a representative to Ottawa in opposition to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and who could make no claim upon his sympathy.

The question then is, how is the best interests of every man in Peterborough to be best advanced in the present situation?

While we have due respect to Mr. Burnham as a citizen, and have no doubt of the sincerity of his desire to serve the public, we are compelled to conclude, without disparagement to him, and recognizing that his time may and no doubt will come in the near future, that all the interests of the city and county, of Peterborough at the present juncture call for the election of Hon. Mr. Stratton.

Without regarding politics or personal prejudices, no good citizen of this city to-day will dispute that we have never had in this community a more whole-souled, public-spirited man among us, and it would be idle for his most bitter opponent to deny, that by his energetic methods, his loyalty to our county, and that magnetic personal influence with which he is gifted, he has been able to accomplish material ends for all our welfare, for which no fair-minded man will deny him credit, and which will largely influence the minds of the people of Peterborough in the present contest. It would be a poor mind indeed that was not able to recognize the advantage to such a community as ours, whose whole fortune is bound up with the development of our manufacturing industries, the advantage of having at Ottawa a representative who held the favourable ear of the government, and who has the experience in public life and in business matters; the large capacity to grasp great affairs, and what more than all we should consider a proved fidelity to the fortunes of of this city and county.

We have been approached by mail and in personal intercourse by many of our friends, who feel, as we do, that we are not greatly concerned by any magic of an old-time party name, who ask our advice in the present situation. We give it freely and without any disparagement of the Conservative candidate that the welfare of every man who has a dollar at stake in this city and county, can best be served by the election of Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Perhaps this advice is perfunctory, but at least it is sincere. For we believe the electors of Peterborough, without regard to politics will endorse the view which we here present, as we believe it to be our duty to the interests of the community.

AUSTRIA'S PERFIDY

The unreliability of Austria in a compact with nations is proven in its unwarranted seizure of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The aged Kaiser had given his word that he would abide by the treaty of Berlin, to which Austria was a signatory party and which stipulated that the relations of the Balkan states should be maintained until those same powers acting in concert saw fit to change them. As soon as Bulgaria pulled away from Turkey the southern Kaiser proceeded to absorb Bosnia and Herzegovina without asking the permission of the signers of the Berlin treaty. Not the slightest attention was paid to the international agreement. The Austrian sovereign wanted the territory upon which he had long set his heart and the crumbling of Turkey gave him the chance. He was not particular about his written promise when the gobbling up of neighboring states hung in the balance.

Forty years ago this greed would have precipitated a war which would have involved the greater part of Europe. But the overthrowl of the Napoleonic dynasty by Germany, the disastrous campaign of England in South Africa, the thrashing the Japanese gave the Russians and the enormous increase in the cost of carrying on war at the present time, have led monarchs to go slow and to exhaust every honourable means to prevent a clash of arms before giving consent to a conflict.

The states outraged by Austria's course are helpless against the might of a nation several times greater than their combined strength. A war would only lead to further misery and their undoing. Therefore it will not come. The patching up of another understanding will be left to the great powers. Whether Austria will be included in this remains to be seen. A country which lays such little stress on honor should be ignored by the nations whose bond is sacredly lived up to.

Reconstruction of G.T.R. Time Table

A reconstruction has been made in the arrangement of the complete time tables issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System which will be appreciated by the travelling public. Where tables are shown of the condensed time of trains between the several points where through equipment is run, this equipment is shown directly opposite the time table giving passengers the information they desire in the easiest possible way and without turning to other pages to find what equipment is on several trains shown. To make railway time tables plain to the travelling public is a problem, with the railway but this new, innovation has overcome a considerable amount of trouble which has been experienced in the past in knowing what equipment could be found on through trains.

Literary Debate

A literary debate will be presented to you for your approval next Friday night, at eight o'clock, by the "Judson" Bible class, in the school room of the George street Methodist church. Mr. R. J. DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent, at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big money-lender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the abject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Benafort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the G.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Canoe Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influences, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world affiliations and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 54 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 169 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 28 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,768, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the lakes and northern waters.

Thus, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent rates, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $50,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and insteady of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, bring the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid ransport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the construction and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

A war priest, whose string of bears' claws, triple feathers, charms and bag plainly betokened the medicine man, headed the tribe. He was seated upon a gaudily decorated saddle. The nose band, front and cheek pieces of his horse's bridle were thickly studded with brass nails. Bright pompoms of colored wool swung from the curb and the throatlatch, and the nag's tail was stiffly braided with strips of woolen, scarlet and yellow and blue. Close beside him rode two stately braves of high rank, their mounts as richly caparisoned, their buckskin shirts gorgeous with bead and porcupine quill embroidery, otter skin headdresses upon their hair. Like their leader, the dusky faces of the two Indians and of those forming the rest of the party were hideously painted, showing that all had but recently been upon the warpath.

The other half of the redskin company was more squalid. A score of spotted, sway backed ponies crept along, bearing and at the same time dragging heavy loads. Each saddle held a squaw and one or more small children, the squaw with a cocoon-like papoose strapped to her back, and at the tail of each horse, surrounded by limping Indian dogs, came a travee laden with a wounded or aged Indian or heaped with cooking utensils, blankets and buffalo skins.

One woman of all the squaws rode a pony that had not a double burden. She was dressed in buckskin and bright calico and sat upon a blanket that almost covered her horse. Her hair was braided neatly; her dark cheeks were daubed with carmine. She kept a rigid seat as she passed Dallas, and her black eyes answered the other's kindly look with one full of sullen pride. Beside her bobbled an aged hag across whose wrinkled mouth and chin was a deep and livid scar.

When the Indians were past more troopers followed. After them trundled a half dozen light fieldpieces, the wagon train and ambulances filled with sick or wounded soldiers, all under the conduct of a rear guard. Soon the entire cavalcade was gone and had halted on the river bank to wait the ferry. Dallas was alone again, listening to the faint strains of the band, which from the cut was gallantly announcing the return from the long campaign.

At the door of the shack Lancaster and his younger daughter were watching the portage piecemeal of the troops. But Dallas, starting the team again, saw father and sister suddenly turn from the landing to look and point toward the coulee. Glancing that way, too, she saw the object of their interest. Over the brink into sight was toiling a strange figure bent and almost bidden under an unwieldy load.

She moved aside in some trepidation to await the creature's advance. Upon its back as it tottered along was a score of pots and pans tied together and topped by a sack of buffalo chips that at each step rolled first to one hand and then to the other. Yet with all the difficulty of balancing the fuel sack and preventing its falling to the ground the straggler did not fall to keep in place a drab face covering.

The mules stood perfectly quiet until the figure was near; then they became uneasy for the second time and shied back upon the plow, tangling their harness.

The effect of this was startling. The sack of chips came tumbling off the pots and pans, spilling upon the roadway. The tin things followed, with a crash, and, with a grunt, the bent figure retreated a few steps and uncovered its face.

In very amazement Dallas let go the mules. The creature facing her was young and pitifully thin. About a face dripping with perspiration fell a mop of tangled hair. Under a tattered mourning blanket a bulging calico waist disclosed, through many rents, a lean and bony chest, and below the leather strap that belted both the somber blanket and the waist hung limply the shreds of a fringed buckskin petticoat. The straggler was an Indian—a male—yet, despite his sex, he wore not a brave's dress, but the filthy, degrading garb of a squaw!

He watched Dallas with cowed, questioning eyes, strangely soft and un Indian in their expression. After a moment, seeing that he was ill as well as destitute, she turned to rest afraid of him.

"How," she said in greeting.

He made no reply, only continued to watch her steadily.

"How," she repeated and smiled. His eyes instantly brightened.

"You sick?" she asked, moving her head sorrowfully in pantomime.

For answer he shambled closer and held up first one naked foot and then the other, like a suffering hound. Dallas saw that they were sore from stone bruises and bleeding from cactus wounds.

"Oh, you're hurt!" she cried.

The Indian nodded and at once made her a dumb appeal. Lowering himself slowly until he was seated upon the dead grass before her, he pointed eloquently into his wide open mouth.

Dallas understood. "Hungry," she said.

He nodded again.

She had never heard a scoffing white declare that the red man is above all a beggar, so she did not delay answering his mute petition. She stooped to examine again the cuts and bruises on his feet. Then, "Wait till I come back," she bade him, and his vigorous nod assured her that he understood what she said. She hurried away to the shack.

She tarried only long enough to tell her father of the straggler and to hear his objections at her "fussin'" with a "no 'count Injun." Returning, she found her charge patiently waiting for her. As she came up he was facing the ford, where, amid cursing, shouting and trumpet blares, some troopers were trying to induce the balky ambulance mules to go aboard the boat. But when she handed him a crockery plate heaped with boiled potatoes, cold meat and pancakes and a piece of suet wound in a soft white cloth he became indifferent to the lively doings at the landing and began to eat as if famished.

He made such rapid headway that before Dallas realized it the food was gone, the plate scraped clean and the suet direly threatened. He gave her a puzzled look as she put forth a hand objectingly.

"No, no," she said, and while she tore the soft cloth into strips she put the fat out of reach by slipping it into a skirt pocket.

The bandages ready, she knelt before him and tenderly swathed his wounds.

"There," she said—as she finished, "now you'd better hurry. The soldiers are almost over, and you'll be too late to get across dry."

He scrambled up, but, ignoring her advice, put one hand through a rent in his squaw's waist and began to search for something. Presently he brought forth a necklace done up in

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a bidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is to be directed to these weak and wasting nerves, restore it builds strengthens: it offers real, genuine heart help.

Pittsburg, Oct. 15.—Gored and trampled by a ferocious bull which he had been feeding in the Herra Island stockyards, Joe. Peindel, aged fifty, of 116 Shoots street, Millvale, died in St. Francis' Hospital.

Durban, Natal, Oct. 15. — General Botha, speaking at the convention of South African representatives now looking to federation, made some witty references to Sir Percy Scott, who was present, remarking that, by bringing up his naval guns, Sir Percy had disappointed the young Boers' hopes of Panama-eating on the coast.

Tokio, Oct. 15.—The American battleship fleet under the command of Admiral Sperry, which left Wusihe for Yokohama, Oct. 10, was sighted manoeuvring to the south-east of Kinshiu, the southernmost of the three principal islands of Japan.

All Japan is astir in anticipation of the arrival of the American Atlantic fleet Yokohama and Tokio in particular are giving over to enthusiastic preparations. The decorations in these cities are so extensive and general as to be remarkable, not only in Japan, but in any country of the world that awaited a naval call by the fleet of another power.

All Japanese newspapers of prominence are printing editions in English, with lengthy editorials assuring the American officers and sailors of a hearty welcome by the nation.

Every available vessel in the harbor of Yokohama has been chartered to convey excursionists to meet the warships on their approach. A considerable fleet will venture far out at sea in order to extend the first welcome.

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients — Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, as generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the strongest endorsement from the leading medical writers and writers on Materia Medica who recommend them as the very best remedies for the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised.

A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompanied with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections which, if not promptly and properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption. (Copyright by Pierce.

Bowling Tonight

The second series of games in the ten pin tournament will be played tonight in the Peterborough Bowling alleys. There will no doubt be a big crowd present.

Are Rebuilding

The contractors started to work yesterday morning to remodel Mr. T. E. Elliott's store on George street. They are busy tearing down and putting up partitions and will require several weeks to complete their work. But when they have finished Mr. Elliott will have one of the finest stores in the city.

Observation Studies

The students at the Normal school have started their observation studies. Commencing today they will visit the class rooms in the North Ward and Central schools every other day and observe how the teaching is done. They will take notes on what they see and will continue their observation studies until Thanksgiving day. After that the students will take charge of classes in certain periods and receive practical experience in teaching.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McWilliams and son, Arnold, city; Mr. W. H. Nelson, Toronto, and Mr. Cecil Nelson of the Montreal Bank, Kingston, spent Sunday at Little Lake Farm, Smith, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Trude.

Mr. A. E. Tigler of Wycliffe College, who has during the summer holidays been in charge of a mission in Saskatchewan, spent the week end at his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Tyler, Westcott street. He will return to Toronto today to resume his studies at the University and Wycliffe College.

—The death occurred Monday night of Patrick Leo, the three months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. O'Connor, Smith street. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Catholic cemetery. The bereaved parents will have the sympathy of many friends.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective Cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

TRENT CANAL

Lindsay Section.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 16 o'clock on Tuesday, 17th November, 1908, for the works connected with the construction of the Lindsay Sections of the Canal.

Plans, specifications, and the form of the contract to be entered into, can be seen on and after the 16th October, 1908, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places forms of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labor, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000.00 must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JONES.
Secretary.

AGED MAN PERISHED IN FIRE WITH CHILD

Charles Jackson and His Little Granddaughter Burned to Death Near Uxbridge

Uxbridge, Oct. 20—Charles Jackson of Jackson's Hill, a mile and a half south of this place, was burned to death this evening, together with one of his little twin granddaughters. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, who are aged people, were alone except for the children. Mrs. Jackson escaped with the little girls, but one of them ran back into the burning building. She brought it out again willing to her husband to get up, this the old gentleman did, but his escape was apparently cut off, and one of the children also perished, despite their efforts.

Fire Chief Howard Paid Visit of Inspection to the City Public Schools

Fire Chief Howard invited his worship Mayor Rush, Ald. W. J. Johnston, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, Public school Inspector Mowatt, the chairman of the Board of Education, and the press, to accompany him on a tour of inspection of the Public schools. Mr. VanWinkle, electric wire inspector for the Canadian Underwriters Association, who arrived in the city on Monday night, was also asked to go along. The chief provided hacks for the party, and the outing was very much enjoyed as well as being somewhat of an educational nature.

The party left the fire hall soon after nine o'clock and went first to the Central school, whose the chief sounded the fire gong and that large school was emptied on the remarkably short time of forty seconds. The children have been well drilled in the fire drill and they turn out, not only promptly but very orderly, and all the spectators were agreeably surprised. After the fire drill and the children were called back into the school, Chief Howard made an inspection of the school to see that doors worked properly and that the necessary precautions were taken to prevent fire. Whenever he found any little defect he made a note of it and will report to the board requesting that repairs or alterations be made at once.

Mr. VanWinkle took advantage of the opportunity and inspected the electric wiring and noted all details.

The chief's party went from one school to another and put the children through the fire drill, and then went through the building. The children turned out in from thirty-eight to fifty-seven seconds, according to the size of the school, and all were well pleased with the results. So far as the buildings are concerned they are for the most part in good condition and only a few slight alterations will have to be made.

The schools visited were the Central public with the kindergarten addition, the Ashburnham, Queen Alexandria, Wm. Ward, South Central and King Edward.

There was one thing which struck the chief in particular and that was the scarcity of waste paper about the yards and basements. For this the janitors were complimented.

At the South Central school most of those in the party paid a visit to the kindergarten department which is in charge of Miss Davidson and Miss Rush. Here they saw the little tots go through some of their games and exercises and were much pleased.

While on the tour two fire alarms were sounded and once the chief had to leave and attend to his other duties. Fortunately, however, the fires were not serious.

By the time the King Edward school was visited it was noon and the chief will go to the Collegiate and the Normal alone on another day.

The News' Forecast of the Dominion Elections

The Toronto News gives the following forecast of the Dominion elections:

Sure Conservative	52
Probable Conservative	9
Total	61
Sure Liberal	9
Probable Liberal	3
Total	12
Doubtful	13

Dividing up the doubtful and allowing the Liberals the advantage on the ground that they held most of those seats before, the thirteen may be divided into five Conservative and eight Liberal.

The net result now stands:

Conservative	66
Liberal	80
Conservative majority	46

STANDING IN LAST PARLIAMENT

Conservative	47
Liberal	39
Conservative majority	8
Conservative gain in 1908	38

A review of the whole field in Ontario from independent sources convinces the News that Mr. R. L. Borden will sweep the Province to an extent almost equal to that of Sir James Whitney in June last, and that his majority will approach he hundred mark.

The temper of the people of the Province in the face of the appeal of the Laurier Administration for a further tenure of power is made clear from the fact that, of forty-seven seats held by the Conservatives in the last parliament, only two are now considered as "doubtful." In both cases there is no suggestion that the issues upon which Mr. Borden has forced the campaign have ailed to carry an appeal, but local questions have to a certain extent overbalanced the national.

ONLY NINE SAFE.

The Liberals face a condition that is vastly different. Out of thirty-nine seats held by them a few months ago, only nine are reasonably safe, though others will probably re-elect Liberals. Seven more are likely to return Conservatives, while nine are certain to choose supporters of Mr. Borden.

Among those who the Liberals themselves appear to have abandoned all hope are Simcoe, Parry Sound and Centre York. All these were Liberal in 1896.

Among others which turn-over to the Conservatives is assured so far as a general estimate of the situation shows are North Ontario, East Peterborough, West Hamilton, North Lanark, South Perth, South Oxford, North Grey, North East, one at least in Ottawa, South Renfrew, North Simcoe, East Algoma and several others.

Among others in serious doubt for the Liberals are West Lambton, Glengarry, North and West Middlesex, West Northumberland, North Oxford, Hastings, West Lambton, North York, South Bruce, West Peterborough and several more.

NUNAN IS STRONG.

One, at least, of the Ontario Ministers seems certain of defeat—the Minister of Customs, Hon. William Paterson, in Brant. Mr. Patrick Nunan has developed exceptional strength, and, living in Dumfries, one of Mr. Paterson's former strongholds, will cut it down to a small figure. Paris will give him a large majority.

In Russell, even with its 1,000 Liberal majority, Hon. Charles Murphy's defeat is looked for in many quarters, as he was forced upon an unwilling French-Canadian constituency. Even Hon. G. P. Graham, who is admitted to have acquired the art of popularity, is having a hard fight with Mr. John Webster, a well-known cheese buyer of the district.

In the erstwhile Liberal stronghold of South Oxford hardly anything can save Mr. S. Schell, ex-M.P., from defeat at the hands of Donald Sutherland.

The Speaker in the last House, Hon. R. F. Sutherland, faces defeat at North Essex at the hands of Mr. O. E. Fleming, K.C., of Windsor. Mr. Sutherland finds items if terribly weakened by his connections with American firms. The visit of Sir James Whitney to Windsor on Friday next should remove all doubt of the result.

In East Algoma, if he is allowed an honest list, Mr. W. R. Smyth, who resigned the local seat, will defeat Mr. A. E. Dyment by several hundred. In North Grey Mr. W. F. Telford, ex-M.P., was only 63 ahead in 1904, and will be defeated next Monday by a fair majority.

In Glengarry, with all its 450 majority in 1908, even the emergency visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on Oct. 21 can hardly overturn the 200 odd votes which a canvas shows the Conservative Highlander, J. F. McGregor, to be leading by at the present time.

North Lanark is a sure Conservative gain, with woollen mills standing idle in its towns.

Mr. Borden did not mistake the signs of the times when he gave three evenings to expounding the Conservative policy to the electors of Nipissing. The late member's defeat by several hundred is certain.

Parry Sound is another Northern seat that will elect a Conservative and defeat the late Liberal member by hundreds.

In Ottawa nothing that the Liberals can devise can prevent Dr. Chabot winning one of the Liberal seats, and it is well within the possibilities that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's choice of Quebec East will mean his rejection at Ottawa, and the election of Mr. Thomas Birkett.

Of the Peterboroughs, only the West is in doubt. In the East it was seen long ago that the late member was beaten and E. Tanner was substituted. But this will not avail. In the West even Liberals admit that with J. S. Stratton as a candidate the result is doubtful either way.

Special Meeting of the Peterboro Presbytery

A special meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough, was held at Campbellford yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering the call to Rev. A. C. Reeve, pastor of St. Andrew's church, Campbellford, to St. Paul's church, Bloorjaw.

Revs. H. J. Keith, J. G. Potter, Peterborough; Dr. Morson, Springville; J. G. Stirling, Havelock; E. Curry, Warsaw; C. S. Burns, Lakefield; and A. Mercalfe, Wankworth, and Percy Thompson, Colborne, were in attendance.

Rev. Mr. Keith presented the call and stated that a young congregation like St. Paul's, and which was rapidly growing appealed to a strong preacher like Rev. Mr. Reeves. Representatives of St. Andrew's church expressed their sincere regret, but as Mr. Reeves was anxious to go they acquiesced in the decision.

The call was placed in Rev. Mr. Reeves' hands and he accepted it, and it was sanctioned by the Presbytery to take effect on November 10th.

A committee of Rev. Keith, Potter and Thompson was appointed to draft a resolution expressing the Presbytery's views.

Kingston, N.Y., Oct. 20.—The Presbyterian Synod of New York and New England, was opened here tonight in Wells Street Presbyterian church, with 175 delegates present. The synod represents 900 churches, and 1200 ministers, and will continue in session until Thursday.

Veteran Druggist for Sheriff's Office

(Special to The Times.)

Windsor, Oct. 20.—J. E. Davignon, a veteran druggist of this city, has disposed of his business and will retire. Mr. F. B. Walsh of Strathroy, will take it over. Mr. Davignon's name is prominently mentioned in connection with the sheriff's office, as Mr. J. A. Ller desires to relinquish his duties on account of illness.

Sir Wilfrid Expects Majority from Ontario

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 20.—"Laurier the Uncrowned King," was the motto borne through the streets here tonight in what was arranged to be the crowning demonstration of the Liberal campaign. Weeks of hard work had been put in by the party workers and thousands of dollars were spent in flags and fire works. The streets were lined with people and those in the procession displayed lots of enthusiasm.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed two meetings, one at the Monument National and the other in Sohmer Park, and both were densely packed. Sir Wilfrid's speeches contained nothing new, except that he severely criticised judges receiving a pension, entering the political arena seeking election to the House of Commons. Sir Wilfrid also made a prediction that he would go back to Ottawa with a majority of 60. He said that he would get a majority in Nova Scotia, while he would hold all his present seats in New Brunswick. Most wonderful of all, however, was the premier's statement that he might get a majority from Ontario.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere, a clever candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the sneeze stage, to head off all colds. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

Hunted for Two Years and was then Caught

(Special to The Times.)

Swift Current, Oct. 20.—Gebo Lavalee, a notorious western desperado, who is wanted on a charge of cattle and horse stealing, both here and in Montana, was captured last night by Sergt. Cassidy in a half breed's shack near here. The police have been after him for two years.

Garden Hill Man for the Cobourg Asylum

(Special to The Times.)

Port Hope, Oct. 20.—A strong delegation, consisting of Col. Ward, M.P., J. J. Preston, M.P.P., C. J. Thornton, Conservative candidate for Durham, Mr. Devitt, M.P.P., D. Hillis, R. A. Mulholland, Major Winslow, Evan McLean and others are preparing to go to Toronto, to aid the local government in their effort to place the claims of Dr. Batty of Garden Hill, Durham county, before the Provincial officials, for the vacant superintendency of Cobourg asylum.

Counterfeiter Has Confessed

(Special to The Times.)

Windsor, Oct. 20.—Fred Dumochelle, proprietor of the Walkerville Hotel, who was arrested a week ago on a charge of being an accomplice of Fred Paquette, the counterfeiter, has confessed to the secret service agents in Detroit, and it is said he has implicated about a dozen other well known Walkerville people. Dumochelle was recently married, the ceremony taking place in jail. The wife is claimed to prevent the bride, an important prosecution witness, from testifying against her husband.

Steamer Osler was Badly Damaged

(Special to The Times.)

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 20.—After lightering about 1000 tons of coal the steamer Osler was released from Grand Island. Her bottom forward was considerably damaged, and the compartments were filled with water. There is no dry dock in Canada to accommodate her and she will have to be taken to our own docks on the other side of the Lake.

There will be no duty on the receiving clause provides for just such a case as this.

No Trace Yet of the Murderer

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 20.—Although a vigorous search has been made for two days by detectives for the man who killed Harold Patterson, and wounded young Webb near Longueville on Sunday, no trace has been secured. The police received a report that a young fellow was chased by an unknown on the railway yesterday between St. Lambert and Montreal south, but the man took to the woods when he saw some workmen on the track just around the curve.

Land Grants Ready for the Veterans

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 20—The Department of the Interior is ready to issue the warrants for land or cash script to the South African Veterans. This applies only to the 1000 veterans whose applications have been endorsed by the Militia Department.

King Edward is in Good Health

London, October 21.—King Edward has been very much annoyed recently over the Stock Exchange rumors as to the alleged serious condition of his health. As a matter of fact, His Majesty is in better health now than he has been for three years. He watches the Stock Exchange closely. He was in very interested in South Africans, and showed much pleasure recently to the little room in their stocks which emanated from Paris. King Edward was correspondingly annoyed that the rumors in regard to his health had been used in addition to the war scare for the purpose of sending down prices. The king, who is always a good customer of his doctors in the matter of taking exercise, is now benefiting from playing billiards every night.

Bride Kept Her Word and Shot Herself

Shreveport, La., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Bonnie Mattlock, seventeen years old, a bride of a few months and a Baptist disagreed with her husband, a Methodist, as to which church they would attend, and shot herself dead to-day. As Mattlock left home for the Methodist Church his wife called after him, saying:

"If you don't wait and take me to the Baptist Church you will regret it all your life."

Mattlock did not stop until he heard a shot. He returned and found his wife dead.

TWO PROMINENT MEN HUNGANDSHOT

(Special to The Times.)

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 20.—A message from Trenton, Tenn., says that Capt. Rankin, a prominent local lawyer, with Col. R. C. Taylor, were taken from Ports Hotel at Walnut Log on Upper Red Foot Lake last night, and were murdered. It is alleged by Night Raiders. Capt. Rankin and Colonel Taylor left Trenton several days ago to look after some land leases they were interested in. Their bodies were discovered this morning hanging from different trees. Both had been shot as well as hung.

GENERAL ELECTRIC ARE IN THE FINALS FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

The second stage of the bowling tournament was played in the Peterborough Bowling Academy last night when the General Electric five defeated Mellroy's quintette by 379 pins. This puts the General Electric in the finals with Munro's Colts who drew the bye, and the final game deciding the championship will be played off Thursday night.

THOUSANDS OF CHINESE DEAD

(Special to The Times.)

Amay, China, Oct. 20.—The damage in Thursday's typhoon was much greater than at first reported. Chang Chow 3000 houses including the Prefect Yamen were destroyed, and 1100 people were killed. In Lam Ching 600 houses were destroyed, and 1200 people were killed. Just five years ago Lam Ching was flooded and 8000 persons were drowned. Fifteen miles north of Chang Chow three villages were destroyed entirely and 400 persons were killed in Thursday's typhoon.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive our Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Sheep, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Sheep's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Ketchecum Lake Fishing Party Have Returned Weather Unusually Warm

The Ketchecum Lake Hunt Club returned from the wilds of the north country last night and they are all looking fine. They have a good tan on and their appetites are as gay-devils as young boys. Those who got home last night were Messrs R. G. Munro, A. E. Peck, J. of Lakefield and T. J. Lundy. They report the weather as ideal for camping, but was unusually warm, too warm in fact for good fishing, although they were successful in catching quite a number.

Mr. E. A. Peck stated to the Times that there are no bush fires in the immediate vicinity of Ketchecum lake, although big fires were reported from the north and east of the party, they did not see any and only got the smoke. The deer this year are very apt to be scarce on account of the large number of hunters who go in there and it is only a matter of a few years until there will be very little hunting in that neighborhood. There are lots of partridge there. The Ketchecum party saw lots of them but they refrained from shooting any. They observed the new to the letter. Mr. Peck stated that if the hunters will leave the birds alone for the next couple of years, as is required by law the partridge hunting will be great.

It might be a good idea also to protect the deer for a year or so as the slaughter keeps up as it has during the past few years the stock of big game will be badly crippled.

In going through the woods one day Mr. Peck ran across an old bear, but as he had no gun with him he decided to not disturb it. Bruin was attending to its business and seemed to be contented. A hand to hand fight with the bugger is not the most pleasant experience, although it would certainly form the ground work for many good yarns.

The fishing party this year was small on account of the elections, but those who went had fourteen days of good healthy sport and they enjoyed every minute of their stay.

Bad Year for Rulers

Old Moore's Almanac Predicts Danger for Sovereigns

London, Oct. 21.—"Old Moore's Almanac" for 1909 has just been published. "Old Moore's" specialty is prophecy, and 1909, according to his almanac, is going to make things among the royalties hum. November, always a dread month for prophets, is even going to provide "danger to the President of the U. S. A." As is customary with prophets, the nature of the danger is carefully concealed.

Here are some of the things which are in store for the world:

February, 1909—A warning to the Shah of Persia to be careful and take no risks.

April—Mars culminates at St. Petersburg, warning the Czar to guard his person.

May—The affliction of the luminaries is evil for the King and Government.

August—Saturn will culminate, an evil augury for the Ruler of Persia.

October—Mars will be on the nadir, warning the Czar.

November—Danger to the President of the U. S. A.

December—Grave danger to the King and disasters in high places.

Boston Minister will Not Wed Consumptives

Boston, Oct. 21.—The Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, announced at the service to-night that he never again would marry a consumptive and that he would at the next district meeting ask the church authorities to prohibit a marriage where one of the parties was a consumptive.

"I am taking that step," he said, "because I do not want to stand before my God as a murderer. The marriage of an unaffected person with one suffering from the great white plague means that both inevitably will have the disease."

Dr. Johnson said that he had given the matter great thought and that he considered it time for the church to take a stand for life and mortality under such conditions. "Laws and legal devices admittedly are unable to cope with this condition; therefore the Church must meet it and conquer it," he said.

Mr. Johnson also said that he would not marry any man whose income is less than $12 a week.

News in Brief.

North Bay, Ont., October 21.—Western traffic on the Canadian Pacific Railway is again tied up on account of the burning of a bridge near Missanabie, 240 miles west of North Bay, which occurred on Saturday. All trains will be delayed many hours. The bridge is supposed to have been set alight by falling embers from a passing engine.

London, October 21.—Prof. Goldwin Smith, writing to the Manchester Guardian, says strenuous efforts are being made by Imperialists to detach Canada more completely from her own hemisphere and attach her more closely to Great Britain, with little success. We get on pretty well with the French except when they became instruments of Papal policy, but I could give you strong and unpleasant proof in connection with our war against the half-breeds of Batoche, of the strength of race sentiment in French breasts.

The most lively movement of a political kind in that quarter just now is one in favor of French Nationalism, headed by that rising politician, Henri Bourassa.

London, October 21.—At Durban, Sir H. De Villiers, speaking at the Government banquet, finally expressed the belief now animating the whole of South Africa that union was the only cure for the suspicions aroused by racialism. He defended the privacy of the conference, but remarked that he had never heard speeches more statesmanlike or participated in a debate which maintained a higher level. Just as the celebration of the landing of Champlain brought together the English and the French in Canada, so eighty years hence the descendants of the English and the Dutch would congregate at Cape Town and celebrate the tercentenary of the landing of Van Riebeck.

General Smuts appeared to the Natalians to banish the suspicion that the union would be employed to secure Dutch dominion.

A Woman Jumped Through Window

Toronto, Oct. 20—John Felkner, 18 years of age, of 715 Lansdowne avenue, was arrested at his home by County Constable McCollum, charged with attempted criminal assault on Mrs. P. Ayles, a young married woman, in New Toronto, yesterday. He was employed the past few days as a painter on a couple of new houses next door to Mrs. Ayles' home and was working there yesterday.

The young woman's house stands on the Lake shore road, not a hundred yards from Mimico road, not a hundred yards from Mimico and Hamilton's factory in New Toronto. According to the story, Mrs. Ayles was clearing the dining room table after luncheon, when a man came to the back door, and asked for a drink. As he had been working in the neighborhood all summer, and was not a stranger to her, Mrs. Ayles turned on the tap to draw the water. As soon as she had turned from the sink sprang at her, and seized her by the throat.

Then followed a struggle. Mrs. Ayles is of a very slight build, while her assailant was a good foot and a half taller than she. The woman, however, put up a desperate fight, trying to reach the front door. In the course of the struggle almost every piece of furniture in the dining room and parlor was overturned. Finally, after beating her assailant off for nearly five minutes, and when both were fairly exhausted, Mrs. Ayles made a dash for the front parlor window. This is of extra size, and contained a heavy sheet of plate glass.

Rushing to it, Mrs. Ayles smashed it to atoms with her fists. Then she sprang through the opening head first out to the lawn in front of the house, calling loudly for help.

Outside on the grass, Mrs. Ayles strength gave way entirely, and she could only crawl upon her hands and knees across to Ritchie and Sam Ady's factory.

Charles Montgomery, who was passing at the moment, when Mrs. Ayles came flying through the window, thought the woman had suddenly became insane, and he rushed to the nearest house for assistance. In a very few minutes the whole town was aroused, and a dozen men joined in the chase.

As soon as Mrs. Ayles had escaped to the lawn, her assailant ran out of the back door, and made for the fields back of the house. Ed. Sandford, a neighboring farmer, saw him running, bareheaded, across the fields, and through the waters of a little creek nearby, and pointed him out to his two sons, who were working with him.

"We keep a revolver in the house and at one time Mr. Ayles thought of trying to reach it. But, had she done so, it might have been taken from her and used on her, as the man threatened, and evidently did his best, to kill her."

Rheumatic Liver Overstrained Kidneys

Caused Sickness that Puzzled Able Physicians. Was Cured by Ferrozone.

A REAL MIRACLE.

"My doctor told me I had gouty or rheumatic liver and kidneys," writes G. O. Forde, from Halifax. "I guess he was right for I was a might sick man and felt the game was pretty nearly up. So many remedies failed that the doctor was completely puzzled. As for symptoms—I had bushels of them in the morning a sort of nausea. Sometimes the bowels were constipated, at other times quite relaxed. I felt dull, and a sense of weight in the back and over the liver was very distressing."

LOST 15 POUNDS IN WEIGHT.

"My color resembled a yellowish pallor, and gradually I lost weight to the alarming extent of fifteen pounds. I looked jaundiced and felt sure I would die.

"Then I read of the wonders worked by Ferrozone and in desperation I bought six boxes. At once I began to mend. Ferrozone must have put a peg or two into them or set system for things at the end of the month began to look up. In three months I felt like new, but kept on taking Ferrozone. In six months I was cured."

FERROZONE SAVED HIS LIFE.

"Were it not for Ferrozone I wouldn't be alive today. I am sure it will cure any weakness, rheumatism, gout, debility, poor blood or nervousness. My condition embraced all these, and Ferrozone cured me." Readers, get Ferrozone today. 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sen. on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

THE CAMPAIGN

The campaign warms up. Mr. Borden issues a manifesto from Halifax, which sets forth the "aim" of his party. A good many years ago, says the Montreal Star, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was leading the Opposition, we were moved to remark in reference to a speaking tour which he made throughout the West that "the demon of indefiniteness" dogged his footsteps across the prairies. To-day "the demon of indefiniteness" seems to have come back to haunt his successor. Perhaps it is the familiar demon of Opposition leaders. Mr. Borden's manifesto makes fine reading if one is permitted to write his own interpretation between the lines. Thus we are to have "such application of the principle of protection as will justify and insure the payment of a fair living wage" to the laboring man. Good! But how is it to be "insured?" Has Mr. Borden a plan? If so, he should not keep us in the dark regarding it.

A possible plan would be to give the Government power to remove the benefits of protection from any industry, which, upon investigation, was found not to pay "a fair living wage" and a fair price in the international market to its employes. In Australia, they accomplish this with the aid of an inland revenue tax, equal to the protection provided for the product of each industry, which is collected from any industry that is found not to pay its workmen fair wages. Certainly, if the State is going to take the responsibility of interfering with the course of trade in order to "protect" any given industry for the sake of its workingmen quite as much as of its stockholders, it may fairly assume the additional responsibility of seeing that a just amount of this assistance reaches the pockets of the wage-earners. The stockholders may be trusted to look out for themselves.

Then Mr. Borden promises "honest administration of our public revenues." How is this to be accomplished? By making Foster Minister of Finance? By appointing Fowler and Lefurgey to deal with the railway magnates? It is useless to talk to the people of giving them a more honest administration if the work of that administration is to be left in such hands as these. Our contemporary thinks that this is a point at which Mr. Borden should be specific and there is no point at which he can better afford to be so. No one doubts that his better instincts prompt him to be specific, in this regard; but his mistaken loyalty to his associates and, perhaps, a lack of that wise courage which means so much to a party leader, impel him to be indefinite.

Mr. Borden closes his manifesto with an admirable statement. He promises to the people of Canada, if returned to power, "a Cabinet worthy of their highest ideals and truly representative of the great country which I shall serve." If this means that he will go outside of his present following in the Commons to find his Cabinet, it is smallest news for the country. But he might have been more definite) in his announcement if that be the meaning. Sir Wilfrid Laurier makes a boast of finding Cabinet Ministers outside of his Parliamentary following; and it is a boast which every party leader might well copy. The country may be to blame for the poverty of Parliament in good Ministerial material; but it does not relish being published so severely for its neglect.

come the sounds of clashing affidavits. Those engaged must realize how unsatisfactory this sort of welfare is to the country. Especially is this true when we consider that Hon. Mr. Pugsley has hitherto been content to oppose his bare word to the sworn statements of his accusers. What we should like to see would be these men telling their stories under oath and cross-examination; and among the witnesses should be the accused Minister himself. The St. John Globe points out that the $36,000 odd which were paid to George McAvity should be returned to the Federal treasury; and one suit which might be instituted would be for the recovery of this money. Mr. McAvity does not deny that he got it. He only says that it was in accordance with business relations. "Very well. Let the Government sue for the amount, and Mr. McAvity can show how he earned it from the public treasury.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

The Government announces that it will begin selling old age annuities next month. Cynics will inquire whether this includes senatorships. And under the present system of Senatorial appointment, the cynic has much to justify him in regarding Senatorships in this light. Not all Senators get their money for nothing. There are some public men of high character, splendid record and genuine public value in the Senate. But there are men in the Senate whom the people would never have put there —some, indeed, to whom the people have refused to give a far shorter term in the Commons. There are other Senators who hardly pretend to take any part in the debates or the business of the Senate; and yet who expect to go on drawing $3,500 a year for the rest of their natural lives. If these men are not drawing old-age pensions for services in the party wars, what are they drawing?

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Reconstruction of G.T.R. Time Table

A reconstruction has been made in the arrangement of the complete time tables issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System which will be appreciated by the travelling public. Where tables are shown of the condensed time of trains between the several points where through equipment is run, this equipment is shown directly opposite the time table giving passengers the information they desire in the easiest possible way and without turning to other pages to find what equipment is on several trains shown. To make railway time tables plain to the traveling public is a problem, with the railways but this new innovation has overcome a considerable amount of trouble which has been experienced in the past in knowing what equipment could be found on through trains.

New York, Oct. 20.—A few years ago the Broadway Building Company purchased a plot of ground at the southeast corner of Broadway and Maiden Lane, 78 by 117 feet, for $1,350,000. The building involved another outlay of $1,000,000. This week they sold the property for $6,600,000.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN:—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent, at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big money-lender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Cattle Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its needs, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady; worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the subject party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and reward assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully preserved.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to this latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Emmamore, represents convenience to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Clemons and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world efficiency and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 34 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 38 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,330,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,708, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the inland lakes and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent rivers, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to emergetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $50,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. It found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

...many minutes and slowly unfastened it. A folded paper as soiled as its wrapper fell out. It was worn through much handling and covered with pencilled words. He handed it to Dallas.

At first she could not decipher it, but after studying it carefully and placing together several detached bits she was able to make it out. It was written scrawlingly and in a trembling hand.

The bearer of this (it read), the good chief Red Moon, I commend to the gentleness and mercy of every God fearing man and woman. Once, out of the weakness of the flesh, he wept under the tortures of a sun dance. Since then he has been abused, starved and spat upon. Yet, hearing from me of Christ, his suffering and his command to forgive, he has put down his desire to revenge his wrongs in blood and goes on his way, laboring and enduring in silence. May God be gracious to whomsoever aids this least one among us.

Here the letter ended, but underneath were the signature, so fingered, however, that Dallas could spell out only the word "David," and a blurred postscript, which said:

I have christened him Charles and taught him English, but since his punishment he has never—

The remainder of the paper was illegible.

When Dallas gave it back to the Indian he wrapped it up carefully and returned it to his bosom; then he gathered up the scattered chips, lifted his double load to his shoulders, drew his somber blanket close about him and shambled slowly away.

"Poor thing!" said Dallas, in compassion.

He stopped to look back.

"Goodby," she said as he went on—"goodby."

When he reached the river bank he turned again. The frost blighted cottonwoods that bordered the Missouri were behind him, gleaming as yellowly as if during the short, hot summer their leafy branches had caught and imprisoned all the sunshine. Against that belt of brilliant color stood out his spare, burdened frame.

Watching, she saw his gaunt face slowly relax in a friendly grin.

CHAPTER IV.

SNOW fell on the very heels of the cavalry. Scarcely were the Indians safe in the stockade and the troopers once more in barracks when some first flakes, like down plucked by the wind from the breasts of the southward hastening wild fowl, came floating out of the sky. Soon the long sumac leaves on the coulee edge were drooping under a crystalline weight, the black plowed strip was blending with the unplowed prairie, and the shock head of the cottonwood shack was donning a spotless nightcap, and so heavy and ceaseless was the downfall that at supper time the sweet trumpet notes of "retreat" were wafted out from Brannon across a covered plain.

When morning dawned the heavens were cloudless, and the laggard sun as it rose shone with blinding glory upon peaceful miles. Nowhere was a sign of wallow, path or road, and the coulee yawned, white lipped. Even the Missouri was not unchanged, for away to the northwest there had been a mighty rainstorm, and the murky river tumbled by in waves that were angry and swollen.

Since his early boyhood the section boss had not known snow. Before the previous day Dallas and Marylyn had never seen it. It was with exclamations of delight, therefore, that, crowding together in the doorway, the three first caught sight of the glistening drifts.

"Pa, it's like a Christmas card!" cried the younger girl, and, bareheaded, she ran out to frolic before the shack.

To Dallas the scene had a deeper meaning. Here was what would discourage and block any one who had put off necessary improvements! And this would last long after the expiration of that six months! "I guess there'll be no building or plowing now," she said to her father happily.

He, fully as relieved, returned a confident assent.

A little later old Michael, the ferryman, drove by, breaking a track along the blotted road. His ancient cordu-roys, known to every river man from Bismarck to Baton Rouge, were hidden beneath layers of overcoats. Through the wool cap, pulled down to his collar, two wide holes gave him outlook; a third and smaller aperture was filled by the stem of a corncob pipe. He was headed for the cattle camp, the lines over a four-in-hand hitched to three empty wagons, a third team tied to the tailboard of the hindmost box.

On the arrival of the saloon gang the pilot had left his steamboat in the hands of his two helpers and made his way to Shanty Town. There in a shingle hut, perched atop a whisky cask and kicking its rotund belly complacently with his heels, he had wet a throat, long dry, from the amber depths beneath him.

With each succeeding glass his obligations had grown apace. Nevertheless, for a lifetime of rough service had brought about an immunity that belied his Celtic blood, his brain remained clear, his step steady and his eye unbleared. Thus it happened that when, cut off from grazing, it was necessary for the Shanty Town teams to be returned at once to Clark's old Michael was on hand and in condition to take them and by so doing wipe out his drinking account.

As he came opposite the shack Marylyn was still running about in the snow, while Dallas was sweeping out some long, narrow drifts that had sifted in through window and door cracks. Scurrying across at them...

...recognized an at once a heated conversation that had taken place at Shanty Town the afternoon of the southward departure of a Dodge City courier. And he shook his head sorrowfully.

"Ye'll have yer han's full before long," he advised aloud, "or it's me that's not good at guessin'." And, lifting the front of his cap, he sympathetically blew the purple bump that served him for a nose till it rang through the crisp air like a throaty bugle.

Further on as he sat pondering deeply and letting the leaders choose their course a horseman came cantering toward him and drew rein beside his wheel. It was Lounsbury, buried to the ears in a buffalo coat.

"Sure, it's somethin' important, John, that's a-bringin' ye out t'day," cried old Michael roguishly, his brogue disclosing his identity. "It's ayther tillegrams or l-a-a-ydies."

The storekeeper colored under his visor. "It's nayther," he mocked laughingly.

"None o' yer shillyshallin'," warned the ferryman, giving the other a playful whack with his gad. "Ol kin rade ye loike a buke."

"You can't read a book," declared Lounsbury. "But I'll tell you. I'm going to the Lancasters'."

Old Michael nodded, with a sly wink through the portholes of his mask. "Ol knowed it!" he said. Then, after taking out a tobacco bag from under his many coats and lighting the corncob in the protecting bowl of his palms, "In that case, man, Ol got somethin' t' say t' ye."

He leaned over the wheel confidentially, and Lounsbury bent toward him, so that the smoke of the pipe fed the storekeeper's nostrils. They talked for a half hour, the one relating his story, the other putting in quick questions. At the end of their conversation Lounsbury held out his hand.

"If their letter brings him, Mike," he said, "don't you fail to let me know."

"Aye, aye," promised the pilot earnestly.

They parted. Old Michael continued his way with an easy mind, but Lounsbury was troubled. Instead of carrying, as on his former visit, good news to the little family on the bend he must now be the bearer of evil.

And when, having stalled his horse with Bess and Betty, he entered the cottonwood shack his heart smote him still more, for secretly he had hoped that he was to tell them what they already knew, but it seemed precisely the reverse. There was nothing in the appearance and actions of the Lancasters that suggested anxiety. The section boss, though his manner was not without a certain reserve (as if he half (to be continued.)

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, making the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood elements.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, stops nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

RUGBY

Important matters were taken up at an Executive meeting of the Ontario Rugby Football Union at the Iroquois last night.

The protested Central Y.M.C.A.-Capital game was thrown out and ordered replayed. The Capitals played two ineligible men without permits.

Jack Beatty, of the Hurchas, who it is alleged played baseball in the Northern Professional League, will be asked for an affadavit regarding his amateur standing.

Boland, of the same team, was censured for rough play in the game with T.A.A.C. last Saturday.

As the rules do not cover the point it was decided to allow all who have played in the Inter-provincial Union in the past to play in O.R.F.U. matches. In future, however, players will be barred from playing in two leagues.

The resignation of Vice-President Snowdon, of Westmount, was accepted and Dr. A. W. McPherson, of Peterborough, elected to the position.

The senior schedule was arranged as follows:—

Oct. 17—Peterborough at T.A.A.C.

Oct. 24.—T.A.A.C. at Peterborough

Games will count. In the event of a tie the deciding game will be played in Peterborough on Oct. 31.

Neither Ade Rathbun nor DeGruchy will be able to play against Peterborough at Rosedale to-morrow, but it is not thought that the team will be weakened enough through their absence to give the Quakerites more than a good look in for the long end of the score. Hugh Clarkson or Campbell will fill the vacant position at quarter. Grant will again fill a place on the half line. The personnel of the team has not yet wholly decided on as yet, but the following will be pretty close to the line-up:—

Back, Morrison; halves, Grant, Kent, Clarke; quarter, Campbell or Hugh Clarkson; scrimmage, Robertson, Naismith, Mack; inside, Holden, Crooks or McLennan; middle, Austin, Clarkson or Sheriff and Mara; outside, Guy Charlesea and Hale,—Mail and Empire.

Small Fire

Soon after nine o'clock yesterday morning a fire alarm was sent in and when the brigade arrived it was discovered that the chimney on Mrs. Chamber's place, opposite the market was ablaze. An application of the chemicals soon extinguished the flames and little damage was done.

Hotel Still Open

Mr. Thos. Parker, of Idyl Wyld, expects to close up the house for the season in the near future. There is not a great deal of business around the Lake at present, as the weather is making itself felt. The fishing is excellent and the shooting down the lake is splendid when the sportsmen go down to the lake a little later this season. Mr. Parker will open up the hotel when notified beforehand.

Have Decided to Inaugerate a Campaign

George street Methodist church was filled last night on the occasion of the public temperance meeting which was addressed by Mr. Spence and Mrs. Owen Hitchcock of Toronto. The Peterborough people are taking a keen interest in the subject of temperance, and at the close the following resolution was unanimously adopted by a standing vote;— Resolved that this meeting of citizens convened this evening of October 20th, hereby gives its heartfelt approval to the proposed plan of the City Temperance League to inaugurate a local option campaign here to vote on a bylaw on the 1st day of January, 1910, and we hereby pledge our sympathy and support to the city league in carrying on the said campaign.

After the meeting a large number remained on invitation to perfect plans for the work.

He has now the highest qualifications as a Public school teacher, and is qualified for High School teaching. Mr. Yeomy's friends congratulate him and commend him for his industry.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, build-up nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

Wedding Bells

McCABE—ARMSTRONG.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. W. J. Armstrong, Perth, on Saturday evening at five o'clock, when his daughter, Minnie Elma, was united in marriage to Harold Ernest McCabe, of Peterborough, by the Rev. Mr. Fisher, rector of St. James' church, Port Elmsley. The bride, who was given away by her father, was prettily attired in a cream silk dress trimmed with lace and insertion. She was unattended. After the ceremony was performed the guests sat down to a dainty supper. The bride and groom left on the midnight train on Sunday for Peterborough, where they will in future reside. The bride wore a navy blue travelling suit with hat to match. They received many handsome and costly presents among them being cheques from her sisters, Mrs. Clark, Edmonton, and Miss. Woodcock, Washington. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. McCabe a happy and prosperous married life. The wedding was quiet, owing to the recent death of the bride's brother.

Not a Miracle

Just Plain Effect from Tea and Coffee

There are some quite remarkable things happening every day, which seem almost miraculous.

Some persons would not believe that a man could suffer from tea or coffee drinking so severely as to cause spells of unconsciousness. And to find complete relief in changing to Postum is well worth recording.

"I used to be a great coffee drinker, so much so that it was killing me by inches. My heart became so weak I would fall and lie unconscious for an hour at a time. The spells caught me sometimes two or three times a day.

"My friends, and even the doctor, told me it was drinking coffee that caused the trouble. I would not believe it, and still drank coffee until I could not leave my room.

"Then my doctor, who drinks Postum himself, persuaded me to stop coffee and try Postum. After much hesitation I concluded to try it. That was eight months ago. Since then I have had but few of those spells, none for more than four months.

"I feel better, sleep better and am better every way. I now drink nothing but Postum. As I am seventy years of age, all my friends think the improvement quite remarkable."

"There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or ever-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, because of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A power in skilful like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely banished the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Obituary

CHAS. F. GLOVER.

The death took place in Glovers-ville, N.Y., on Monday, October 19th, of Mr. Charles F. Glover of that city, son of Mr. Peter Glover, Ashburnham. The deceased, who was 46 years of age, left Peterborough some years ago and located in Elmira, N.Y., where he lived for some time. A little over two years ago he moved to Gloversville, where he has since resided.

The deceased was twice married and leaves behind him a widow and son, Charles, and daughter, Florence. Interment will take place in Elmira, N.Y., today. He visited Peterborough at intervals, the last occasion being two summers ago, when he had great pleasure in looking up many old Ashburnham acquaintances. He was a very quick-hearted man, well liked and will be greatly missed by many friends.

His sister, Miss Jessie Glover, of Rochester, was with him the past week.

Board of Health In Short Session

A meeting of the Board of Health was held yesterday morning when several matters were disposed of.

The chairman, Dr. Burnham, and Messrs. Parker, Edgar and Marty were present.

Mr. B. Crowley wrote, asking for a sewer on Inverlea street. On motion of Messrs. Edgar and Parker, the secretary was instructed to ask Mr. Crowley to supply a petition.

Mr. J. Thompson was heard regarding sewer accommodation on Dublin street, east of Water street. On motion of Messrs. Marty and Edgar it was decided to recommend to the Council to build a sewer on Dublin street from Water street to a point 120 feet east of Water street.

The Medical Health Officer reported that he had given the Collier-Cunningham Co., permission to put in a cess pool.

It was moved by Mr. Edgar and seconded by Mr. Marty that the council be requested to procure any light barrels for the use of scavengers and change the hour before which the work cannot be done, to eleven o'clock.

Rod and Gun for November

Fine diversified reading in the leading feature of the November number of "Rod and Gun and Motor Sports in Canada," published by W. J. Taylor, at Woodstock, Ont. The delights of camping, canoeing, fishing, hunting and mountaineering are dwelt upon in stories which give the added touches of personal experiences to the pleasant pictures of enjoyment each one presents. Particularly notable are papers on "The Deer of New Brunswick" by that veteran guide, Adam Moore; "Deer Farming for Profit," a summary of inquiries on this subject made by the United States Government; and "Wild Rice Growing in Nova Scotia." Everyone will enjoy reading the stories, "Running the Rapids with an Amateur" by L. W. Bingay; "My Experiences as a Bear Hunter" by Dr. Hensel; "How I missed a Moose and Deer and Shot a Wolf," by Jack Minier; and the friendly challenge by Mr. J. A. Shade, who believes, when all points are taken into consideration, that he has the finest moose head yet taken out of New Brunswick. This summary by no means includes the whole of the wide field covered. Diversions being made into many paths each one of which must appeal to many readers. With the various departments, the wealth of material included in this number of the magazine is surprising and includes contributions that must appeal to all lovers of out door life.

Electric Wire Inspector in the City

Mr. Van Winkle, wire inspector for the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association arrived in the city on Monday night and will remain here for possibly the next two weeks. He intends to thoroughly inspect the electric wiring in the city and especially in the mercantile and business quarters and he will make a complete report. He expects to find a lot of bad wiring and it will all have to be rectified.

The Canadian Fire Underwriters intend to have all the wiring put in first-class condition at once so as to prevent as far as it is possible any outbreak. Mr. VanWinkle is at work now and will be busy every day until he completes his job.

Selections

THE PACK PEDDLER.

His Varied Store and a Sale That Was Missed.

I had been thinking that the old style pack peddler was no more or that he existed only in out of the way localities like the Ozark mountains or Philadelphia. I was mistaken. The man with the pack is as common in the farming districts of Illinois as grasshoppers or prickly heat.

The oldest inhabitant in my neighborhood, who lives across the field from me, says that one pack peddler has nested in our part of the country time out of mind. Where he comes from with his assorted conglomeration of dry goods and hardware nobody knows; also where he goes after he has exhibited his wares and turned an honest nickel is a mystery. This general merchandise pedestrian has made a number of descents upon our house in the last year, but if he has no better luck with his other patrons than he has with me he isn't much interested in the banking system of the country.

He evidently has made an exhaustive study of my habits of living, for he always times his visit so that when he arrives all out of breath or any other useful thing he finds me well supplied with the necessaries of life and with not a cent in the house. All his visits begin, are carried on and end in the same way.

There comes a knock at the back door just at mealtime. I open the portal and see an overheated individual in the act of crawling from under what at first I take to be our new tar paper henhouse. The apparition quickly shapes itself into our peripatetic retail store, unlimbering for action.

I try to head him off by saying, "There will be nothing today, Alphonso."

Treating this remark with silent contempt, the tradesman begins loosening six buckles and a bed cord.

I watch him a moment and then remark, "You need not take down your shutters and open for business, Felix, my friend, for there is absolutely nothing doing."

"Handkerchief?" he suggests reproachfully.

I shake my head. Then he begins to unpack and lay out his entire stock, naming each article with a rising inflection.

"Suspenders? Felt soles? Clothes-lines? Horseshoes? Stove pokers? Chimney pots?"

"Have you any watermelon on ice?" I ask.

"No," he replies, quite seriously, "but here is a fine remnant of watered silk. No? Clothespins? Spectacles? Laundry soap? Toothbrushes? Garden hose? Split shingles? Ax handles? Doormats? Ox yokes? Insect powder?"

"No, no," I say. "I'm sorry, Augustus, but we send to Paris for all our goods."

"Could I sell you a good snow shovel?" asks the anxious salesman.

"No. We have our snow delivered already shoveled."

"Horse blankets?" he insinuates. "No? Collar buttons? Needles? Farming tools? Railroad spikes? Bed slats? Pressed bricks? Barbed wire? Coal bins?"

I leave the door open and go back to the table. After awhile I hear the buckles and straps being adjusted, and when the weary merchant has donned his burden and made a mile or so toward the setting sun I think the incident closed. Then my wife comes downstairs in a breathless state, clutching four pennies in a fevered grasp, and says: "He hasn't really gone? Oh, dear! And I wanted so much to buy white thread to finish my sewing?"—Chicago News.

Royal Chickens of Japan.

"The most beautiful and extraordinary chickens in the world are those bred by the royal family of Japan, the privilege of raising them not being accorded to any of the mikado's subjects," said Mr. L. J. De Courcey of Yokohama. "These chickens are celebrated for the wonderful growth of their tailfeathers, a full grown rooster's tail often reaching a length of twenty feet. The tail is of a lovely deep blue shade, while the body is buff, and about the neck is a white ring. A pair of these chickens has been known to sell to a wealthy Englishman for $1,000 on condition that he would take them out of the country.

"I believe that ere long the species will entirely disappear, as I heard before leaving Japan that it was the intention of his majesty to cease their breeding."—Baltimore American.

Reforming the Head Hunters.

A curious development is in steady progress in the Solomon Islands, the group in the south Pacific which lies to the west of New Guinea, whose people have earned such unenviable notoriety as head hunters. The young men of the tribes in these fertile and beautiful islands are abandoning the historic pursuit which has made them dreaded for centuries in the south seas and are taking to the copra industry. Copra, which is the dried interior of the cocoanut, is valued commercially for the oil which can be pressed from it, and some of the young Solomon islanders are accumulating considerable wealth by extracting it, though the older generation, to whom head hunting is still the only profession for a gentleman, are said to look down upon them as being "in trade."—London Standard.

Father Ignatius, Famous Protestant Monk, is Dead

London, Oct. 17.—Joseph Leycester Lyne, Father Ignatius, monk and superior of Llanthony Abbey, Abergavenny, England, died this morning after a lingering illness. He was born in 1837.

He was an odd man, for 71 years of passionate striving for his ideals, combined with the ascetic life of a monk, had left their marks.

His face and his scalp were clean shaven, all except the rim of his head, on which was a fringe of white hair. This was the man around whom religious controversy centred for many years. This was the Protestant monk whose tonsured head, gilded robe, and sandals have shocked the Church of England from Archbishops downwards. He was pursued from town to town, in the course of his preaching expeditions, by his own tailor, who charged him publicly with having been the unwitting cause of his mother's death. He had to meet the violence of mobs inflamed by newspaper accounts of scandals in the monasteries which he has successfully established. Monks whom he turned out of the Protestant Order of St. Benedict villified him.

Many remarkable things have happened in his remarkable life. His monastery at Llanthony is one of the least remarkable, though this is something to which English people have not yet got accustomed. Father Ignatious made himself a monk. There is no other Protestant Order of St. Benedict, which is elsewhere a Roman Catholic Order, so having taken the vow, by which he renounced the world, the flesh and the devil, he donned the monastic garb and called himself Father. Some pious women who believed in him, aided by a generous friend or two, provided the funds where with to build the monastery. For the support of himself and his monks, however, Father Ignatius had to stump the country asking for money. He saw visions, performed miracles, publicly debated with Bradlaugh, fell foul of the chosen leaders of the Church of England—can it be wondered that he always attracted both people and money?

When he was living at a Whitechapel Mission House, in 1862, he was asked to visit the nineteen-year-old daughter of a poor woman in the vicinity. Her name was Lizzie Meek. When he got to the house he was told the girl had been dead two hours. The body was laid out for burial. Taking a precious treasure from his breast, the Relic of the True Cross, he laid it on the girl's breast and said, "In the Name of Jesus Christ, I say unto thee arise!" The girl's right hand was thrown back to raise itself stiffly, and make the sign of the cross. Then the nostrils dilated, and soon the girl was able to drink some soup. At that time he was the Rev. Joseph Leycester Lyne, and his fame ran through the East End of London like the flame of a train of gunpowder.

Here is another case. In August, 1873, during the building of the Abbey Church at Llanthony, some stone fell from a height and crushed a workman. His poor body was described by an eye-witness as resembling "a mass of pulp." To the monk, now Father Ignatius and Superior of the Order, was borne the news that a workman had been killed. In his cell he had a bottle of Lourdes water—the water of the well-known healing well. Taking this, he went to where the man lay. Relating what followed, Father Ignatius has more than once referred to "the voice which whispered its commands to me." "I knew," he says, "that the Master was about to call on me a message of resurrection in the name of the Lord of Life."

So the monk knelt by the body. He sprinkled it with the Lourdes water, and in the presence of the other workmen, commanded it to rise in the name of the Lord.

If search were made it would doubtless be possible to find now, eye-witnesses of the astonishing thing that happened. At once the man rose. He was whole and well. Without uttering a word he started to walk to his lodgings a mile distant. Everybody was so surprised, the worker of the miracle excepted, that nobody followed him; they stood still and stared. Afterwards, when the man was examined, not a scratch was found on his body, and he knew nothing of what had occurred.

A Good Start--Series of Meetings for Bible Study Under Auspices Y.W.C.A.

St. Paul's church was well attended last night on the occasion of the initial meeting of a series of Bible Studies under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association. The churches in the city combined their prayer services, and the ministers in the pulpit were, Rev. Canon Davidson, presiding, Rev. Messrs. Pogue, Keith, Pearson, Webb and Potter. The Rev. Dr. E. A. Langfeldt was also present.

The Rev. Dr Elmore Harris of the Toronto Bible Training School, who will conduct the series of studies took as his subject the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians, speaking particularly on what he concluded was the theme of the epistle, "The Church the Body of Christ." He derived great comfort from the conviction that the entire word of God was a unity—each book unfolding some general theme—so that the Bible ought to be studied book by book. To him the Old scripture revealed the Christ. Christ said "Ye search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye had eternal life and these are they which testify of me."

Books that revealed a plot throughout were the most eagerly read, and so in Scripture the Bible would be better understood if each book were read at one sitting.

In Ephesians the theme was the church the body of Christ. Three points of difference between this church and the local church.

1. It was not an organization but an organism.

2. It was a church without officers. It has a variety of gifts.

3. It was a church without ordinances. One faith, one hope, one baptism and that not water baptism but the Baptism of the Holy Spirit.

To the mind of the speaker that church was not sent asunder with belief he would rather sing,

Like a mighty army moves the Church of God.
Brothers we are treading where the saints have trod.
We are not divided, all one body we,
One in hope and doctrine, one in charity.

The local church looked for obedience and loyalty to its leaders, and that was right, but the spirit of the of the church spoken of in Ephesians, was the great, broad and deep sympathy, and interest in the Church of Christ everywhere

There was a great work for this body of Christ to accomplish. It was necessary to cultivate fellowship not merely locally but also the larger fellowship with the people of God. There must also be the recognition of the new humanity, of which Christ is the head, and the abandonment of the old humanity of which Adam was the head.

And all the gifts had been bestowed upon that church for the great purpose of edifying or building up that more sublime body of Christ the Redeemer King. "Till we all come in the unity of the faith • • unto the unity of the faith • • unto a full grown man."

In closing Dr. Harris spoke of the great value to every community, of the Young Women's Christian Association. While it had many phases of work, its supreme motive was to lead all to Christ. It was also comprehensive seeking to assist and develope the physical, mental and spritual of womanhood phases.

Dr. Harris will give a course of studies in the Y.W.C.A. at three o'clock and at eight o'clock each day. These studies are open to all.

W.C.Pennington, Goderich, will be Superintendent of the New Factory

The Peterborough Lubricator Co., are making rapid progress and will soon be ready to commence operations in the building on Hunter street east, which a few weeks ago was purchased from Mr. F. Oke, proprietor of the furniture factory.

The superintendent of this new manufactory is a former resident of Peterborough, and his many friends here will be pleased to learn that he is returning to the city. Mr. W. C. Pennington of Goderich, is to be the superintendent and assumes that position with the highest recommendations. He left this city for Goderich, in which town he occupied the position of superintendent of the Henderson Bicycle Co. He afterwards went to Guelph and was connected with the Raymond Mfg. Co., for six years. He then returned to Goderich where he, until he accepted the superintendency of the Peterborough Lubricator Co., was head of the erecting department of the Daly Engine Works.

When Mr. Pennington was in Peterborough he was prominently identified with musical organizations, having been bandmaster of the Sons of England Band which was then in existence.

Mr Cyril Currier is to be the office manager. He in company with Mr. Pennington left yesterday for Philadelphia where they will purchase machinery and get ideas as to the management and equipment of the new factory.

Attempt to Corrupt Central Ontario

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—The attention of the Federal Government was drawn today to the existence of an alleged plot for the corruption of some of the constituencies of Central Ontario in the Conservative interests, and this was coupled with a request that some of the expert detectives of the Dominion police force should be commissioned to get at the facts of the matter.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, is absent from the city today, but it is said that steps will be taken at once to get at the bottom of any conspiracy which may exist, and arrest and punish any who may be employed in the distributions of corruption funds.

House was Destroyed with Contents

Lindsay, Oct. 21.—The house belonging to Mr. Frank Finnigan, who resides about five miles from town on the Little Britain road, was totaly destroyed by fire at noon yesterday.

Mrs. Finnigan was starting the fire to prepare dinner and filled the stove full of cedar wood, with the result that a spark from the chimney set fire to the roof and in a few minutes the entire building was in flames.

Part of the contents were saved, but Mr. Finnigan had 50 bushels of potatoes in the cellar that are a total loss.

This is a severe blow to Mr. Finnigan as he had very little insurance.

English Girl Sent Home from New York

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 21 — Abundantly supplied with money and jewellery, Miss Rie Bugg, an attractive English girl, and who said she was presented to the court of King Edward VII. last season, was sent back to England on the steamer Mouretania, which sailed from here today. The young lady arrived last Friday on the same steamer, and among her fellow passengers was J. H. Alport. Upon the receipt a cablegram from Alport, senior, this morning, the authorities detained her awaiting the decision of the government upon the matter. Needless to say she was highly indignant at the treatment she received which she characterized as outrageous.

Burnham Had Two Successful Meetings

The meeting at 4th line, Smith, in Temperance Hall, held last night in the interests of Mr. Burnham, the Conservative candidate, was largely attended Mr. C. J. Moore occupied the chair.

Mr. Burnham dealt with the immigration question, the Stratton insurance case, and other of the issues of the campaign here. The reading of Mr. Desmarteau's earnest request for the defeat of Mr. Stratton, was one of the features of the evening.

Lt.-Col Miller delivered a forcible and eloquent address upon the foward home of public life in Canada, and the wholly unnecessary purchase of a large stock of Boss rifles.

At Moy's school house, Messrs. Keachy and Beadburn held a largely attended and most successful meeting. At the close Col. Miller and the candidate arrived.

Are You Weak After Sickness?

Later on It Will Be Harder to Get Strong than Today. What are You Doing to Get Well?

A case in point is well exemplified in the following letter from Mrs. N. J. Wilder, wife of a well known citizen of Pittsfield, who writes; "I had a nervous disorder that completely prostrated me. I couldn't sleep, and would lay and toss about all night, arising in the morning more tired than ever, head heavy, eyes dull, and every bone and muscle aching. I tried to get along without calling in a doctor, but was finally driven to it. He treated me for some time, but with no perceptible improvement in my health. Some one recommended Ferrozone. The change it effected in my system was noticeable almost instantly. I gradually took on flesh. The 'all-gone' feeling left me. In less than six weeks I was fully recovered from what looked to me like an everlasting sickness. I will always recommend Ferrozone feeling with sincerity that it is an honest, powerful, health-giving tonic."

Try Ferrozone today!

The nourishment and vital energy it supplies is wonderful.

Ferrozone makes you feel better at once, it's good for men, for women, for children—just the thing for everybody seeking better health. Sold by all dealers 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50

Theatrical

The artistic treat of the season was given at the Grand Opera House last night when Mr. John Griffith and an able supporting cast, presented "Othello." The piece was produced under I.O.O.F. auspices, and the order is to be commended on the success of the production both from a dramatic and financial standpoint. The crowd was large and thoroughly appreciative and several curtain calls were accorded Mr. Griffith and his company. The well known tragedian, has favored Peterborough before, but last night he was seen to better advantage than on any other occasion of his appearance here.

He gave a vivid study of the passionately emotional Moore, and was effective in all the phases of his portrayal. His interpretation was a robust and yet scholarly one.

As the treacherous Iago, Mr. Pedro DeCordoba shared the honors with Mr. Griffith. The part he essayed is a most difficult one and he was strikingly successful in the reading of it. His presence a graceful and easy presence and was superb in his pantomimic action and physical appeal.

Miss Edith Totten was excellent as Desdemona, wife of Othello, and Miss Gerarda Graham did commendable work in the character of Emelia, Iago's wife.

Allen Doibier was splendid as Cassio, lieutenant to the Moor. The scenic effects were attractive and in harmony with the general tone of the presentation.

Degree Team Here

The degree staff of Kawartha Rebecca Lodge, I.O.O.F., No. 75, visited Peterborough on Monday evening and conferred degrees on the members of the Peterborough lodge of Rebecca. This was the second anniversary of the institution of the Electric City lodge, and the Lindsay degree team exemplified their work last evening in a most creditable manner. They were right royally treated by Peterborough Rebekahs during their stay in the city.—Lindsay Watchman-Warder.

SUFFRAGETTES IN COURT EXAMINE CABINET MINISTERS

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 21.—The Suffragettes succeeded in bringing two members of the cabinet, viz., Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, and Herbert John Gladstone, secretary of state for home affairs, as witnesses in the Bow street police court this morning.

The occasion was the trial of Mrs. and Miss Pankhurst, and Mrs. Drummond, who were charged with inciting disorder when they appealed for the public to help them to rush the House of Commons, and seventeen others who were arrested on October 17 on a charge of disorderly conduct.

A large crowd, mostly of Suffragettes gathered in the court room. Miss Pankhurst examined the two ministers and the purport of her questions, many of which were not allowed by the judge, was to show that if the government gave the women a right to vote the disturbances would soon come to an end.

After examining the two cabinet ministers, which lasted all day, Miss Pankhurst announced that she had 50 more witnesses to call. Mrs. and Miss Pankhurst and Mrs. Drummond were remanded until Friday. The others will be heard tomorrow.

Fish with Gill Nets on Bay of Quinte

(Special to The Times.)

Bellville, Oct. 21.—Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., has secured for the farmers on the shores of the Bay of Quinte, the privilege of catching fish for their own use, but not for sale, with 100 feet gill nets during the open season. It is a valuable privilege, and will be greatly appreciated.

Bad Fire at Beloail, Mt., Loss is $10,000

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 21.—Beloail Mountain which overhangs the south bank of the Richelieu river, about 21 miles from this city, and which has been the property of the Campbells, the seniors of the district, was ravished by fires which broke out on Monday afternoon, and has been raging for the past two years. It was only got under control this morning. Many valuable properties, owned by Sir George Drummond and other prominent Montrealers, were threatened, but as it is the loss is estimated at $10,000. Many neighboring farmers have suffered heavy loss. Col. Bruce Campbell, the senior, aided by many neighbors fought incessantly until the flames were conquered.

Young Man with a Police Record

Brockville, Oct. 21.—Ambrose Gedkins, a young man who possesses a police record since he was 10 years of age, was today sentenced to the Kingston Penitentiary, after being found guilty of stealing $10 from a farmer by whom he was employed. Gedkins has served three terms in the Central, and many in the county jail for petty thefts.

Shot as Result of Old Feud

(Special to The Times.)

Dadeville, Ala., Oct. 21.—Jack Henderson, a farmer of Talla Pousa county, was shot and killed on the public square here last night, by J. Fletcher Turwe, the local representative in the lower house. It is reported that the tragedy is the result of an old feud, which has existed between the two men for years.

Old Soldier Made Escape from Night Riders while Comrade was Lynched

(Special to The Times.)

Union City, Tenn., Oct. 21.—Col. R. Z. Taylor, the aged Trenton lawyer, who was taken from a hotel at Walnut Log at the same house as Capt. Rankin, who was lynched on Monday night, has turned up near Tipton, Tenn., having escaped from the night riders an hour after Rankin was hanged. The masked men got into a dispute among themselves as to what was the best thing to do with him. Some favored killing him, while others favored holding him to force him to consent to their demands for fishing in Reel Foot Lake. While the men were thus engaged, Taylor, despite his years, broke away from his guards and ran towards the bayou leading up from the lake and jumped in and swam across. He was fired at many times by his assailants but soon was lost in the darkness. He made for the woods and when daylight broke he did not know where to go. He was afraid to return to Walnut Log and later on was found near Tipton half the worse for his experience.

A Talk on Shakespeare

Mr. John Griffith the actor, gave a talk on Shakespeare yesterday afternoon to the pupils of the Collegiate Institute. Mr. Griffith spoke in the assembly hall of the school and the occasion marked the first time the hall was used. Its acoustics are splendid and the speaker was heard to great advantage.

From Mr. Griffith's thorough knowledge of the works of England's greatest bard, his address was of absorbing interest and most instructive as well. His possesses an unusually powerful and musical voice and has much magnetism as a speaker.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

Owes Cure to Zam Buk

Prominent Manager's Telling Testimony.

Mr. D. R. Gourlay, advertising manager for the well-known piano firm of Gourlay, Winter & Leeming, Toronto and Winnipeg, is amongst the prominent men and women who testify to Zam-Buk's great curative power. He writes to the Company as follows:—

"Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in stating that upon the recommendation of a relative I purchased a box of your remedy (Zam-Buk), and by a few applications entirely cured a very severe sprain of the back. While not given to indiscriminate use of, or belief in, patent medicines, I can conscientiously recommend Zam-Buk.

"Sincerely yours,

"(Signed) D. R. Gourlay."

That is just where Zam-Buk proves its superiority! It is treated by men and women who have tried it, as altogether different to ordinary preparations. Doctors, hospital nurses, trainers, matrons of convalescent homes—all give Zam-Buk a good word; and better still they use it. Zam-Buk is as good for muscular stiffness, sprains, rheumatism and sciatica as it is for skin troubles. Hockey players and athletes in general find it invaluable. For eruptions, pustules, scalp sores, itch, eczema, ulcers, boils, abscesses, blood poison, cuts, burns, bruises, and abrasions, it is a speedy cure. Takes the soreness out of wounds almost instantly, and kills all disease germs, thus preventing festering and inflammation. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes for $2.50. Send 1c. stamp for trial box.

Roosevelt an Associate Editor

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 21.—President Roosevelt has made a contract with Outlook, whereby he becomes associated editor with Dr. Lyan Abbott of the Outlook, after he retires from the presidency. The Outlook is greatly interested in the Congo Free State, and the many extraordinary stories from there of the cruelty practiced upon the natives engaged in the rubber industry. It is said that President Roosevelt will make a personal investigation on Congo conditions, and report to the Outlook.

English Parliament Facing the Serious Problem of the Unemployed

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 21.—The very serious matter of the unemployed came up for discussion in the House of Commons this afternoon. A larger dole of money than was handed out last year, is required. The expidating of the naval program was the only other plan unfolded by Premier Asquith to meet the trouble. The gravity of the case can be realized from the fact that hundreds of thousands of men are on the verge of starvation on account of the lack of work. The premier stated that he could not undertake to grapple with the permanent cause thereof until the next session.

The government he said was prepared to provide a fund of $1,500,000 to help the unemployed and that the admiralty was ordering nine torpedo boat destroyers and five armored cruisers to cost $12,500,000. This order is being given two months early than was originally intended.

The premier made a bid for recruits, saying that the war office was ready to take on 24,000 for the winter training course.

These proposals quite failed to meet the demands of the labor members of the house.

GOVERNMENT WILL SPEND OVER $200,000 IN PRINCE RUPERT

(Special to The Times.)

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 21.—The government arrangement with the Grand Trunk Pacific for the improvements in Prince Rupert has been announced. The government will spend $200,000 on sidewalks, roads and sewers, three-quarters of which will be refunded by the railway. The engineers will get out plans forthwith and when ready the government will call for tenders. As soon as the surveys are completed the government will select its holdings; then the price will be fixed for the lots. No definite arrangements have been made for the sale of lots but it is likely they will be sold by auction some time after May 1st.

The Tramp Nuisance, What Can be Done?

Observing an item in the Mail and Empire about tramps robbing a farm house near Strathroy, the director of Charities and the Commons, a weekly journal of philanthropy, has forwarded an article dealing with the subject of tramps generally. The author is Orlando F. Lewis, secretary of the National Committee on Vagrancy, who is gathering statistics on the tramp problem with a view of impressing on the public its extreme importance. From an economic point of view tramps deserve to be taken seriously, for it has been estimated that they cost the American railroads alone $25,000,000 a year.

TRAMPS AND RAILROADS.

According to W. H. Cannff, president of the New York, Chicago, and St. Louis Railroad, 163 men were ejected from one of the company's trains in a journey of 132 miles one day in June last. Typical depredations are hold-ups and breaking into cars and stations. One official says that there are 10 per cent. more masterless men roaming the country than there were a year ago. Another puts the increase at 25 per cent., and the figures of both are apparently calculated from the increase of crime. Instances of brakesmen and conductors being killed or assaulted in attempting to eject trespassers are alarmingly common. Even when the "hoboes" are successfully ejected, and the brakesman and the conductor are unscathed, the railway has reason to fear them, for they frequently avenge themselves by destroying railway property, and by making fires on the right of way. Indeed, when the damage they do is taken into consideration, it seems probable that the cheaper plan for the railways would be to carry the tramps free on their freight trains.

HOBOES AND TEGGMEN.

We quote from the pamphlet:

"In some of the Eastern States there is a plague of yeggmen committing petty thefts, breaking into stores, robbing farm houses, and in general committing various kinds of lawlessness. These 'yeggs' are accustomed to travel on freight trains. Fortunately for a woman who had been threatened by a vagrant in Camden, New Jersey, recently, her husband was at home and gave the beggar a sound thrashing. When such things happen the police often make a "round-up", which, because spasmodic and because the vagrants are frequently let off with a suspended sentence, has little effect. A New Yorker interested in the tramp question, who for a year has gathered from all over the United States clippings relating to vagrancy, says that the most striking thing about the clippings is the entire absence of plans anywhere for treating the question of vagrancy systematically. He also states that far too frequently there come to his attention reports of most atrocious assaults upon women and children, these brutal crimes being possible because of the continued indifference displayed by most communities toward any systematic plan for reducing vagrancy.

WHAT CAN BE DONE.

Several courses are suggested by Mr. Lewis as tending to abate the tramp nuisance. We can refuse to feed tramps, except in return for work done. We can also bestir ourselves to have magistrates impose longer sentences. So far as possible there should be closer co-operation between railway and city police. Obvious vagrants should not be tolerated upon the streets. Mr. Lewis says that so long as the expenses of jails and workhouses are borne by municipalities there will be reluctance on the part of the municipality to make more arrests than are necessary. He argues that the State should bear the cost of these institutions. Most important of all, in Mr. Lewis' opinion, it is that every sentence passed on a vagrant should be accompanied by hard labor. Statistics show that wherever the laborers are made to work in contingment they are scarce. Mere idle incarceration they endure with equanimity.

WANTED—A POLICE SYSTEM.

He notes with approval that a bill is to be introduced in the New York Legislature to establish a labor colony, to which habitual vagrants shall be committed on indeterminate sentences. Such colonies have given good results in Germany. So far as we in Ontario are concerned with the tramp nuisance, our relief will come when there is some intelligent and systematic police system that places under one responsible head all the county constables, detectives, and city and railway police in the province. It is generally admitted that our present system is an unique survival that is grotesquely unsuited for the country's requirements. The tramp problem is only one of the nuisances that a proper police system will abolish.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ex's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Sympathy

A large touring automobile containing a man and his wife met a load of hay in a very narrow road. The woman declared that the farmer must back out, but her husband contended that she was unreasonable.

"But you can't back the automobile so far," she said, "and I don't intend to move for anybody. Besides, he should have seen us."

The husband pointed out that this was impossible, owing to an abrupt turn in the road.

"I don't care," she insisted, "I won't move if I have to stay here all night."

Her husband was starting to argue the matter, when the farmer, who had been sitting quietly on the hay, interrupted:

"Never mind, sir!" he exclaimed, with a sigh, "I'll try to back out. I've got one just like her at home."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sent on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

THE STUDENT AT SEVENTY-TWO

The announcement that Lord Brassey began at 72 the study of German in order that he might be able to read the memoirs of Prince Bismarck in the original naturally recalls the story, says the Woodstock Sentinel-Review, of the noble Roman who began the study of Greek at 80.

People who never undertake, of their own free will, for their own purpose and by their own efforts, to master a foreign language deprive themselves of a very fascinating experience. The study of a foreign language at school is too often undertaken as a disagreeable task, a work of necessity, perhaps, or a burdensome duty; but the man who begins the study either for the sake of study, or because the language is the key to some precious literary treasure, is likely to find the work a source of constant and exhilarating pleasure.

And after one has mastered some general principles of grammar, it is wonderful how easy and pleasurable the study of a foreign language becomes. It may be difficult for the man advanced in years to acquire a foreign tongue; but this is the age of print. Books and periodicals in all the principal languages of the world are easily obtained, and the student who applies himself industriously will surprise himself with the progress made in securing an acquaintanceship with the written or the printed word. A brief period devoted each day during a couple of years will enable the student to open to himself a new world in which he will find himself renewing something of the youthful joy of living.

The experience of Lord Brassey is not intended to encourage the putting off of such work till the age of seventy-two is reached. Experience shows that the earlier the task is attempted the easier it will be. Lord Brassey's example simply serves to show that even in what is called old age it is not too late to begin.

A GOLDEN RULE POLICY

The chief of police of Cleveland, Ohio, put into effect in January last a set of regulations described as the Golden Rule Policy. Under this policemen are requested to use judgment in dealing with offences which are merely violations of the city ordinances and punishable by a small fine. A drunken man is to be warned and sent home, not dragged to the station on his first offence. Two men fighting if they are not ordinarily of the fighting habit, are to be separated and invited to reason, but not arrested. The intent of the offender is to be considered. If he has offended through thoughtlessness, a spirit of frolic, sudden passion and not with malice aforethought he is to be let go. He and the force over him are to be spared the humiliation of idle arrest. The old offender of course is to meet out that handling as ever. He is his intent, or at least his habit to break the law, and if he is to be brought home to him that the law is stronger than he.

It is interesting to learn that after nine months' trial, the policy is pronounced an unqualified success and the discretion of the Cleveland policeman has been enlarged. It is reported that the number of arrests in Cleveland in eight months of this year has shown a decrease of more than 46 per cent. over the same period last year, while, at the same time, no greater number of serious crimes than usual have been reported, despite the large number of first offenders allowed to go who, under the old regime, would have been arrested. It is reported too that in neighboring cities which have followed the Cleveland example, the policy has resulted in the maintenance of order with a decrease of arrests.

How far it would be safe for the average community to rely upon the judgment of the individual policeman it would be hard to determine without trial, but a plan similar to the Cleveland plan has obtained in Toronto for several years in respect of drunkenness and if we mistake not some smaller offences and it has worked well. The efficient performance of the protective function of the police has not been impaired and the number of arrests and trials has been of course much less relatively than it would have been if the police dragnet had landed every small offender. Some such plan might be worth a trial in Ottawa if Ottawa were ever to develope a noticeable tendency to petty law breaking.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW MILITIA

Australia is going in for compulsory military training. This is not conscription in the European sense. It does not compel every man to give up two or more years of his life to the army, nor does it propose to maintain so large a standing army as this would create. But the Australian plan will give to every man military training and fit him to effectively serve under the colors should the occasion arise. Beginning at the age of twelve the new law—it is a Government measure—compels every youth to take military training for one hour a week and four clear days yearly. When the youth reaches eighteen, he will have to take military training for eighteen clear days every year for three years; and, for five years longer, an annual training of seven clear days.

This is a pretty large order; but Australia is thoroughly convinced of the necessity of arming itself if it is to protect its unpeopled territory from the overflowing millions of crowded Asia. This system will make of every man in the country a trained soldier; and it will not require a great deal of his time. If the military training from twelve years to eighteen be interpreted to mean little more than school exercises and a few days camping, it will be an excellent thing to teach all the boys to march and "form fours" and go through the drill manual as a sort of instinct. Then the eighteen days training from eighteen to twenty-one should give the young Australian a more practical acquaintance with the real work of fighting. Then, for five years more, he will be kept in a sort of "soft training." The demand is not much when the State considers itself in danger; and every patriotic young Australian will hail the opportunity with enthusiasm.

This additional pressure on Australia and on the Motherland means that Canada must begin to assume her responsibilities more seriously if she is to keep her place in the Empire. We cannot fall behind if we are to demand a hearing when questions of Imperial policy are up. We may not be in the peril which Australia believes to confront it—though we have our Asiatic frontier and have already had our Asiatic questions — but the Empire must must be "one and indivisible" if it is to last; and the peril of one part is the peril of the whole.

Reconstruction of G.T.R. Time Table

A reconstruction has been made in the arrangement of the complete time tables issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System which will be appreciated by the travelling public. Where tables are shown of the condensed time of trains between the several points where through equipment is run, this equipment is shown directly opposite the time table giving passengers the information they desire in the easiest possible way and without turning to other pages to find what equipment is on several trains shown. To make railway time tables plain to the travelling public is a problem, with the railways but this new innovation has overcome a considerable amount of trouble which has been experienced in the past in knowing what equipment could be found on through trains.

New York, Oct. 20.—A few years ago the Broadway Building Company purchased a plot of ground at the southeast corner of Broadway and Maiden Lane, 78 by 113 feet, for $1,250,000. The building involved another outlay of $1,000,000. This week they sold the property for $4,000,000.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN,—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingmen is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big moneylender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the unsold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Chilian Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been well said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stockgamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is not half populated or developed is of a piece with rest, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills waving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is world-wide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money, have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that men lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which moved Icarus, never shares its seeds, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have no money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the object party man is upon us. Let humanity have a chance. I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Buckhorn bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be treated with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Quaker Oats Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave, Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as in the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world of finance and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 169 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 20 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 15 years o Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,491,768, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 39 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the Bashi ake and northern waters.

Thus, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the steam railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other messages in the interests of the riding due to enunciation of Government policy, and in the interests of the city, will be delivered during the campaign.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

believed something was about to be wormed out of him), greeted Lounsbury good naturedly enough. Maryiya hurried up in a timid flutter to take his cap and coat, while facing him from the hearthside, her hair coiled upon her head like a crown, her gray eyes bright, her cheeks glowing, was a new Dallas.

"Well, how've you all been?" asked Lounsbury, accepting a bench.

"Oh, spright 'nough," answered the section boss, "but it's cold; it's cold. Keeps me tremblin' like a guilty nigger."

"You'll get over that," assured the other, rubbing the blood into his hands. "It's natural for you to be soft as chalk rock the first winter. You've been living south."

"Ah reckon," agreed Lancaster. He sat down beside the younger man, eying him closely. "How d' y' come t' git away fr'm business?" he queried.

"Well, you see," Lounsbury answered, "I've got an Al man in my Bismarck store, and at Clark's there's nothing to do weekdays hardly, so I just took some tobacco to Skinney's, where the boys could get at it, and loped down here." Then playfully, "But I don't see much happening in these parts." He stretched toward a window. "The town of Lancaster ain't growing very fast."

Dallas, seated on a bench with Maryiya, looked across at him smilingly. "I'm glad of it," she declared. "We ain't used to towns."

"You folks 've never lived in one?"

"No, we never even been in one."

He puckered his forehead. "Funny," he said. "Somehow, I always think of you two as town girls."

"Aw, shucks!" exclaimed Lancaster, scowling.

But Dallas was leaning forward, interested. "That's on account of our teachers," she said. "There was a schoolhouse up the track, in Texas, and we went to it on the hand car. Every year we had a different teacher, and all of 'em came from big eastern places like New Orleans or St. Louis. So—so, you see, we kinda got towny from our schoolma'ams."

"One had a gold tooth," put in Maryiya. Her eyes, wide with recollection, were fixed upon Lounsbury.

"But you passed through cities coming north," argued the storekeeper.

"N-n-so," said Dallas slowly. "We—we skirted 'em."

"What a pity!" he turned to the section boss.

"Pity!" echoed the latter. "Huh! You save you' pity. My gals is better off of they don' meet no town hoodlums."

It had been "soldier trash" before, now it was "town hoodlums." Lounsbury wondered why he had been allowed a second call. He glanced at the girls. There was a sudden shadow on each young face. He changed to the one and looked hard at it. How one of them would like his happiness—except in their home? And could tell them even that was threatened.

"Not by a long shot!" he vowed. "I'll trust old Michael."

He set himself to be agreeable, and especially toward the section boss. He told of the Norwegian at Medicine mountain and of the old man who lived with wife and children at the "little bend" up the river. He admired the Navajo blankets and explained their symbolic figures of men, animals and suns. He leaned back, clasping a knee, and branched into comical stories.

The little shack awoke to unaccustomed merriment. Lancaster warmed to the storekeeper's genial attentions and burst into frequent guffaws. Dallas and Maryiya followed his every word, breaking in from time to time with little gleeful laughs.

But in the midst of it there came from outside a startling interruption—shouts and a loud, pistol-like cracking, powdery swirls over the windows, a frightened lowing and heavy thumps against the shack.

The noise without produced a change within. Incredibly agile, Lancaster got to a pane; while Dallas, springing up, screened Maryiya and waited, as if in response.

Dark bulks now shot past, pursued by mounted men. But very soon the herd was gone, and all was again quiet. Then followed a moment that was full of embarrassment. Keenly, Lounsbury looked from father to daughter, the one striving to assume an easy air, the other incapable of hiding alarm. All at once he felt certain they shared old Michael's information. He determined to tell them that he, too, knew what and whom they feared.

"Expecting some one, Miss Dallas?" he asked tentatively.

The section boss hastened to answer. "Expectin' nothin'," he snapped. Then, to cut short any further questioning, "Dallas, y' clean forgot them mules t'day. Lawd help us, y' goin' t' let 'em starve?"

Lounsbury sat quiet, realizing that the team was but a pretext. The elder girl found her cloak, picked up a bucket and left the room. Maryiya shrunk into the dusk at the hearthside. Lancaster was hobbling up and down, his crutch ends digging at the packed dirt of the floor.

The storekeeper, putting aside his determination, went on as though he had not noticed the other's attitude. "The storm was hard on the stock last night. They must 'a' drifted thirty miles with it. Our loss is big, likely. The ranchers 'll bunch everything on four hoofs and drive 'em into the coulee. Cows 'll be out of the wind there and live on browse till the ground shows."

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—carries blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful, timely, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's a painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

sun as he was talking the section boss made himself ready for the cold. Before he had finished the elder man had disappeared.

Lounsbury was thoroughly provoked at the treatment shown him—he was hurt at the plain lack of faith. Again he considered what course to pursue. Granted the family knew all he could tell them, what could be gained by forcing the fact of his knowledge upon them? Nothing—unless it were more suspicion against himself. And if they were in ignorance—well, it was better than premature care. As before, he decided to remain silent and depend upon the pilot.

He glanced at Maryiya. On her father's departure she had moved out of the shadow. Now she was sitting bolt upright, with fingers touching the bench at either side. Her lips were half parted. She was watching Lounsbury wonderingly.

The moment their eyes met her own fell. She reached to the mantel for a beaded belt and began work upon it precipitately.

"What is the prairie princess doing?" he asked.

"Making something." She held the belt by one hand, to let it slip through the other.

He reached for it. "My, it's pretty! Wish you'd make me a watch fob like that."

She fumbled and dimpled. "I'd like to," she said.

"I'll wear it as an amulet." He gave her back the belt and their hands touched.

She started nervously.

"Why, Miss Maryiya!" he said gently. "You afraid of me?"

"No." It was whispered.

"Well, you mustn't be." His tone was one that might have been used to a child. "Since I rode here a month ago I've thought of you folks a lot. I'd like to do a real good turn for you. Perhaps it's because you girls seem so lonely"—

"We're not lonely," she declared. "The fort's near, and we can hear the band. And pa says there'll be three or four steamers go by next summer."

The storekeeper mentally kicked himself. "The idea of suggesting a thing like that," he growled inwardly, "when she hadn't even thought of it! John Lounsbury, you've got about as much sense as a fool mud hen."

"And," went on Maryiya, "there's the ladies at Fort Brannon. If pe"—She hesitated.

Lounsbury shook his head, smiling. "Well, I wouldn't count on those if I (To be continued.)

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

London, October 21.—At Durban, Sir H. De Villiers, speaking at the Government banquet, finally expressed the belief now animating the whole of South Africa that union was the only cure for the suspicions aroused by racialism. He defended the privacy of the conference, but remarked that he had never heard speeches more statesmanlike or participated in a debate which maintained a higher level. Just as the celebration of the landing of Champlain brought together the English and the French in Canada, so eighty years hence the descendants of the English and the Dutch would congregate at Cape Town and celebrate the tercentenary of the landing of Van Riebeck.

General Smuts appeared to the Natalians to banish the suspicion that the union would be employed to secure Dutch domination.

North Bay, Ont., October 21.—Western traffic on the Canadian Pacific Railway is again tied up on account of the burning of a bridge near Missanabie, 249 miles west of North Bay, which occurred on Saturday. All trains will be delayed many hours. The bridge is supposed to have been set alight by falling embers from a passing engine.

London, October 21.—Prof. Goldwin Smith, writing to the Manchester Guardian, says strenuous efforts are being made by Imperialists to detach Canada more completely from her own hemisphere and attach her more closely to Great Britain, with little success.

We get on pretty well with the French except when they become instruments of Papal policy, but I could give you strong and unpleasant proof in connection with our war against the half-breeds of Batoche, of the strength of race sentiment in French breasts.

The most lively movement of a political kind in that quarter just now is one in favor of French Nationalism, headed by that rising politician, Henri

Weary, Worn Out Tired

If You Find Poorly this Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys fail to work properly, health surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton, of Lowestown. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves were strung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depression, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned off the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvelous, I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure, helpful for old and young.

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact, that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 10 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Chemong House was Destroyed

The home of George McHugh of Chemong Indian village, was totally destroyed by fire, shortly before daylight a few mornings ago. The fire was not the result of a bush fire, the origin of it not being known. The house was a frame one, and not very large.

McHugh suffers a considerable loss by the burning of his property. The contents were all burned and the total loss is estimated at about five hundred dollars. The flames were fought as best as could be but owing to the prevalent dryness everything was soon wiped away.

Novel Protest Made Against Candidates

La Baie du Febvre, Que., October 22.—Yesterday, at half-past eleven o'clock a protest was signed by Mr. Aime Boucher, notary, in the name of Mr. Ovide Lamothe, elector, to the returning officer of Yamaska, against the nomination of Hon. J. A. Ouimet, as candidate, for the reason that Mr. Ouimet, being a pensioner of the State was ineligible to run.

The protest is based upon the following argument: That Hon. Joe. Alderic Ouimet was, by Letters Patent issued under the Great Seal of Canada, and bearing date of the 19th May, 1896, appointed Puisne Judge of the Court of King's Bench for the Province of Quebec; That on the 27th January, 1908, he wrote to the Premier, resigning on the plea of ill-health; that on receipt of a medical certificate proving the condition of Judge Ouimet's health, the latter's resignation was accepted and in consequence Letters Patent of the 3rd February, 1908, were issued granting him as an invalid an annuity for life of $4,666.66, being the pension awarded in accordance with the Federal Statutes. That before the grant of the said Letters Patent, Hon. J. A. Ouimet was receiving a salary of $7,000 yearly; that the said J. A. Ouimet, who still retains the Letters Patent granting him his pension, has no right to present himself as candidate for election; that it is contrary to the principles of the Act of Settlement of Great Britain that anyone receiving a pension from the Crown shall be elected as a member of the Canadian House of Commons.

Ottawans are Involved in a Divorce Suit

Ottawa, October 22. — Mr. William Jamieson, a former well known resident of Ottawa, who for years was with his father in the drug business on Wellington street, and Mrs. Albert Moyer, South Orange, N. J., who before marriage was Miss Flora Howard, daughter of "Gat" Howard, and principals in a divorce suit just filed in the Supreme Court of Newark, New Jersey.

Mrs. Moyer, who is the respondent in the case, was a talented young woman, and made many friends in the Capital while she was here. Only three weeks ago she was visiting friends in this city and intimated at the time that there was trouble brewing between her husband and herself. To some, therefore, the news of the divorce proceedings will not come as a very great surprise.

Mr. Moyer, in his affidavit, states that he had twice forgiven his wife for her conduct, the first time after she had avowed her love for another, and again when she had broken her promise to forsake that man. The little girl is now with her mother, at Mr. Moyers' home in South Orange, the father and husband is with his mother and sister in New York City.

Mr. Moyer is manager of large cement works in New York.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 10 o'clock on Tuesday, 17th November, 1908, for the works connected with the construction of the Lindsay Sections of the Canal.

Plans, specifications, and the form of the contract to be entered into, can be seen on and after the 19th October, 1908, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places forms of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labor, which Schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000.00 must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

The Call of Nature

When Nature is abused she first calls lightly and then in trumpet tones to the thoughtful man to "get right."

A slight "touch of indigestion," feeling "a little indisposed," "not so well," are the first whisperings of trouble—the warnings

One can then turn to

GRAPE-NUTS

and be sure of good results. It is Nature's food improved. Worn out tissues are renewed, weakened digestive organs are strengthened. Good health is quickly wooed and won. Coupled with these certain good results the pleasure of eating Grape-Nuts is a pleasure-plus.

Dame Nature Hints

When the Food is not Suited,

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food; the old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried all kinds of breakfast foods, but they were all soft, starchy messes, which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have any headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way. Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

Mr. Foy is Right They Say in Ottawa

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—While there is little information available here in respect to the charges that the electoral lists in Northern Ontario are being stuffed, it is admitted in Government circles that probably a good many of those whose names have been put on have not resided long enough in the districts to give them the right to vote. The Dominion authorities admit that the Provincial officials are perfectly within their rights in taking steps to prevent men voting who are not entitled to do so.

Every Girl Must Marry in Australia

Among primitive peoples marriage usually is more insistent and girls are courted in even a less romantic manner. Among the Australians every girl must marry, whether she will or not. It is considered wonderfully strange is a girl is twelve years old and is still unmarried. This is not because the girls or parents are romantic, but the parents feel that a girl is only worth the toil she gives.

"The man," says the Rev. H. C. Meyer, "regards them more as slaves than in any other light. They are a necessary commodity, valuable only as long as useful, as to-morrow's sun after they serve their purpose."

Wives still, their masters can throw them out and divorce them at will. The Kaffirs buy their wives with cows and do not pay more than they can help. A woman no sooner enters her new home than she is given some task to perform to her lord can see if he has made a good bargain. He values her less than his cows. This is seen by the fact that he permits her to do all the work without need to his cattle and enter the kraal where they are kept.

C. G. E. Gets Big Contract from Hydro-Electric Power Commission

Toronto, Oct. 22.—The tender of the Canadian General Electric Co., of Peterborough, and the Canadian Westinghouse Co. of Hamilton, all things considered, are the most favorable tenders received. As may be readily understood the equipment and apparatus of these companies are not exactly alike, and in some respects the one excels that of the other and vice versa, and in order, by selection, to get the best results, it looks at present as though the amount which is over one-half a million of dollars should be apportioned between these two companies.

Another meeting of the Hydro-Electric Commission was held today, and the above statement was given out.

Legal and other details of the McGuigan contract have been occupying the attention of the commission and Solicitor Lobb for some time past. It is understood they have now been all straightened out and the signing of the contract will follow forthwith.

Work will at once be undertaken by the contractors, and considerable headway will be made this fall before the snow flies.

In response to a general demand by the press and public, and the various municipalities interested, the Hydro-Electric Commission desires to say;

"That the engineers of the company have adjusted the details of the construction of the transmission line with the contractors, the F. H. McGuigan Construction Co., and work will be commenced at once.

Tenders for the electrical equipment and apparatus required by the commission have been received and are being checked as to their technical details by the engineers of the commission. This is something that requires the utmost care and caution, in fairness to the people, be rushed through in any haphazard fashion. Although the actual figures cannot be given at present it may be stated that they are considerably below the estimates made by the engineers of the commission for that portion of the work.

Port Hope Man Gives Evidence in Trial of Wholesale Grocers

Toronto, Oct. 22.—Remarkable stories of partial business failures alleged to have been brought about by the illegal combination of business houses were told in Chief Justice Falconbridge's court this morning by out of town witnesses appearing against the seven indicted members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, who are charged with conspiracy.

UNIFORM RATES.

Mr. John Curtis, of Port Hope, said his wholesale department run in connection with his retail store, had been wiped out by unfair freight rates on sugar, these rates being established by the Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

"I established my retail and wholesale grocery about 25 years ago," said Mr. Curtis, "and never was allowed to become a member of the combine."

"What was that last word?" asked Mr. Johnston in surprise.

"I said 'combine.' It's a little mistake I sometimes fall into. I should say 'Guild'."

"What are your main objections against the present system adopted by the Guild?"

"I think any jobber with the money, should be allowed to buy from any manufacturer, and that there should be no discrimination in freight rates."

Cross-examination by Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., for the defence, brought from witness an explanation of the present "equalized freight rates" on sugar prescribed by the Guild as follows;

For hundred pounds of sugar (not in carload lots). From Montreal; To Port Hope, 65 cents; to Peterborough, 12 cents; Lindsay, 60 cents; Toronto, 10 cents; Belleville, 10 cents; Oshawa, 24 cents; Scarboro, 19 cents; Hamilton, 11 cents.

"In Port Hope I paid 13 cents per hundred freight on sugar, higher than my competitors in Peterborough," said witness vehemently, "and it wiped me out of the wholesale business."

"Did you ever try to buy sugar from the manufacturers?"

SHUT OUT AT MONTREAL.

"Once I went to the Ridpath Refinery in Montreal, told them I had the cash and wanted to buy sugar direct. They asked me if I was a member of the Guild, and when I said 'no,' they told me I couldn't get anything from them."

"It was because you were not strictly a wholesaler?"

"I suppose so, and also because I was not a member of the Guild."

"Now don't you know that the refiners and other manufacturers sell to a great many wholesalers outside the Guild?"

"No, I didn't know that."

"What other objections have you to the Guild's system?"

"I don't like the practice of "buying merchants to buy goods."

I have known travellers to hand a retailer 25c. in cashs to bribe him for an order. With a price list capable of fluctuation. I could bargain with a traveler for the best possible cash rate. Then, too, I think I should be able to get my freight cheaper at Port Hope than a hundred miles further on."

"Do you know that it costs a great deal more to ship from Toronto to Calgary than Toronto to Vancouver?"

"No, I didn't know that."

"Do you know that it might be cheaper to get freight sent to Toronto, a competing point, than to Port Hope, a non-competing point?"

"Yes; that may be true."

"And if the Guild could so arrange matters that all wholesalers should have their freight laid down in Canada at the same price, you would endorse their action?"

"Yes."

WORRIED TO DEATH

INDIGESTION, LOSS OF SLEEP, HEART PALPITATION.

A Case that Proves Prompt Action is Wise when Health is Poor.

"At night I would wake up with vague feelings of fear and numbness in my hands and other parts of the body," writes Mr. E. X. Simeaton, of St. John's. "I had grown thin and pale, and at night it was very difficult to get enough warmth in my feet to get asleep. My digestion was poor, and appetite very uncertain. The form of nervousness that worried me most was starting at every little thing, which resulted in such violent heart action as sometimes frightened me. Finally I had to give up my work, which was inside office work, so languid, nervous and weak had I become. Through the intervention of a friend I was induced to use Ferrozone. My appetite improved at once, circulation also improved and Ferrozone accomplished the renewal of my blood and natural warmth seemed to come back to my limbs. At the same time Ferrozone built up my constitution. I became quite strong and resumed my occupation. In brief, I am well."

Ferrozone is the only remedy of its kind in the world—it makes you feel better at once; when you are tired, dull, dispirited—when you feel there is nothing in life for you, that's the time to take Ferrozone.

Aid. Morgan Wants Walk in Front of the Hospital

An exciting discussion took place yesterday afternoon in front of the city buildings, in which Ald. Harry Morgan upheld the rights of what he contended were the rights of Ashburnham. Those engaged in the controversy were Ald. Morgan, Street Commissioner Evans and Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine.

It appears that the east ward representative is particularly anxious to have a gravelled walk laid in front of St. Joseph's Hospital, to the walk from St. Luke's church. The walk is laid on both sides up to the hospital grounds, and there is no reason why it should not be continued would improve the appearance of the street and would no doubt be used to a certain extent. The alderman is, he says, determined to have the walk laid and he is wrestling with a petition and is after the chairman of the Board of Works.

Commissioner Evans asked Ald. Morgan why he had not got his petition in long ago. The matter has been hanging fire for a year or more and nothing was said about it until recently, when it is almost too late. The Board of Works has more work ahead of it now than can possibly be done. Many petitions for walks have been in for a long time,

The Heaviest Snow Storm in Years Broke Over the West on Tuesday, Has Continued Incessantly Since

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 22.—One of the worst snow storms that ever visited this city is now at its height, and has completely demoralized the railway train service. The storm started the night before last, and has continued incessantly with great ferocity. Ten inches have already fallen, and a furious gale is blowing the snow into the cuts in the railways and filling them up. In many of the cuts the snow is already over ten feet deep.

The C.P.R. has rushed snow plows to this district and they are working hard to get the tracks cleared, but comparatively little headway can be made while the snow and wind continue. The gale is so strong that the cuts fill up as fast as the plows open them up.

The Atlantic Express and the Imperial Limited, are both blocked. The west bound trains yesterday were tied up. There are no trains moving at all. None have arrived from the West today, and it is doubtful when they will. In the meantime the C.P.R. is providing accommodation for the passengers until such times as they can be forwarded to their destinations.

The storm which broke on Tuesday night was entirely unexpected. The snow is quite soft but the blizzard is binding.

Forest Fires Killed Many of the Trout

(Special to The Times.)

Malon, N.Y., Oct. 22.—It has just been discovered that the forest fires in the Adirondack district, have been playing havoc with the trout, with which many of the streams in the purest district were well stocked. Thousands of dead fish have been found floating on the surface of the stream and along the shores. It is thought they have been killed by impurities in the water caused by the smoke and ashes.

Three Men Were Scalded to Death

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 23.—Chief Engineer John Peterson and three assistants were scalded to death on board the steam barge Maggie Marshall, from Manistee, in midlake, off Kenosha, last night, when a steam pipe in the engine room burst. Escaping steam killed the men at their posts. Three members of the crew reached Kenosha after swimming a mile against a heavy wind.

The steamer was making its last trip of the season, and the crew of thirteen was making merry when the accident occurred. The main valve of the engine was blown into the stairway and the men on the upper part of the steamer closed the hatches. The steamer then anchored, started the bells and put up a flag of distress. As no assistance came, three sailors volunteered to attempt to reach shore. The sea was high, and when within a mile from shore their boat capsized and the men were compelled to swim the rest of the distance.

Dr. Harris Gave the First Lecture

Rev. Dr. Harris gave his first lecture of a series in the Y.W.C.A. hall yesterday afternoon when a large number were present. Dr. Harris is a well-known Bible lecturer. He is here in connection with the Y.W.C.A. Bible Study work.

Last night he spoke to a large congregation on "The Tabernacle," Rev. Robt. Pogue occupied the chair.

The lectures will be continued this this afternoon and evening and Saturday evening in in the Y.W.C.A. hall, Sunday morning in St. Paul's church, and Sunday evening in the Murray street Baptist church.

Hit by a Train and Seriously Injured

(Special to The Times.)

Belleville, Oct. 22.—Geo. Badgley, a farmer of Prendergast, about four miles from here, was nearly killed today, while driving a horse and buggy over a railway crossing. A passenger train from the west struck the rig before he could get across. The horse was killed instantly and the buggy was carried on the cow catcher a distance of 200 yards before the engine could be stopped. Badgley's recovery is doubtful.

Chief of Detective Agency Arrested

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 22.—Wm. Huckle, who styles himself as chief of the International Private Detective Agency, was arrested here today on a charge of blackmail and extortion. The complainant is Geo. Ireland. It appears that the accused claims to possess evidence against Ireland of criminal assault, but said he would take no action if Ireland gave him $10. Ireland forked over the money.

Huckle also made insinuating remarks to the local police to the effect that he could divulge some interesting information.

John Tearney, assistant chief of the same detective agency has also been arrested.

Fight Bank Robbers, Shots Exchanged

Duquoin, Ill., Oct. 22.— The village of Hurst, ten miles southeast of Duquoin, was the scene of a daring bank robbery early this morning. M. B. Pulley, a clerk, who was sleeping in a building near the bank, was awakened about 3 o'clock by two explosions. He rushed into the street and was promptly made the target of the robbers' revolvers, but escaped unharmed.

In the meantime a score of citizens had arrived and a pitched fight ensued many shots being exchanged. The robbers finally escaped on horseback in the darkness with $2,700 in currency. A posse of citizens, accompanied by bloodhounds, are in pursuit.

Swenty Dollar Fine, Cruelty to Animals

Toronto, Oct. 22.—James O'Reilly of Bangraft, was this afternoon fined $20 and costs for cruelty to animals. A car carrying 28 cattle, 114 sheep, 4 calves, and 6 hogs, shipped by one of his employes, fell under the charge of a constable on duty at the markets, and he had O'Reilly summoned.

Mr. G. S. Hodgson, who appeared for O'Reilly, asked for a light penalty, as Mr. O'Reilly had not personally seen to the loading of the car, as he was in Toronto at the time, and because some of the cattle had died en route.

"He has warned the man repeatedly to be careful about loading," said Mr. Hodgson, "and I am also interested that in this case the railway company sent a car which was lower than the one ordered."

Inspector Stephen said that the space allotted to the cattle was only four feet high, the upper part being boarded off to give room for the smaller animals.

"Three cattle were held in that unnatural position for seventeen hours, one of them dying on the day," said the inspector. "It is an aggravated case, and Mr. O'Reilly has been previously cautioned. Just imagine the condition of those beasts, 112 of them in the car."

"Your worship will note that some of the cattle died on the way; and Mr. O'Reilly has already lost money," urged Mr. Hodgson.

"That makes it all the worse. I only wish that the guilty man could be fined. The only way you can get at men like that is to fine them, I suppose," said his worship as he imposed sentence.

Lawn Bowling Still Popular

Although this is near the end of October, the lawn bowlers are out every day on the club greens, and they are enjoying the game as much as they did at the opening of the season. The weather has been exceptionally warm and dry and it is not often that they can play so long. Yesterday afternoon a bunch of enthusiasts were out and they had a great time. Games will be on every fine afternoon until the snow flies.

Clouds of Smoke at Fenelon Falls

On Sunday afternoon and evening and on Tuesday evening, the town was enveloped in smoke caused by bush fires in this vicinity. The smoke was so dense on Sunday night that the brightest electric lights looked at a distance like so many tallow dips. It was reported at that time that the woods at Grand Island were on fire. These reports had a slight foundation, as the fire broke out there, which, however, was fortunately extinguished before it made any considerable headway. The chief conflagration was in the direction of Mr. F. Smithurman's farm, and was caused originally by burning out stumps, the wind carrying the cinders to the woods nearby, and everything being in such a dry condition and favorable to the spread of the flames, it was not long before they were burning briskly.

Deseronto Hotelman in Serious Trouble

(Special to The Times.)

Belleville, Oct. 22.—John Freeman, a Deseronto hotelkeeper, charged with an infraction of the liquor license act. He is said to have sold liquor to a drunken man, who laid out of doors all night and died from exposure. The case, after several witnesses were heard, was enlarged until Nov. 4th.

Polls Disfranchised in West Algoma

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—The voters lists for the polling subdivisions of Louisbourg, Treat Lake and Belview in West Algoma, which were not completed in time for the election on Monday, were held by the government officials here that a polls can be held there. These lists were prepared under the new act which provided for new lists to be compiled in New Ontario. It is commanded that under section 21 of the Election Act, the provincial lists would be available under the existing circumstances.

It is held by the state department, however, that the new act passed at the last session of parliament providing for the preparation of new lists in New Ontario, supersedes section 21, and that the provisions of the latter are not applicable. There is not time to replace the federal lists for the elections.

According to the view of the officials the three polling sub-divisions will be disfranchised, but this will not affect the legality of the election in the rest of the riding.

LATER

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—The authorities have stated definitely that Searchmont, Belview and Treat Lake, in West Algoma, will be disfranchised.

Railway Man was Married

(Special to The Times.)

Quebec, Oct. 22.—James Oborne, general superintendent of the Ontario division of the C.P.R., was united in marriage in the cathedral here this afternoon by Rev. Dean Williams, to Miss Edith N. Simpson, daughter of the late Thomas Simpson, chief running superintendent of the Great Western Railway, in London, England.

Albert Martin's Body Found in the River

(Special to The Times.)

Sarnia, Oct. 22.—The body which was found in the St. Clair river near the Michigan shore, by the captain of a ferry boat, has been identified as that of Albert Martin, who was 21 years of age, and lived at Corunna, Ont., about eight miles from here. He had planned to his friends that he would have preserved so that if anything happened to him that saving a drowning man from drowning in Lake Ontario.

The relatives of the deceased say that he left home on October 3rd, and started out in a row boat, and had not been seen since. He was an expert swimmer, and it is believed that he came to his death by being run down by some freight schooner.

The King's Messenger is Dead

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 22.— Lieutenant Mountenay Jephson, who has been the King's messenger since 1891, and who was the Queen's messenger previously from 1885, died today. He commanded a detachment in the relief expedition under Stanley in 1887 to 1890. In 1894 he married the daughter of Addison E. Head of San Francisco.

Two Indians Were Thirteen Days in a Canoe at Sea

(Special to The Times.)

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 22.—Two Indians, lost from the schooner Thomas Beard, where brought here by the schooner Markland, were adrift in the open sea for thirteen days. All the food they possessed was three sea biscuits and no water whatever for ten days. The Indians allowed themselves one inch of biscuit per day for nine days. On the ninth day it rained and the water was caught in a sail. On the tenth day a seal was killed, and this they cooked in the bottom of the canoe. On the fourteenth day they landed at Bristol Bay, Unimak Island, from where they were finally rescued and brought to the city.

Methods of Alleged Powder Trust Exposed

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 22.—The methods alleged to have been employed by the Powder Trust to gain control of the powder trade in the United States, was described by Mr. H. B. Waddell, the former general sales agent in the States for a big powder company, in today's session in the hearing of the government's suit against the powder company for alleged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law. He declared that the defendant company now controlled from 85 to 90 per cent. of the gun powder trade and 90 per cent. of the blast powder trade. Today he told of the formation and absorption of the Southern Powder Co. "We went Southern Company as soon as they entered the market." The freight rates were controlled until the round-up in 1906. Mr. Waddell said the Southern Powder Co., was organized in Birmingham, Ala., with their trade restricted to Alabama and vicinity. The freight rates were systematized on all the railways out of Birmingham, and those rates were fixed so that powder could never net more than 70c. per keg, and then awaited developments. It was about a year later before the developments came. Then the total sales of the powder pool were 8,800,000 kegs, while the independants sold less than 200,000 kegs.

Wife Has Two Husbands and Keeps Up Two Homes

New York, Oct. 19.—Instances of a man maintaining two wives in different parts of the city are not rare, but it is not often that a woman gets into the limelight as the possessor of two husbands with whom she lived every day in the year. Mrs. Catharine Stroebel was such a versatile helpmeet, according to undisputed evidence furnished to-day before Justice Aspinall in the Brooklyn Supreme Court, where Philip Stroebel was awarded a decree of divorce from her.

Judge Aspinall was satisfied by the evidence that Catharine lived with Stroebel as his wife at 347 Stanhope street and with Jacob Valusse as his wife at Atlantic and Grant avenues, Richmond Hill. She was aided in her dual household accomplishments by the fact that Stroebel, whom she married in 1898, is an engineer and works nights, Valusse is a clerk and works in the daytime.

HOW WOMAN CHANGED NAMES.

The terms of Stroebel's employment forced him to leave his home at 6 o'clock in the evening. Before departing he would eat what corresponds to a day worker's breakfast. As soon as he was out of sight Mrs. Stroebel would put on her wraps, close up the house and hasten to Richmond Hill, where she would assume her position as Mrs. Valusse.

The clerking Valusse wound up his labor at 6 o'clock in the evening. By the time he got out to Richmond Hill his apparent wife would have dinner on the table for him. She would spend the night at Valusse's home and get up at 5.30 in the morning and prepare breakfast.

Valusse left his house about 6.30. His wife would then put on her wraps, close up the domicile, and hasten down to her home in Van Hope street to begin the day as Mrs. Stroebel. Stroebel would get home about 7.30, tired and sleepy, and wash the oil and coal dust from himself. Then he would sit down to a meal corresponding to a day worker's supper, after which he would go to bed.

DOUBLE LIFE IS DISCOVERED.

The double life was discovered by Stroebel's sister, Mrs. Matty Meyers, who called at the Stroebel home one evening and found it dark. Mrs. Meyers called again and found the house closed. This time she made inquiries among the neighbors, and learned that Mrs. Stroebel was in the habit of skipping away from home every evening after her husband's departure and remaining out until the next morning. She informed her husband, and together they did some sleuthing.

They lay in wait and trailed Mrs. Stroebel to Richmond Hill and saw her enter a house there. Mrs. Meyer asked a woman living across the street who lived on the corner.

"Mr. and Mrs. Valusse," replied the person addressed. "They are a strange couple. The wife goes away every morning and remains out all day. I suppose she works somewhere." And so it all came out. Stroebel lost no time in filing his divorce petition.

Col. Jeffrey Hertzel, who gave $75,000 to found a tuberculosis hospital in Montreal, has purchased a large house in Belmont Park, for $30,000, and the house will be started at once.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.— Hon. Thomas Greenway, ex-Premier of Manitoba, who has recently been appointed a member of the board of Railway Commissioners of Canada, is confined to his apartments at the Windsor Hotel suffering from a severe attack of asthma. He caught a severe cold while travelling to Ottawa from his home in Winnipeg about a week ago. He is not dangerously ill.

"I'm afraid," said the minister who was evidently fishing for a word of commendation, "that my sermon this morning was rather long."

"Oh, well," rejoined the good deacon, "don't let that worry you. Even if it was a trifle long, it wasn't very deep, so it averaged up all right."

Bright Prospects in the West

Winnipeg, Oct. 17.—Under the most favourable conditions the Manitoba Medical association held its first annual banquet and organization meeting at the convention held here last week. Over One hundred were in attendance and stirring addresses were delivered by many of those present. The following officers were elected for the first year; Dr. G. R. Jones (Winnipeg), president; Dr. J. A. McDonald (Brandon), vice-president; Dr. J. S. McRae (Neepawa) second vice-president; Dr. Jasper Halpenny (Winnipeg), secretary; and Dr. H. W. Kenny (Winnipeg), treasurer.

The Manitoba Golfing association will send ten men to Scotland to take part in the banquet of the Royal Caledonian club next winter. This was decided upon at the regular meeting of the Manitoba association held here last week. At Winnipeg the great annual carnival this season will be held on February 15, 1909, at which his excellency Earl Grey's new championship cup will be contested for. Earl Grey has been asked by the Executive of the Manitoba Curlers' association to accept of the office of honorary life patron.

Twenty-five men in the employ of the Great Northern Railway are surveying out a line between the Canadian boundary at Emerson, Man., and the city of Winnipeg. The proposed line will come northeast of the Red river, traversing through a rich section of wheat country which is now served entirely by the Canadian Pacific railway. The Great Northern purchased terminal property in Winnipeg two years ago, to the extent of $1,000,000, and it is understood that this property will now be improved by the erection of suitable station and freight sheds for the use of that company.

A deal involving $200,000 was completed last week when the Bank of Montreal purchased the Canada Permanent building site, at the corner of Main street and Portage avenue. The property has a frontage of 132 feet on Main street and 132 feet on Portage avenue east. Considering the standing of the Bank of Montreal and as an institution conspicuous for its conservatism in real estate investments, this purchase of one of four of the best corners in the city further demonstrates that those who are most familiar with Winnipeg's possibilities are acquiring central properties upon which they are erecting the most magnificent and costly of structures that even outdoes those in the metropolitan cities of the east and south.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sent on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

RUSHING PARLIAMENT.

If 150,000 determined men were to move in a body on Parliament, England would be confronted with the prospect of martial law. The army would be mobolized and the approaches to Trafalgar Square guarded with cannon.

The fact that the police, aided by a detachment of troops, were able to cope with the huge mob that besieged the House of Commons shows the disadvantage under which women must always labor when they seek to measure strength with men. By resorting to force the champions of woman's suffrage abandon all the ground they have gained by the appeal to masculine chivalry. They deliberately throw away their most effective weapon. What rights and privileges they enjoy have been won by grace of their charm and their arts of persuasion. Surely any one of Mr. Meredith's or Mrs. Ward's political heroines could inform them that it is not by harnming exercise of force that Prime Ministers are made and unmade and party divisions secured. "A woman lost Mark Antony a world," but not by the use of Amazonian strength.

If the suffragettes are amenable to reason they will recognize the wisdom of a return to drawing-room tactics. By putting the question of their right to vote to a test of muscle they hopelessly handicap their cause.

TESTAMENTARY EVIDENCE

Testators do not always depart this life in a forgiving frame of mind. Mrs. Catharine E. Heckler, of Portland, Ore., bequeathed to her husband $1 payable in monthly instalments. Mr. Heckler is referred to as "the individual who married me in 1886."

Some years ago a certain Col. Nash bequeathed an annuity of fifty pounds upon condition that the bell-ringers of Bath Abbey, England, should ring the death knell from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on the anniversary of his wedding day. On the day of his happy release by death there was to be a merry peal for the same lengthy of time. It was the Earl of Stafford who bequeathed to his wife "five and forty brass halfpence, which will buy her a pullet for her supper, a greater sum than her father can never make, over to her, being the worst of men and his wife the worst of women."

Another husband provided handsomely for his wife and sister with the condition that they should spend an hour a week in company at the grave. This, as the will stated, was because they had made the testator's life miserable and he wanted to be certain that they would torment each other for a while after his death.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

Paper Makers go Back to Work

Berlin, N. H., Oct. 22.—In accordance with the decision reached by them last night, the paper makers employed at the Berlin Mills company were at their work as usual. The men refused to obey an order to strike, issued by J. T. Carey, president of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers. The ground wood mill of the International Paper Company was started to-day and the company intends to start its pulp mill to-morrow.

Steamer was Burned to Water's Edge

Newburgh, N.Y., Oct. 21.— The steamer New York, of the Hudson River day line, burned to the water's edge at Marvel's shipyard early this morning. Four lives were lost. The blaze was first discovered by Charles Webster, a waiter. There were twenty-five colored men asleep on the boat, and Webster at once began to awaken them. In their night clothing the men fled from the burning steamer, and shivered in blankets on the pier, watching the vessel burn. When the New York was docked on Tuesday her boilers were cleaned preparatory to inspection, and there was no steam to operate the pumps. The Newburgh fire department was called, but was unable to stay the flames, and the spectacular blaze could be seen for miles along the river.

Socialist Candidate is Seriously Ill

Pittsburg, Oct. 21.—Eugene Debs, the Socialist candidate for President of the United States, is a sick man. For several days the work of the campaign has been telling on him, and to-day he was scarcely able to leave his private car to fill two engagements that he had to speak in the Bijou Theatre this afternoon and evening. It was learned for the last two days Debs had remained in his bed as long as possible, allowing all the preliminaries at the various meetings to pass before he was taken to the hall to make his address. His condition, while not serious, is causing his friends great alarm.

Debs had a cordial reception when he reached here this afternoon. He was taken from the Baltimore & Ohio station to the Bijou Theatre, followed by a crowd of more than ten thousand persons, who cheered him wildly.

Motor Boat was Found Beached

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Still, with their four-year-old son, Ransom, whose motor-boat was found beached and abandoned on the shore of a little island near Tecumseh, after they had left Chatham for Detroit, have returned home safe, but after a harrowing experience. While returning the heavy smoke from the northern forest fires settled about them like a pall. Then the gasoline gave out, and the craft drifted helplessly on Lake St. Clair. A high sea was running. After awhile the craft grounded. The land was welcomed, but it was found that the waves threatened to wash over the island. A passing trolley car on the mainland in the distance gave the first inkling of their whereabouts. Mrs. Still, holding her son to the breast of his father, with her wrap, then accompanied the husband on a hazardous wade toward the mainland, which they reached in safety.

Shot at a Priest

Chicago, October 21.—An attempt to assassinate Rev. J. K. Fielding, pastor of the Corpus Christi Roman Catholic Church, was made yesterday.

Made curious by the man's peculiar actions about the church, Father Fielding asked him: "What are you doing here?" "I'm praying," replied the stranger. As the priest turned his back the stranger drew a revolver. Father Fielding knocked the weapon away in time to escape a bullet, which grazed his head and clipped a lock of hair from his temple. The priest then knocked the culprit down. Recovering to his feet, the man cast down the hallway, tumbling and trampling over many children. At the bottom of the stairway he turned and fired another shot at the priest, and then, still brandishing the revolver, ran down the street. Children and citizens, accompanied by Father Fielding, pursued the man, but he escaped. The man is described as being either a Greek or an Italian. Corpus Christi Church includes in its membership some of the wealthiest Catholics in the city.

Reconstruction of G.T.R. Time Table

A reconstruction has been made in the arrangement of the complete time tables issued by the Grand Trunk railway system which will be appreciated by the travelling public. Where tables are shown of the condensed time of trains between the several points where through equipment is run, this equipment is shown directly opposite the time table giving passengers the information they desire in the easiest possible way and without turning to other pages to find what equipment is on several trains shown. To make railway time tables plain to the travelling public is a problem, with the railways but this new innovation has overcome a considerable amount of trouble which has been experienced in the past in knowing what equipment could be found on through trains.

Sensational Election Charges Made

Hamilton, Oct. 20.—The first of the sensational developments promised as a result of the charges made at the Wentworth nomination yesterday, by Colonel Ptolemy, the Conservative candidate, was the issuing this morning, of writs for slander against the Colonel and Major W. E. Knowles of Dundas, a prominent Liberal, who acted as returning officer in the by-election of 1905, when Oscar Sealey, the present Liberal candidate, Ed. Smith, Conservative, opposed each other.

The writs were issued by George S. Kerr, at the instance of E. G. Guest a well known Muncster Liberal.

At the nomination yesterday, Colonel Ptolemy declared he had been authorized by Major Knowles to say that Guest had approached him just after the bye-election, before the official count took place, and suggested that the ballot boxes be fixed. When Major Knowles refused this, he alleged that Guest suggested that he permit the place to be broken into, and the ballot boxes tampered with.

Mr. Guest gives a most emphatic denial to the story, and promises to vindicate himself in the court.

News in Brief.

London, Oct. 21.—At the English Education Committee meeting it was announced that no fewer than 212 applications had been received for an assistant mastership at a salary of £95 per annum.

FAMOUS SINGER ACQUITTED.

It is announced from Milan that the charge against Signor Alfredo Venturini, the famous bass singer, who was arrested on an accusation of serious assault, has been dismissed.

KILLED WHILE SHOOTING.

Mr. Thane, Assistant Conservator in the Forest Department of Bengal, has been accidentally killed while on a shooting excursion in the Sunderbunds.

MEDAL FOR RAILWAY MEN.

A gold medal is again offered by Lord Rosebery to all employes of the Great Northern Railway under 25 years of age for the best essay sent in not exceeding 5,000 words. Appropriately enough the only subject this year is "The Railway Position in 1908."

BIG ORDERS FOR THE CLYDE.

A Glasgow correspondent says contracts to the aggregate of 130,000 tons have been placed this month with Clyde shipbuilders, this being the largest total for two years. Three months, however, must elapse before the work people ben benefit.

LABOR PARTY RECRUITS.

At the conference of the Scottish Miners' Federation in Glasgow, regarding the Chester Congress, the Scottish delegates were instructed to vote in favor of the British Miners' Federation making an immediate application for admission to the Labor party. This would mean an addition of 650,000 members to the Labor party.

Halifax, N.S., October 21.—A sensational suicide occurred here this morning, when Clarence Boyce, 20 years old, shot himself in a yard off Dresden Row. He was formerly in the Royal Canadian Regiment and lately joined the First Canadian Artillery, and was in uniform when he was found dead. The shooting occurred at the door of the residence of his former sweetheart, Miss Ella Webber.

Her former lover returned from pleasant lately and she gave up Boyce. The latter came to visit her last evening, when her former lover and another couple were present, playing [illegible] he left, but returned an hour later. He left again, and nothing more was heard of him until 6.30 this morning, when he was found at the door with a bullet in his brain.

New York, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Minnie E. Young, mother of Lewis Ginter Young, a member of the failed brokerage firm of A. O. Brown & Co., told at yesterday's session of the investigation in the affairs of the firm of having made large loans to that firm in 1906 and shortly before the firm failed.

During that time her son wrote a statement declaring that his connection with the firm had cost his mother $1,161,000, a large part of which was lost in the collapse of San Domingo Gold and Copper Company.

Mrs. Young testified that she loaned two thousand shares of preferred stock of the American Tobacco Company and $50,000 worth of that company's bonds to A. O. Brown & Company in 1906 and thereafter was paid $1,000 a month for the loan. She was also paid $1,000 a month for her part of the financing of the Whitney Syndicate, which was one of the ventures in which A. O. Brown & Company were interested.

Shortly before the failure Mrs. Young said she loaned the firm $100,000 worth of securities to enable them to get their cheques certified. This was returned to her on the day on which she loaned it.

TRENT CANAL

Lindsay Section.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock on Tuesday, 17th November, 1908, for the works connected with the construction of the Lindsay Sections of the Canal.

Plans, specifications, and the form of the contract to be entered into, can be seen on and after the 19th October, 1908, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places forms of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labor, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $12,000.00 must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Emmamore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world affiliance and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance scores of a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 28 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,220,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,766, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lakes and northern waters.

Thus, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent rates, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail services.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $60,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheat traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. It found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will rush back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

were you," he advised, remembering certain experiences of Bismarck belles. "Those women over there are as clannish as crows."

"Yes?" plaintively. She went at her beads again.

"As I was saying," he began once more, "I've thought of you folks a lot. Seemed as if I just had to come down today. And I brought you something. See here!" He delved into the side pockets of his coat and pulled out two books.

"O-oh!" breathed Maryiyn. "Books!"

"All I had, but maybe you'll like 'em. They're love stories."

The shadow beyond the firelight claimed her again.

From the lean-to came the sound of Lancaster's voice. It was shrill with anger. A great sadness came over the storekeeper. "I wish I could come down often and look after things," he said. "You need another man around."

There was a short silence. Then, "Dallas likes the work outside," she answered very low, "and driving Ben and Betty up and down."

He nodded. "But you?"

"I like to stay in and sew."

"'Stay in and sew,'" he mused. "That takes me back to the states.

"What is the prairie princess doing?" he asked.

My dear mother sits by the fire and sews. Ah!"—with big brotherly tenderness—"I hope you'll never have to do anything harder."

"Dallas won't let me work outside. She says she's the man."

Dallas—the maid somehow it always seem. And then he heard the outer girl pushing an armful of hay before the eager noses of the mules. He got up quickly. "She is tending to those beasts!" he exclaimed. "Why, if I'd 'a' thought"—

She rose also, a wavering figure in the half light.

He picked up hat and coat, then halted. If he offered his help in the lean-to what would be his reception? He felt utterly hampered and began twirling his thumbs like a bashful cowboy. Moreover, Lancaster had been gone a good while. Was his absence a hint for his visitor to go?

The storekeeper went up to Maryiyn. "Goodby," he said. "I must be hiking along."

She put a trembling hand in his.

The latch clicked behind them, and the section boss entered. Again the younger girl started, and consciously.

Lancaster banged the door and looked them over. "Huh!" he snorted meaningly. So—he had misled himself with the idea that Lounsbury had come to pry into the matter of the claim. And all the while, underneath, the storekeeper had had another object.

He jerked at the bench, dropped upon it and flung his crutches down.

The other saw the look and heard the sniff. He believed they arose from the fact that he was still there. "Just going, Lancaster," he said. "So long."

"S' long."

"Goodby, Miss Maryiyn. Merry Christmas and happy New Year." He gave her a hearty smile.

"Goodby." She opened the door for him.

John Lounsbury passed out, regretting that he had been unwelcome; indignant that the section boss had misjudged his interest in the ownership of the claim. But he would have been astounded if he had known the real nature of the false impression he was leaving with Evan Lancaster or had read the thoughts of the younger girl, country reared, unused to the little courtesies of speech and action. For there were two who had misunderstood him that day.

CHAPTER V.

SQUAW CHARLEY crouched dull eyed, among the dogs. The dark folds of his blanket were drawn tight over his tattered waist. Close around his feet, which were shod in old and cracking moccasins, was twined his fringed skirt. An empty grain sack covered his head and shielded his face from the wind. As an icy gust now and then filtered in through the chinks of the stockade wall and swept him he swayed gently back and forth, while the tallest curs snuggling against him whined in sympathy and fought for a warmer place. For the kennel roof of shingles, put up in one corner of the inclosure as a protection for the pack, and served only during the worst that followed the storm to prevent the pale beams of the winter sun from reaching the pariah and his dumb companions.

Presently the flap of a nearby lodge was flung aside. An Indian woman emerged and threw a handful of bones toward the shelter. At once Squaw Charley awoke to action. Shedding sack and blanket, he scrambled forward with the half starved, yelping beasts to snatch his portion.

His bone picked clean of its flesh, the pariah resumed his crouching seat once more, and the pack closed quietly about him, licking his face and the hands that had cuffed them so with much turning and shivering they settled down to sleep.

A warrior stalked proudly past, ignoring both his disgraced brother and the sentries that paced the high board walk at the wall's top. Two Indian lads approached, chattering to each other over the heart shaped horn tops they were swinging on buckskin strings and turned a moment to scoff. Squaw Charley paid no heed to either brave or boys. His face was hidden, his eyes shut. He seemed, like the dogs, to be sleeping.

Of a sudden there came a shrill summons from a distant wigwam, and the pariah sprang up eagerly. Afraid-of-a-Fawn stood in the tepee opening, her evil face with its deep scar thrust forward to look about.

"Squaw!" she shrieked as he hurried toward her, and her long black teeth snapped together. "A fire!" Then she spat to cleanse her mouth.

Squaw Charley hastened back to the shingle roof for an armful of fuel. Returning he entered the wigwam and knelt beneath the smokehole. And while he arranged the sticks carefully upon a twist of grass the aged crone hovered, bawling, over him, ready with fist or foot for any lack of haste or failure with the fire. Not until with flint and steel he lighted a strip of spongy wood and thrust it under the dry hay and a flame leaped up and caught the soot on a hanging kettle did she leave him and go on a quest for breakfast rations.

The pariah had not dared to lift his eyes from his task while the hag was watching. But now he stole a swift glance toward the back of the lodge, where the maid, Brown Mink, was reclining, and his dull eyes, like the fuel at his knees, leaped into sudden flame. But, with the deftness of a woman, he kept on putting bits of wood into the mounting blaze.

Cough Caution

Never positively never poison your baby. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should stop a heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a drug-ging poison. It's common how some things quickly come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—in this late though—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter this very reasonable law and others, should make us having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's label—and none in the medicine, else it would law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it would be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chances, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $3.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

Prisoner Cheated the Gallows

Owen Sound, Oct. 21.—Jas. Parish Creighton, who was under sentence of death for the murder of his wife and ste-daughters, died in the jail this morning. Since sentence was passed Creighton had been despondent and morose, and for a time refused to eat, but latterly had appeared better. Last week, however, he took another turn and was seized with fits of cramps and vomiting. For the past four days he would not eat, and vomiting increased until it was almost continuous. The jail physician, Dr. Middleton, could do nothing for him. Yesterday another physician was called in consultation, but their efforts were of no avail. Creighton died about five o'clock. The physician's certificate has not yet been filed, but the symptoms point to acute gastritis. An inquest has been ordered for this afternoon.

The news of his death was received with a general feeling of relief in the town. The thought of his execution has been hanging like a pall over this community, now the people feel as if a load has been lifted. All sorts of rumors are current, the most persistent is that Creighton, put an end to himself by eating matches. This is pure invention, of course, whether true or false the post-mortem will decide.

The fiend for Wife Creighton was condemned to die was a terrible one. Angered by the intention of his wife to leave him and go back to her old home in Port Elgin, and his mind inflamed, possibly, by an intemperate life, he got up one morning last spring and shot his wife and her two daughters, Katherine and Clara Chapman.

How to Tell

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well.

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's got down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore,—that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirit droops.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's pills.

"When I was so stooped and took weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills" writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharps twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles and joints, lack of appetite and loss of sleep. Reach the cause, Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Buttermut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

Run Mile Race

The Business Boys run off their mile race on the indoor track at the Y.M.C.A. last night. There were 12 starters, and the race had to be run in three sections with four starters in each. The best time made was done by Walsh in 6.20 2-5, which is very good on so small a track. Campbell, Hammell, Halpany, Bang and McWilliams finished in about 6.25. The mile measures nearly 2 laps of the track.

Double Wedding

A matrimonial event of more than usual interest took place at the George street Methodist church last Wednesday afternoon when a double wedding was celebrated. The contracting parties in each case were Mr. John Wesley Johnston of Lakefield, son of Mr. Herbert G. Johnston, and Miss Violet May Trenaman, of Lakefield, daughter of Mr. Frank Trenaman. In the other wedding the groom was a brother of the bride in the first case, Mr. John Jas. Trenaman of Lakefield, while the bride was Miss Mary Luella McClure, daughter of Mr. Mitchell McClure of Dummer township. The happy young couples were unattended, and the dual wedding was a very quiet affair, the ceremony being performed by Rev. E. A. Pearson of the George street Methodist church. Both couples will take up residence in Lakefield.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Hit by a Butcher's Cart

Yesterday morning Mr. John Morden, of Monaghan, met with a most painful accident on Charlotte street. He was crossing the street when he was knocked down by a butcher's wagon and had his lower lip split and the side of his head cut and bruised. His wounds bled freely, and while he was not knocked unconscious he was pretty badly dazed by the fall. He was picked up by a gentleman who saw the accident from the sidewalk and his injuries were looked after by Dr. Scott. The boy driving the rig did not stop when the accident occurred, but continued driving along at high speed.

Special Offering

The usual offering at St. Peter's Cathedral next Sunday will be of a special nature, in accordance with the announcement that was made by Rev. Father McColl last Sunday. The amount received at the three masses will be sent to Rome to the pope in honor of the golden jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood. His holiness is in his fiftieth years as a priest of the Catholic Church. It is understood that the special offering will be universal. It is learned that it is thirteen years since the Catholic people of this city have made an offering to the Holy Father.

POSTUM

"There's a Reason"

Birth of a New British Dominion

London, Oct. 20.—A new British Dominion or Commonwealth is in progress of the making at the present time in South Africa. A few months ago the principle of the desirability of a closer union between the various colonies in British South Africa was settled at a convention which took the form of an Intercolonial Customs conference when the following resolution was adopted:

(a) That in the opinion of this conference the best interests and the permanent prosperity of South Africa can be secured by an early union under the Crown of Great Britain of the several self-governing colonies.

(b) That to the union contemplated in the forgoing resolution Rhodesia shall be entitled to admission at such time and on such conditions as may hereafter be agreed upon.

(c) That the members of this conference agree to submit the foregoing resolutions to the Legislature of their respective Colonies, and to take such steps as may be necessary to obtain their consent to the appointment of delegates to a National South African convention, whose object shall be to consider and report on the most desirable form of South African union, and to prepare a draft constitution. The convention shall consist of not more than twelve delegates from the Cape Colony, not more than eight delegates from the Transvaal, and not more than five delegates from Natal and the Orange River Colony respectively; and it shall meet as soon as convenient after the next sessions of all the Parliaments, provided that as soon as at least two Colonies shall have appointed their delegates, the convention shall be considered as constituted.

(d) The convention shall publish the draft constitution as soon as possible and shall, in consultation with the self-governing Colonies, determine the further steps to be taken in reference thereto.

(f) In the convention the voting shall be "per capita" and not by States.

IN SESSION AT DURBAN.

The convention called for the purpose of giving effect to the resolution has been in session at Durban this week. It is expected the conference will last three months, the Natalians wishing to give it every chance. Probably the chief point will be whether the representation proposed for union will be on the basis of votes or population. The latter would discriminate against the pioneering population of Rhodesia and the Transvaal.

If Natal, Cape Colony, the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony become one state, its territory will cover close on half a million square miles, or five times that of Great Britain, and the total population of the new state will be about 5,000,000.

But before union can be accomplished there are difficulties to be overcome. There is a race question, there is a debt question, and there is a trade question. Australia has the two last, Canada the first and last; South Africa has all three.

The greatest trouble of all is the race question. In all four colonies the number of natives far exceeds the number of whites, and the whites are divided into Dutch and British. The great question that lies before the Durban Convention is: How are the cases to be represented? Are the natives to vote as in Cape Town, or not to vote as in the other three states? And how is the fair proportion of representation to be struck between the Dutch, who occupy the towns? In the Cape, Transvaal, and Orangia, there are at present overwhelming Dutch majorities in the parliaments. Dutch ministers are in power, and these ministers have appointed the delegates to the convention. Unless they use their position fairly and recognize the rights of the English minorities, it is safe to predict that union will be far off.

FINANCIAL QUESTIONS.

Next is the question of state debts. In the Cape and Natal there have been successions of alarming deficits; debts are accumulating, credit failing. In the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony there have been surpluses ever since civil administration was reestablished, despite the recent depression. For instance, the Cape budget this year showed a deficit of £300,000, and an increase in the public debt during the last four years of £12,000,000. All income over £50 are to be taxed, all salaries of civil servants and members of Parliament reduced, the sinking fund suspended.

The Transvaal budget, on the contrary, showed a surplus of £400,000, notwithstanding the diamond crisis. In short, the coast colonies must raise fresh revenue, while the inland colonies' first necessity is a reduction of the burden of taxation and the cost of living.

Lastly, comes the problem of trade, and more especially the railway rates. The tariff will be one battlefield, but another will be the railroads, which are state-owned. Natal's revenue depends chiefly on through railroad traffic, Cape Colony's to a very considerable extent. But the nearest and cheapest port of entry and exit for the Rand is Delagoa Bay, in Portuguese territory, and to reduce the excessive cost of living the Transvaal requires, first and foremost, reduced transport charges. Then, aside the Cape' practice of granting preferential rates to local produce is deeply resented by the Transvaal.

It is apparent that the inland colonies hold the key to the situation. But will they assume the sister colonies' debts and submit to higher taxation and higher freight rates without a quid pro quo? Obviously not. The difficulties are great, but the whole people of South Africa, Dutch and English, demand a unification rather than a loose federation.

Western Building Rush

Winnipeg, Oct. 21.—The great questions of the day during election times are of all interest to the people of the west, and to a great extent the excitement and enthusiasm have diverted the attention of the realty markets. A very noticeable feature in the building trades in Winnipeg is the fact that the more central residential streets are being handed over to the forward rush of business blocks, which has been the history of progress in all large cities on the continent.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of known composition. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

DOMINION ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the West Riding of Peterborough

GENTLEMEN,—The condition of industry in Canada is bad. The condition of workingman is following suit. Their beautiful homes are becoming the prey of reduced circumstances. To the extent that we pay out money to other countries for work that should be done here we are traitors to our workingmen. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has brought this about to such a degree that Canada has paid out in the last twelve years (being the term during which the Liberals have been in power) hundreds of millions of dollars more than she took in. It was not so under a protectionist government. Those millions should have been spent at home. Then there would have been work for our workers to that extent at any rate, and what is more, the money would have been kept in the country. As it is we have to borrow to get it back. We have to borrow for gigantic enterprises which serve to make the big money-lender, the stock gambler and the contractor rich, but what good is it doing the workingman? To add insult to his injury Sir Wilfrid Laurier has opened the gates on the East and the West to immigrants. Those on the East, our own kith and kin, have been misled by misrepresentation and entrapped by agents who are paid a bonus for their capture. Those on the West are the untold millions of the Orient, who are displacing the whites in B. C., are working East and are dispossessing Canadians of their own country. They lower the rate of wages and the standard of living. If Canada is to be kept up as she was but a few years ago, she must not be allowed to fall into the class of "cheap and nasty" nations. If her people are to be well housed, well fed, well educated and above the condition of sweaters, they must demand a tariff against sweatwork, against undue immigration, against undue importation and a high protection for employers and employed alike, against the trickery of men who make their money on the stock market and by graft. The workers are slowly but surely becoming poorer than they used to be in this naturally rich and resourceful country. Why? Because the cream of all work goes to the money-lender of New York and London.

Why are the men of Canada idle? Because others will do the work cheaper in Britain or Germany, and we let them invade our markets while they keep us out of theirs. The German tariff, the United States tariff, the French tariff are all vastly higher than ours. Britain protects herself where she needs it, by a Canada Embargo and by the Patents Act, which requires patented articles (and nearly all are patented) to be manufactured there. There is never depression in France. The French have a high tariff and economize. They have always plenty for a rainy day. The Germans likewise keep their own work in their own country, but are weighed down with militarism. Britain suffers because her work is being done elsewhere, although she is changing that rapidly, but she has an immense start over Canada in her already accumulated capital. The United States is the modern wonder of the world, due altogether to high protection. Protection or tariff has been what said to be the measure of the standard of life amongst the workers. Commodities in protected countries are not higher than in unprotected. Clothing under a low tariff in Canada is higher in price than it used to be under a high tariff. Certain ills due to over-expansion, the machinations of stock-gamblers, etc., exist in all countries, but when an ill is plainly preventable, why not prevent it? Sending cash out of the country over and above what we take in will never make us rich. Yet we do it and must do it under our present system of trade. Opening up unnecessary lands as in the West, while Ontario is got half populated or developed is of a piece with that, but it is the delight of the money-lender. Ontario farms are rapidly decreasing in value. A huge national deficit is accumulating for this year and unless times are checked and we are restored to our own, the coming winter will be a veritable horror. The money that we are borrowing in such immense sums, if spent for supplies, made in Canada, would mean work for everyone at good wages. Why then does Sir Wilfrid permit rails for the G. T. P. to be bought out of Canada and clothing that would keep our farmers growing wool and our woolen mills weaving it, to be imported without hindrance?

To say that one government is as bad as another is to say that one man or one set of men is no better as managers than another. We know this to be the reverse of correct in government, in trade, in railways or in anything else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although the Conservative administration, as it proved, was failing to pieces, could never have got into power had he not agreed to "let the tariff alone". This pledge he contrived to evade on the ground that while the U. S., Germany, etc., were prosperous under a protective tariff, he could make Canada a brilliant and enduring exception under a low tariff and a preference. Now he is compelled to fall back on the statement that depression is worldwide and that therefore Canada must share it.

Then the boast of great enterprises! Vast sums of money, have been borrowed and spent but who has got the benefit of it? Who has been made rich? Where has it gone? THE CHARGE WE MAKE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS THAT IT IS IN THE GRASP OF THE GREAT MONEY-LENDERS. It has ceased to represent the people. Is it any wonder that they lose faith in the forms of government? Without any government at all there would be a happier people. If the times are not rescued, whether it be by a party or by a people, civilization will be destroyed. The thunder of revolt is already heard. Religion, art, education—all will go with the frenzied efforts of men to get out of the grasp of Money which never loses, never shares its seeds, into a state of freedom and the natural fruition of honest work and a resourceful soil.

I am not rich, nor am I able to live without working, as has been said, and I never was. The stock exchange where so many have won fabulous riches at the expense of the steady worker underneath is unknown to me. If I have ad money to lose I have none to be ashamed of.

The day of the object party man is gone. Let humanity have a chance.

I solicit your vote and influence and have the honor to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. H. BURNHAM

Little Girls Robbers of Many Wealthy Homes, were Finally Captured

(Special to The Times.)

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 23.—After three months searching the police, aided by state detectives, today ran down the perpetrators of a score of burglaries in this state, which have mystified the authorities for a long time. Two little girls, who are sisters, aged 12 and six years, are accused by the police of the robberies. They come from a well to do family, their father being an engineer, who owns his own house in this city. Both of the children attend Sunday school, and the elder is said to be a favorite at the school. The suspicion of the police have rested upon the two children for some time, but it was very difficult to believe them guilty.

This morning, however, the police went to the home of the girls' parents with a search warrant, and located a doll's trunk in the girls' room in which were tucked snugly away among the dolls' clothes a diamond brooch valued at $400, a sapphire and pearl breast pin worth $350, a gold watch, nine rings, seven valuable stick pins, three necklaces and sterling spoons and knives, in the play house was where the biggest find was made and the total value it is claimed runs up into thousands of dollars.

The police say the little girls showed the nerve and skill of professionals. They first secured the permission of their parents to go out and sell soap on commission. This gave them the excuse to call at the homes of well to do people. If anyone answered the door when they rang the bell an effort was made to sell the soap. If the people had no one to be out the girls took the first window they came to and went in and ransacked the house. They confined their thefts to jewelery.

Some Truths from Disinterested Sources--Tributes to Hon. Mr. Stratton

A CONSERVATIVE TESTIMONY.

From Toronto World (Conservative).

"In the industrial and financial life of the province Mr. Stratton is playing no small role, and it is a game that requires ability. It is common talk that since the defeat of the Ross Government Mr. Stratton is the only ex-member of that organization who has taken his place in private life, and wrought out a commanding position for himself, absolutely without aid or favor from those who carry political positions in their pockets. Ontario's new lieutenant-governor has fallen a victim to the placeman habit. Premier Ross is in the senate, Mr. Latchford on the bench, and so you may go on, but Mr. Stratton has chosen to disregard the offer of a senatorship, and now takes his place in the fighting line to win (West Peterborough. Mr. Stratton is a man of capacity with an administrative reputation worthy of note, and altogether a candidate that measures up to the best that there is in Liberalism in Ontario."

FROM WESTERN ONTARIO.

(From London Advertiser Liberal.)

The license laws also were vigilantly and impartially enforced while he (Hon. Mr. Stratton) was Provincial secretary. No charge, or even whisper, of maladministration was levelled against Mr. Stratton. The only thing urged against him was A STORY CONCOCTED BY POLITICAL ADVENTURERS, WHICH WAS WHOLLY DISCREDITED BY THE ROYAL COMMISSION. In the Peterborough district, where he is best known and where his life is an open book, he is extremely popular. No man could hold the confidence and affections of his fellow-citizens in the same degree and for so long a period as Mr. Stratton has done, unless he had many of the best qualities of human nature."

INDEPENDENT CONSERVATIVE (ESTIMATE.)

(Lindsay Free Press.)

"We speak of Mr. Stratton so positively as a future member, because the information to hand coming to us from impartial sources, seems to indicate that beyond doubt or question the people of West Peterborough have determined to again avail themselves of Mr. Stratton's services. We think they have reached this conclusion wisely, and decidedly to their own manifest advantage, and that this will be more and more emphatically demonstrated as they have experience of the nature and value of Mr. Stratton's activities on the floor of Parliament."

VIEW OF A FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR.

(From the Lindsay Post.)

Mr. Stratton has proved his mettle not only in the field of politics but in the more important and responsible domain of financial and industrial enterprise. He is a recognized and an important figure in the great financial world of our Provincial capital. His sagacity in the successful promotion of large industrial undertakings, that expand provincial business and enlarge the area of profitable employment for labor is everywhere recognized. He stands high among our captains of industry. What has given him so enviable a reputation in those important and discriminating fields of investment is his proved fidelity to every trust that has been reposed in his hands, his energy and industry, and his unusual grasp of affairs and sagacatious business judgment."

A VOICE FROM LAKEFIELD.

(Lakefield News, Conservative.)

"A candid review of the field seems to indicate that there is little doubt of Mr. Stratton's election. He has always held the riding by strong majorities, and it is fair to say that he has always been an active, energetic and influential advocate of everything that promised advantage to the city and county, and his activity in former years, on half of his constituents, and the success that attended most of his efforts, have given him such a strong hold upon the confidence and sympathy of the people, that he is a difficult candidate to overthrow. Aside from political considerations, while the majority will regard his election as a great advantage for Peterborough, his bitterest opponent will not, in his heart, regard it as a calamity. If the Hon. Mr. Stratton is elected, every man in Peterborough, no matter what his politics, will have a zealous and capable advocate of his interests at the Dominion capital."

VIEW OF COUNTY CONSERVATIVE PAPER.

(Havelock Standard)

"To our mind and from what we can gather, the return of Mr. Stratton is a foregone conclusion and it would be an indifferent compliment to pay to the sagacity of the voters of Peterborough, to think otherwise, in view of his association and co-operation with public-spirited men who have made Peterborough a live industrial city, and in view of his public service, forceful personality and personal popularity. All of this may be assumed without any disparagement of Mr. Burnham. So far as we can observe, this election is likely to be decided upon personal and non-partizan grounds; upon the recognition of the peculiar value to the material interests of Peterborough which it would be to possess in Parliment an advocate so strongly equipped for practical service as Mr. Stratton unquestionably is."

Launch Struck by Freighter Boy Drowns

(Special to The Times.)

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 23.—Clyde Seaman, aged 17 years, was drowned off Nine Mile Point on Hay Lake last night when a launch in which he and three others were riding was run down by the freighter John G. Donaldson. In the launch with the boy were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Seaman and James Bain. The deceased was placed in the stern of the launch to keep a lookout, but fell asleep, and did not see the approaching freighter.

There was a large bed tick in the launch, and when the craft was struck so sudden and they were all thrown into the water, the two men put Mrs. Seaman onto the tick. Had it not been for the tick the whole party would have been drowned.

Yellow Papers are Condemned

(Special to The Times.)

Saratoga, N.Y., Oct. 23.—The yellow newspapers, and the funny sections of Sunday newspapers have been condemned by resolutions passed by the Mothers' Club in session here today.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

Ladies of T.A.S. Entertained the Normal Students

The young ladies of the T.A.S. entered the Normal School students, who are members of the Roman Catholic church in the T.A.S. rooms last night. The program included cards, musical selections and refreshments. Among the clergy present were Bishop O'Connor, Rev. Dr. O'Brien and others, including Rev. Father Crowley of North Bay. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all.

Successful Social in St. Andrew's Church

The Young People of St Andrew's church very successfully entertained the Presbyterian students at the Normal School and the Business College last night. The social was held in the school house and that large hall was well filled. There was a large number present from both educational institutions, as well as many of the young people of the church. The program included solos, recitations, and readings, after which some time was spent in guessing the author from quotations which were tacked to the walls. Then the young ladies served light refreshments and a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

The program was as follows;

Chairman's Address—Rev. J. G. Potter.

Duet—Misses E. Tuite and Taylor.

Address—Rev. H. J. Keith.

Violin Solo—Dr. Parks.

Reading—J. Johns.

Banjo Solo—F. R. Clark.

Recitation—Miss M. Tamerson.

Solo—Gordon Wright.

Reading—Miss P. Island.

Solo—Rev. J. G. Potter.

Recitation—Murray Miller.

Reading—J. Johns.

Bagpipe Solo—Mr. McKay

Recitative solo with piano accompaniment—Miss M. Tamerson.

Among the members of the staff present were Dr. Parks, Messrs. W. Keys, and G. M. Cornish, Public School Inspector Lees, and Jas. S. Potter, sailors' missionary, were also present.

Angry Father Keeps Elopers on the Move

Detroit, Oct. 23.—After following his daughter Mary, aged 18, and her sweetheart, Frank Temple, aged 21, for over a week, Charles Calvert, of Ridgetown, Ont., came to police headquarters last night, and requested the officers to assist in locating the youthful pair. The young people eloped from Ridgetown a week ago last Wednesday. The father tracked them to Blenheim, Ont., thence to Toledo, and finally to Munro, arriving in each place only to be informed that the couple had been there but had left again.

13 Townships Owned by English Company

In Haliburton a curious and somewhat mediaeval state of affairs prevails. Thirteen of the townships of that county are practically held by an English land company while the farmers and settlers hold merely nominal possession with certain rights.

When a man buys a farm from this company which owns such large tracts, he purchases merely the right to farm on the land and all the timber wealth and the minerals contained in the farm, are still the property of the company. The natural result is that the farmer endeavors in no way to improve his farm and the mineral wealth with which the entire county abounds is not exploited.

The condition of affairs such as described above has a very derogatory effect on the progress of the county and the villages.

Silver, copper, mica, graphite, marl and many other products of Mother Earth are to be found in Haliburton county.

Town of Matheson Almost Wiped Out

North Bay, Oct. 23.—The town of Matheson, on the T. & N. O. Railway, originally called McDougall's Chutes, was visited by fire last night and the town is virtually wiped out. Flames were discovered about ten o'clock in the Abitib. Hotel. A bucket brigade was formed and worked manfully between the river, close by, and the burning buildings, but little could be done. W. James was injured, but not seriously. The T. & N. O. Railway station escaped the flames. The loss is approximately $75,000, with no insurance. Among the fire sufferers are Revillon Brothers, fur traders and general merchants; Rothschilds Brothers, dry goods; Taylor, hardware store; John Clark, general store; R. A. Douglas, drug store; the post office; Syrian colony, and a Chinese laundry. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Sam Ray Champion

At the links of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club Mr. Sam Ray won the championship of the club Thursday afternoon, when he defeated Mr. Cyril Hill in the final game in the championship competition, defeating Mr. Cyril Hill by 5 up and 4 to go, doing the two rounds in 36. He also beat Mr. R. Neill in the semi-finals 5 up and 4 to go in 36 holes.

This makes Mr. Ray, champion of the club for 1908-09. He was in the finals last year with Mr. Burnett.

Two Crops of Peas

Two crops of peas in one season is a pretty good record for this part of the country. That is what Mr. Hugh Matthews, who resides in Douro a short distances from Lakefield, gathered this season. The first crop was cut the latter part of July. The ground was then ploughed and cultivated, and a second crop grew from the peas that fell from the first crop. The second crop, while not as heavy at the first, was its equal in every other respect, and a week or so ago Mr. Matthews was able to have green peas freshly picked for dinner.

RUGBY

There will be a big crowd at the rugby match this afternoon at Riverside Park. The Lindsay bunch will bring a special train down, and are confident of winning.

Lindsay, Oct. 23.—The team that will represent Lindsay in the Junior O.R.F.U. are a strong bunch, and expect to win the district. They play the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. tomorrow, and are confident of victory, having beaten a much stronger team than Peterborough T.A.S., who played several senior men on Wednesday last. Such men as "Chummy" O'Connor, of Peterborough, say that it will take a mighty good team to stop Lindsay this year.

Rheumatism

A Very Bad Case that Was Cured By Persevering with an Old Time Remedy.

"Were it not that I had great patience and perseverance," writes Mr. Fritz Keller, well known in London, "I would still be racked by chronic rheumatism, which was my unhappy lot for three years.

"I didn't have acute rheumatic fever as so many have—which me the pain and stiffness came on gradually. When I kept quiet, as on Sunday, I was free from pain—but being a working man I had to move about and the pain was simply awful, though after an hour's resting it would subside.

"I got the idea into my head that although the pain was in my joints, the rheumatic poison was in my blood. My druggist said "Ferrozone" was a wonderful blood tonic, and I began to use it. At first it didn't help at all, only change was a better appetite and more strength. Not being a doctor I didn't know that Ferrozone was all the time working at the root of the disease. I kept right on with Ferrozone and in three months was cured. There is no more stiffness, no pain, and I am as limber as forty years ago."

Every kind of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nerve Pain and Blood Disorder is quickly cured by Ferrozone. Satisfaction guaranteed. 50c. per box.

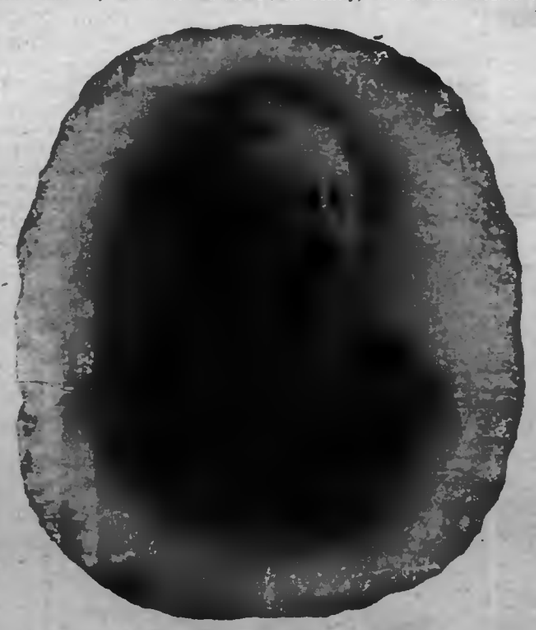
Round Up of the Campaign

Mr. Stratton Has Successful Meetings in Harvey Township

Hon. Mr. Stratton held a meeting of the electors yesterday afternoon at Simpson's School House, on the Bobcaygeon Road, when there was a large attendance of the residents of Harvey and Verulam.

Mr. Alex Irwin.

Mr. Alex. Irwin, one of the pioneer settlers of Harvey, was elected to the chair. He said he had been acquainted with Mr. Stratton from the time he first ran for the Legislature, and though he had not always supported him he had been forced to the conclusion by the good results that this section of the county had received through Mr. Stratton's work and influence that they had never had a man



J. R. STRATTON,

Liberal Candidate for West Peterborough

gressive policy had done so much for the prosperity of the people. No former representative of West Peterborough, modestly excepting himself, had accomplished so many good results for the practical welfare of the county as they all knew Mr. Stratton had done (applause), and they might well be assured that when he was sent to Ottawa his influence for their benefit would be exerted in every possible direction. He was glad to note that everywhere throughout the county there had been ample evidence of the determination of the people to have Mr. Stratton for their representative. As they knew, they had abundant reason for the faith that was in them by their past experience of that gentleman. He (Mr. Hall) had endeavored to serve them to the best of his ability, and he had secured very favorable consideration from the government for their local interests, such as they had not had before been accorded from Ottawa. When they sent Hon. Mr. Stratton there they would be well assured that no good thing which it was in the power of the government to grant would be refused. (Applause).

as their representative with the same capacity for accomplishing the things that really benefited them. He had always been obliging and accessible, and both by his work for their welfare and the cordial manner of his personal intercourse with them had endeared himself to the people of the back country. If the City of Peterborough wanted to give the northern portion of the county a member who would help their interests, they should join in electing Mr. Stratton. They knew his capacity, and that if he was sent to Ottawa he would repeat for them the good work that he done for them at Toronto. Mr. Irwin's sentiments met with a hearty response from the audience.

Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mr. R. R. Hall followed pointing out the great advantage that would accrue to the country at large by continuing

Mr. W. H. Meldrum.

Mr. W. H. Meldrum addressed the meeting, dwelling earnestly upon the great benefits that had been conferred upon the farming community by the wise administration of the present Government. Referring to the candidate, he said that he had pleasure in appearing as his supporter though he had not always been on that side. In fact he had supported the government of Sir John Macdonald in time past, but he had been compelled to recognise that Mr. Stratton, by his energy and enterprise, and his loyal devotion to the welfare of the county, and by the faculty he

"Dearest, After You Left Me Yesterday," Sent Wife Into Wild Hysterics

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, D.C., Oct. 23.—A protest from an angry father of the Middle West, has been made to the United States government against a certain style of advertising used by a patent medicine company. The father claims the advertising should be condemned and forbidden the use of the mails.

The complainant states that while his son-in-law was traveling in the west a letter came addressed to him, apparently in a feminine hand writing, and the wife opened it and read;—

"'Dearest,—After you left me yesterday I find I forgot to tell you'"——

After reading this far the wife went into hysterics. Had she continued reading she would have found it was an advertisement of a certain patent medicine firm which is gotten up so to resemble a lady's hand writing.

The government cannot find a remedy and the advertising will probably continue.

Gave His Life for His Young Brother

(Special to The Times.)

Essex, Ont., Oct. 23.—Giving up his own life, to save that of his little brother, Daniel Taylor, aged 23 years, who lives on a farm near here with his parents, is dead as the result of a collison with an inter-urban car. He and his four-year-old brother, who he had on his lap were riding on a wheat binder and were crossing the track. The noise of the machine was so great that it drowned the sound of the whistle on the car until it was upon them. There was only a moment to act, and Daniel stood up and threw the baby as far as he could from the track. In an instant the car struck the machine, and he was thrown under the wheels. Both legs were severed above the knees, and he was otherwise injured. He died this morning. The baby was picked up unharmed.

Murderer of Bollard Has Confessed

(Special to The Times.)

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—With a prayer on his lips Joe James, the 18-year-old negro, today confessed to the murder of C. A. Bollard, who was killed in July last, and whose death caused a riot which the militia had to be called out to quell. In a drunken stupor James entered the house of Bollard, and going into the bed room of Miss Blanche Bollard, caught hold of her hand. The girl screamed, and her father ran to her assistance, only to be stabbed in the back by his daughter's assailant.

A Masked Man made a Big Haul

(Special to The Times.)

Newark, N.J., Oct. 23. — Three masked men cut the telephone wires at the Perkin's home at Morriston, early today and entered the house. They knocked down one of the three maid servants, and choked and overpowered Mrs. Miller, a sister of Miss Miller, who was in the house, and then ransacked the place, securing about $2000 in jewelery and some money.

Refused to Issue Writ

Washington, D.C., Oct. 23.—Secretary Root today refused to issue a warrant of extradition sought by Russia in a case against Janeff Pouren

A Negro Murderer Pleads Insanity

(Special to The Times.)

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 23.—A plea of insanity was entered for the the negro, Jas Jakina, who murdered Mrs. Mary Morrison near Haselmore, New Westminster, here this morning. A board of physicians was appointed to examine the prisoner, and they reported him sane although possessing a very weak mind.

Kingston Man Gets It

(Special to The Times.)

Kingston, Oct. 23.—Prof. J. W. Mitchell of the Kingston Dairy School has been appointed to the staff of the Manitoba Agricultural College, and will leave for the West on November 15th.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists

Actress Robbed of Her Jewellery to the Value of $5,000

(Special to The Times.)

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 23.—Miss Elsie Janville, also feminine star, in the Owsd Company, which appeared at the Valentine theater here on Wednesday night, today filed a complaint with the police to the effect that during her stay at the Secord Hotel, she was robbed of her diamonds and jewelery to the value of $5000. According to Miss Janville's story, the jewels were principally gifts to her by friends in New York, including a string of jade beads with diamonds and a ruby clasp, given to her by Mrs. O. P. Belmont, of New York. She declares that the last time she saw them was when she put them in her trunk in Springville. This trunk she had with her at the Secord Hotel. The proprietor states that she could not have been robbed in his hotel.

Painters Organize

The leading master painters of Peterborough, met Thursday evening at the Snowdon House, and formed a branch of the International Association of Master Painters and Decorators of the United States and Canada. The following officers were elected; Mr. Fred Cook, president; Mr. J. P. Shevlin, vice-president, and Geo. H. Duncan, secretary and treasurer.

A standing vote of thanks was given to Mr. E. J. Hobs, F.C.S., London, England, the well known color maker and expert of the Canadian Oil Company, for the able assistance he has rendered in bringing the trade together.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sent on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS

Unusual interest attaches to the fortieth annual convention of the national American Woman's Suffrage Association, now in session at Buffalo. One of the features is a commemorative service in honor of the first national meeting in the interest of woman's political enfranchisement, held in this country exactly sixty years ago at Seneca Falls. Many of the descendants of the delegates to that gathering are active workers in the present movement and in attendance at Buffalo.

One may accept the statement that the pioneers of two generations ago "started the greatest revolution the world has ever known" for this wide old, restless world of ours has witnessed many wonderful changes and shifts, but there is no denying the fact that woman suffrage spells a tremendous social and political readjustment. And the adjustment is certainly taking place. In the sixty years under review at the conventions women all over the globe with "fixed ideal gales in every direction—have done "more than in the 600 years preceding them." In the words of one of the leaders. In the last few years the suffragettes in Europe have been meth[illegible] ner night. Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland and Great Britain have supplied abundant [illegible] theer,

To be sure, the gains for women suffrage are [illegible] of the suffragettes [illegible] courses" have favored women; economic, social, scientific and civic tendencies have powerfully promoted the movement. But the game may be said about any great movement. No phenomenon is isolated, no cause is limited to a single effect, and there is interaction and interplay of forces everywhere.

But if the world now has a different attitude toward women suffrage, the suffragists also look out on a different world. Their agitation is not what their programme is much wider, the emphasis is different. At suffrage meetings the questions that are given prominence are industrial, moral, educational, such as the labor of women and children, the part of women in municipal economy, cost of the higher charity, the drink [illegible] etc.

The equal suffragettes [illegible] fear either ridicule or [illegible]. Their movement has passed upon a practical phase, and the question is merely as to the rate of its progress. And even that question will be settled by the women themselves—that is, by the mass of women still outside the movement.

LORD MILNER'S VIEWS

What Viscount Milner says, as always worth [illegible] when he speaks on imperial questions he does so as a man who has seen it for eight years with some of the most serious of them. In his address to the [illegible] Club of Montreal he [illegible] what this country [illegible] to the empire and what the empire has a right to expect from Canada. Its first duty is to itself, to develop its resources, to make the most of its great heritage, to build up a great nation. But it owes a duty to the empire, and that duty is to be loyal. He recognizes that there is something else that is needed to hold the Empire together besides a mere proclamation of affectionate regard for the Mother Country, for he realizes that there are British people who are not of British origin, and that it is loyalty to the Empire as a whole and not to a particular part of it that will keep us together in a great family of nations. Lord Milner would have us remember to be loyal to Canada first of all, and it is very clear that if we cannot be loyal to the particular part of the Empire with which we are associated, we cannot become true citizens of the Empire. But what does loyalty to Canada imply? It does not consist simply in believing that we have a country that will become great; it does not consist in simply boasting that we are Canadians. It will be exhibited only in proportion to the degree in which we recognize that full duty which we owe to our country. If we are to become a nation within an empire, we must be prepared to do a nation's part within the Empire. If our loyalty is not equal to this task, it is of a poor type. Very wisely Lord Milner forbore from making definite suggestions. He only impressed our duty upon us, a duty which we think is becoming better understood and appreciated as the years pass. No one will for a moment claim that Canada is not ready at any time to go to the defense of the Mother Country in time of war, no matter in what part of the world that war may be waged. This may be taken for granted. But it is not alone on the battlefield that the fighting strength of a nation can make itself felt. Indeed, we may say that the field is the last place where it is felt. A nation prepared to defend itself is formidable in times of peace, and her voice gains strength thereby in the councils of courts. As a part of the Empire, Canada ought to [illegible] herself ready to lend her strength to the Empire, not only when war has been proclaimed, but in such a manner that when the representatives of the Empire speak, they will speak as for all Canada, is expressed by a unanimous voice. This is [illegible] the country will ling—at all times to do her share in maintaining the imperial honour. Lord Milner does not favor the idea of an Empire composed of a dominant power and a number of subordinate powers, but a union of equals. On this point the following London despatch of the 20th inst. says that Milner's basis of empire, [illegible] in the great of the empire as the best method of shaping it about. [illegible] the power of [illegible] over the [illegible] one thing it is here and points out that the ability wherewith the great journals of Canada and Australia are conducted would make them a force of prime importance in the realization of a solemn and united empire.

The Outlook is very hopeful of the influence of Viscount Milner's work in the cause of imperial solidarity. He has the ear of the British people to a degree enjoyed by very few men. Perhaps very few are not a degree. Perhaps very few are not so far astray in saying that he has it more fully than any of his contemporaries. He is splendidly equipped for the work to which he has set his hand, and no one appears that invaluable quality of statesmanship, patience.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan south also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Kaniskmore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, and a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent ferage, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was foremost through to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once improving the water line and affording desirable manufactures, offices, &c., to be erected when wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Ontonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Canoe Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Chemical Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of improper motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Wheel and Steel Company, as the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and as the publishers of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being cajoled for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have sought to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feelings.

In all these things if there is any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at heart, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the measure of my success in what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the basis of my ability, and the effect of my influence, with the Government, and in the world [illegible]

However, the benefits of West Peterborough and Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representation and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 45 miles of navigable canal hydpleted. Now there are 110 miles completed, embracing in this distance seven [illegible] miles of shore line, and there are 26 miles under contract, having only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Bobcaygeon and Trenton. During the 18 years Conservative [illegible] the years from Confederation, here spent [illegible] canal [illegible] construction work, the [illegible] during the 12 years of Liberal rule, there [illegible] works under contract and construction [illegible] out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation [illegible] works in 12 years of Liberal administration [illegible] the amount spent in the preceding 20 years, [illegible] and, among other things, has given Peterborough [illegible] with the back lakes and neighbors waters.

There in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complete rotary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction, such as enlargement, [illegible] of enlargement, along the Trent valley, [illegible] at various points. Practically [illegible] made to the wheel of the street railway terminus, and the Wells street wharf, on which the work of reconstruction will begin [illegible] Other measures in the interests of the riding due to [illegible] the representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several threes of the building, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $50,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a more permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $5,000, in lieu of $20,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $1,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government, intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and, perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the look is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the level of waters of the look and channel from five feet to nine, [illegible] are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I am confident in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it never did before in history. Since coming into office twelve years ago, when the tide of prosperity was at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the country rapidly began to rise. The revenues, under a lessened tariff, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development now reflected in an increase of Canadian trade from $200 millions in 1896 to $400 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the [illegible] of the Transcontinental Railway, which will [illegible] Quebec 1 hundred miles northward and double the settlement and [illegible] area of the country. The Government [illegible] enough to begin up Canada in all its varied [illegible] for the success of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will insure [illegible] Railway, and the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and the Grand Trunk Pacific.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

Brown Bear did not look his way. She lay on a slanting frame of saplings held together by a network of thongs. The gay blanket on which she had ridden during the march was folded under her. A buffalo robe was spread over her head wrought leggings and shoes, its hairy side under, its tanned face, which was gaudily painted, uppermost. Festoonings of beads fell from her neck to the top of her richly embroidered skirt and heavy eardrops of gilt pushed through the purple black masses of her hair.

Squaw Charley fed his sight gladly with her loveliness, thankful that she, who once had looked upon him kindly, did not now turn to see his squalor. The blaze was thawing his chilled limbs and fast warming him; the brass pot was singing merrily. He kept his hands gratefully near it, and as from time to time the girl held up her arms admiringly to let the firelight shine upon her bracelets and pinchback rings he watched her furtively from half closed eyes.

But not for long. Afraid-of-a-Fawn soon returned with meat and meal and cursing ordered him away.

"Get Ottway coward," she cried, "to the dogs! But see that there is wood for tonight's cooking and tomorrow's."

The pariah gave the fire under the kettle a last touch and slunk out hastily into the snow. The hag pursued him, moving backward and pulling after her the partly dressed hide of a black tailed deer.

"Make it ready for the cutting board," she bade and threw the piece of hard stone for the fleshing so that it split the pariah's cheek.

Squaw Charley took up the hide and dug in the snow for the stone.

A young warrior was lingering at the lodge flap, blowing spirals of kinnikinick. He burst into a laugh. "Ha, ha!" he taunted. "The squaw of a squaw drudges today. Ha, ha!"

The crone joined in the laugh. Then, "Standing Buffalo may enter," she said and respectfully led the way into the wigwam.

The pariah heard, yet did not pause. But when among the dogs again he cleaned at the deer hide with short, swift strokes, a light once more flamed up in his dim eyes—a light unlike the one that had burned in them at Brown Mink's fireside.

He was still working diligently, the sack over his head as before, when, about the middle hour of the day, Lieutenant Fraser entered the abiding place of the encampment and began to go rapidly from lodge to lodge, as if in search of some one. Seeing the intruder, the dogs about Squaw Charley howled up, hair bristling and teeth bared.

The outcast laid aside his rubbing stone and strove to quiet them. But the sudden commotion under the soot had already attracted the young officer. Stooping, he caught a glimpse of Squaw Charley.

"Oh, there you are!" he exclaimed and motioned for him to come forth.

When the Indian appeared, the deerskin in his arms, Lieutenant Fraser pointed toward the entrance. "You come with me," he said, with a gesture in the sign language.

Squaw Charley moved slowly along with him. No one was in sight in the inclosure—so one seemed even to be looking on. But, opposite Brown Mink's lodge, the old woman dashed out, seized the hide with a scream of rage and dashed back again. The next moment Charley passed through the sliding panel and took up his march to headquarters.

"So this is your last wild pet, eh, Robert?" said Colonel Cummings as they entered. He backed up to his stove and surveyed Squaw Charley good naturedly. "Let me see, now. You've run the scale from a devil's darning needle to a baby wolf. Next thing, I suppose, you'll be introducing us to a youngish rattlesnake."

Lieutenant Fraser rumpled his hair sheepishly. "But you ought to see the way they're treating him—hanging him around as if he were a dog."

"H'm. He certainly doesn't look strong."

"They work him to death, colonel."

The commanding officer laughed. "A redskin working must be a sight for sore eyes."

"But they don't feed him, sir."

The outcast, wrapped close in his blanket, lifted his pinched face to them.

"How'd it happen I didn't notice this fellow during the march?" inquired the colonel, a trifle suspiciously.

"He was with the squaws when there was anything to do, but when we were on the move he fell to the rear."

"Didn't try to get away?"

"No. Just straggled along."

"Ah! Do you know whether or not he took part in the fight the day we captured them?"

At the question a swift change came over Squaw Charley. He retreated a little and bent his head until the chin rested upon his breast.

Lieutenant Fraser threw out his arms in mute reply. No feathers, no paint, no gaudy shirt or bonnet marked the Indian as a warrior.

The elder man approached the silent, shrinking figure not unkindly. "And what do you want me to do for him, Robert?" he asked.

Lieutenant Fraser sprang forward eagerly, his face shining. "He's no quiet and willing, sir—so ready to do anything he's told, I'd be grateful if you thought you could trust him outside the stockade. He could get the odds and ends from the packer's mess."

"I'll be hanged, Robert!" cried his superior, annoyed. "Most men, just out of West Point, would see it my way in killing redskins, not coddling 'em."

The other crimsoned. "But don't you look at it that way, colonel," he said. "I'm ready to punish or kill, in the case of bad ones. But—you'll pardon my saying it—I don't see that it's the duty of an officer to hang a good one."

Squaw Charley raised his head and shifted timidly from foot to foot.

"Well, Robert," said Colonel Cummings quietly, "you still have the garden view of the Indian question. Have over, let me tell you this: Here's this man a story, and what is it? For all you know, he may deserve being hanged around."

Lieutenant Fraser was shaking his head in energetic [illegible] from the parlor. He searched in his bosom, under the tattered white [illegible] out the rag bound paper and handed it to the commanding officer.

Very carefully the latter read all the interest growing with every line. Finally, giving it over to the lieutenant, he emitted [illegible]

"That tells the tale," he said. "I know the man that wrote that when I was with Sibley in Minnesota, the summer after the massacre. He's a man that writes the truth. He tells the truth, too, and I wish I had him here now, so that he could interpret for me."

"Why, sir," exclaimed the youngster, "it says this chap knows [illegible]"

"By all the gods! Of course it does, Robert, I'll make him my interpreter." The colonel strode up and down in his excitement, pausing only to contend with the other for the paper. "Red Moon," he said at last, addressing the pariah forward, "do you know what I am saying to you?"

Squaw Charley saluted.

"Good, good! This is fortunate. Now we can have a talk with these Sioux." He addressed the Indian again. "And you speak English?" he asked.

There was a second grave salute.

"You shall be my interpreter, Red Moon. You shall have a log house near the agents, and the great father at Washington will [illegible] You shall have [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] papooses. What do you say to that?"

Squaw Charley [illegible] his head. The other [illegible] at [illegible] readily about [illegible]

"Don't [illegible] [illegible] your eyes, the other's face [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Appetite Gone--Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter surely tried her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Waterers, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headaches. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfect. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring, vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old, and guaranteed to create renewed activity and strength in every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Fighting Fires

Farmers around Indian River are having a hard time saving their houses and barns from the bush fires. Many of them are up all night watching the fires, and have torn down the fences and ploughed up strips of land around the buildings to stop the onward march of the flames. The fires are burning in the woods of Mr. William Leahy and Mr. Patrick Haley. The buildings of these two gentlemen are in danger and also those of Michael Boland. The farmers of the district are praying for rain, as constant worry in connection with the bush fires is telling on them.

The Election on Monday

As the press has expressed itself recently, after a candid review of the field, and with nothing but a friendly regard for the Conservative candidate, there is hardly a question of the return to the House of Commons on Monday by a decisive majority of Hon. J. R. Stratton. The conceded fact that the government at Ottawa is to be sustained by such a majority as will ensure its control of affairs for five years to come at least, makes it of importance, aside from all political considerations, that West Peterborough shall be represented by a member in harmony with the policy of the government. And certainly there is no man in this city or county more capable by ability and experience and an enthusiastic devotion to those industrial interests of which the city is growing so proud, than Mr. Stratton. Occupying a conspicuous position as a manufacturer and a business man, his interests are the interests of the people, and it may be safely taken for granted that it in the next five years there is anything to be secured from the Ottawa government for the benefit of Peterborough county, J. R. Stratton is the man who can be relied upon to get it. As has well been said by a local Conservative paper his bitterest opponent will not regard his election as a calamity.

Produce Gas

Hence Certain Foods Not Nourishing

No matter how agreeable an article of food may be, if it causes bloating and gas in the stomach, it is not likely, to be nourishing.

The gas thus formed is liable to cause actual, immediate harm by pressing against the heart.

An Oregon girl suffered in this way until she found the right kind of food. She writes:—

"Two years ago I had given up all hope of having health and strength. After eating I had severe pain around the heart, and a choking sensation.

"During these spells I had to sit perfectly still, the slightest movement causing increased pain. Even breathing caused such sharp pain my heart seemed to turn over, making me take short quick breaths.

"Night after night without sleep, I would sit up and wait until morning when the pains gradually lessened. I began to fear serious heart trouble.

"One day I was so miserable the doctor was called. After a careful examination he said it was gas from fermented food, pressing against my heart, that caused the trouble—otherwise my heart was all right.

"His medicine gave only temporary relief. I tried going without food, hoping I could find something which would agree with me. After I became quite weak, an aunt suggested Grape-Nuts.

"The first meal of this food caused no unpleasant effects but made me feel stronger. At every meal I ate Grape-Nuts and grew better daily. I now have no trouble when I avoid pasty, starchy foods and stick to Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Stratton's Meetings

had of doing things, and of finding out ways of conferring practical benefits upon the people of the county, was the best man for their welfare, and the more he knew of him the more strongly he realized this. (Applause).

Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Hon. Mr. Stratton in closing the meeting sketched the progress of the public works throughout that portion of the county which he had been glad to be able to help in pushing forward. He reviewed at some length the great public questions before them, chief among which was the great transcontinental railway that was to develop the resources of the nation, not only in the prairies of the West, but in a new Quebec and a new Ontario. He impressed upon them that the more progress and development they had in the West, the greater the benefit for them, because the markets there created built up manufacturing Ontario, and their own industries in Peterborough, and the employment thus created, provided for all their products the most profitable market that could be presented to them. He dwelt also upon the direct benefit they would derive from the Trent Valley Canal, and showed how carefully their interests in that connection, so long neglected and trifled with by the former governments, had been forwarded by the present administration. He then devoted some attention to an alleged telegram purporting to have been received from Mr. R. M. Dennistoun and which had been given currency in the Review of Wednesday evening, making the utterly false and malicious statement that Mr. Stratton and his friends were trading upon an allegation that R. M. Dennistoun was supporting him in this election. As the public knew well no such claim has been advanced by himself or by anyone in his behalf, and any person who made such representation as the Review gives currency to was guilty of gross perversion of the facts. Indeed, it would appear that Mr. Dennistoun has in this matter been the victim of the same deception and treachery, on the part of some men who pose as his political friends, as he experienced on the occasion of his removal to Winnipeg, where all his friends, regardless of party, wish him a happy and prosperous career.

The meeting was closed with a rousing demonstration of confidence in Hon. Mr. Stratton.

MEETING AT NOGIE'S CREEK

In the evening there was a large attendance of electors, many ladies being present, at Nogie's Creek, Mr. Arthur Dewdney was elected chairman, and said he was glad to note that they had a gathering which was one of the largest in their experience, and it was a pleasure to note so many of their wives and daughters among them. (Applause). He said he had lived in the City of Peterborough before coming up to the northern portion of the county, and he had known Hon. Mr. Stratton at his home there, and he found him always the same progressive, energetic, go-ahead individual that he was in dealing with the business of the riding. Mr. Stratton was always doing something for somebody else, and particularly for the electors who reposed so much trust in him. (Applause). And if in helping others he had also helped himself, and had received his own share of a prosperity that he helped to create, he was sure there was no settler in that district who was not glad of it. And as they had always found, Mr. Stratton was always the same to everybody, and he did not think that any kind of affluence, or public prominence would ever be able to change his character. (Applause). He thought the people of that district were more concerned about the practical results by which they had been benefited, than by any political questions. They knew what a road or a bridge, a dam or a slide meant for them, and when they remembered how many of these works had been provided by Mr. Stratton's agency, they could not but feel that he was the man for their interests in the House of Commons, and he did not believe the electors of the county would be so foolish as not to take advantage of the chance of putting Mr. Stratton where he could do them so much good (Cheers).

Ex-member Hall and Mr. J. H. Meldrum addressed the meeting in telling terms, going over the ground with which all our readers are now familiar, and each of the gentlemen was most earnest in impressing upon the voters his belief that the sending of Hon. J. R. Stratton to the House of Commons was of the utmost importance to the welfare and progress of the county, and especially so to the people of the new country who had so many interests that the Government at Ottawa by friendly attention could promote.

Hon. Mr. Stratton said this was the last speech of the campaign that would close on Monday evening and it seemed appropriate that the efforts of the contest should be concluded in that section where he had entered upon it. He would not go over the work that he had accomplished for them in roads and bridges and other public improvements. They were all familiar with them, and they knew their value, not only to the district at large, but to each individual settler. But he did not want them to understand that he claimed any special credit for these things, for they had appealed to him simply as in the performance of a duty that he had been instructed with. (Applause). But he could fairly present to them that a past record was the best guarantee of future performance that could be offered to them, and none of them would doubt that when he was sent to Ottawa in their behalf their welfare would be his constant care as in the past. (Applause). The record of his opponent had been in the past a blank so far as anything that he had accomplished could be pointed to, and it would be a blank in the future because the opportunity of public service that he had not deserved was going to be denied to him. (Cheers).

Mr. Stratton said that on his return to Peterborough last night after a very satisfactory and pleasing season of intercourse with the electors of Harvey, he was not at all astonished to find in the columns of the Review, whose responsibility, some of them would recollect, had been declined by Mr. Burnham, an alleged telegram purporting to have come from Mr. R. M. Dennistoun at Winnipeg, that if genuine, could only have been procured upon false pretenses.

It is nothing new to have misleading and utterly baseless utterances put forth in this campaign in favour of Mr. Burnham, and he felt quite sure that he was within grounds in saying that grossly false representation must have been made to Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, if he ever penned the telegram, which the Review presents as having emanated from him. For his own part, he would like to have some better evidence of the authenticity of that telegram than its mere appearance in the columns of the Review.

When Mr. Burnham states that he (Mr. Stratton), or any of his friends has circulated, either on the platform, or in his newspaper, or in his intercourse with the citizens, such a statement as that Mr. Dennistoun was supporting Mr Stratton's candidature he or they say that which is not true, and which they know not to be true. He (Mr. Stratton) and Mr. Dennistoun during all their careers have been most strongly opposed in the political field, but their opposition had always been characterized by a straightforward, manly and upright procedure.

Mr. Dennistoun, he felt quite sure, would himself never have been guilty of securing the nomination of his party by the questionable methods that have placed J. Hampden Burnham in the field as the candidate of the Conservative party in this county. It may be quite readily conceded that if Mr. Dennistoun were in Peterborough today, Mr. Stratton would scarcely expect his vote, but it is also exceedingly doubtful whether he would feel himself in a position to give a strenuous support to Mr. Burnham in this election.

As for Mr. Burnham's statement as to what the honest Liberals in this province are going to do, either with regard to Mr. Stratton or to any other Liberal candidate, these words will be taken at their worth. Mr. Burnham is not in a position to speak for the Liberals of this constituency, and more than that, he is scarcely in a position to speak for the honest Conservatives of this county, many of them, he had reason to believe, will vote for Mr. Stratton in preference to the gentleman who is taking the means that Mr. Burnham has resorted to of advancing what he thinks to be his interests in this campaign. (Applause). There was no doubt of his triumphant election on Monday next, and he was grateful to realize that he would owe it in so large a measure to the settlers of the newer townships of the county, whose interests had always been his special concern, and who would receive the same vigilant service, so far as lay in his power, at Ottawa as he had given them at Toronto. (Great applause).

The meeting was brought to a close with thanks to the chairman and the ladies, cheers for the King, and a hearty expression in favour of their candidate, Hon. Mr. Stratton.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognised medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and through them, the whole system, that all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

A BOGUS CLAIM TO CREDIT MADE BY MR. BURNHAM

The Conservative Candidate Makes An Impudent Appeal For Approval, Utterly Undeserved, For a Service Utterly Beyond His Power To Give.

(FROM THE PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER OF OCT. 23RD)

Last night the Conservative candidate, the "honest" man, flooded the city with fly sheets announcing, in flaming head lines—"Big Contract Secured by the Canadian General Electric Company."

This assumption of Mr. Burnham reminds the public of the devious methods by which he secured his nomination.

Appended to this is the astounding statement, alleged, on behalf of Superintendent Patterson, that the Company:

> "IS INDEBTED to Mr. J. H. Burnham, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, and Mr. James Kendry for their efforts in assisting to secure the contract."

No more barefaced attempt has been made in this community to gain political credit on an absolutely unfounded claim.

The contract was given by tender. If the tender of the Canadian General was the lowest they got the contract, and no help was needed—the lowest tender got the job—no help was needed from Mr. Burnham, Mr. Bradburn or Mr. Kendry, who had no more to do with the awarding of the contract than the unborn child.

If the C. G. E. tender was not the lowest, and Messrs. Burnham, Bradburn and Kendry by any influence they possess, induced the Conservative Government of Ontario to award a contract involving expenditure of the people's money, to a tender not the lowest, they are proclaiming themselves guilty of a most glaring impropriety, which might well be characterized in stronger terms.

In a word, the claim of credit made by Mr. Burnham is a bogus claim, and is a piece with the odious campaign of abuse and mud-slinging he has waged during this present campaign.

As a matter of fact, as the following statement indicates, the Canadian General Electric Company repudiates the action of the "Review," as well as the authority upon which it purports to be based.

The following telegram, from the head of the Canadian General Electric Company, on this subject, was received to-day, addressed to Mr. Stratton:

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 23, 1908.

MR. J. R. STRATTON, PETERBOROUGH, Ont.

"I have your message in regard to statements published by an official of the Company. I have not seen the statement referred to, and cannot, therefore, express an opinion as to its propriety, and can only say that the management have not authorized any statements for publication.

"FREDERIC NICHOLLS."

Liberal Majority Will Be 65

A careful review of the progress of the campaign, consulting sources of information of fair impartiality, shows an even stronger support for the government than had been anticipated. The probable result in the provinces is given as follows:

Province	Liberals	Others
Quebec	55	10
Ontario	39	47
New Brunswick	10	3
Nova Scotia	13	5
Prince Edward Island	3	2
Manitoba	6	4
Saskatchewan	8	2
Alberta	4	3
British Columbia	5	2
Yukon	1	0
	143	78

The new House of Commons will consist of 221 members, thus giving the Government a majority over all oppositionists, of sixty-five. It is our belief that the showing in this province will be even more favorable than here presented, but at all events it is satisfactory to contemplate that the career of progress of the country is not to be interrupted by any possible succession to office of the band of incompetents and scandal mongers who have in this election been seeking to take the place of statesmen at the head of our affairs.

FREE! GIVEN AWAY!

Special Offer to Ladies

I will send ten days' treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weakness, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 24th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 boxes of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more boxes will produce a permanent cure. Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial boxes free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many baptisms in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Coonley in the noble work, believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1903.

Dear Friend,—Sometime ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicine had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years of terrible suffering and undergoing three operations, I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms tongenter?

Gratefully yours,

Miss G. T., 259 Brock street.

Address enclosing 3-cent stamps for Free Sample, circulars and other testimonials.

DEDICATION FESTIVAL AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Services Begun 81 Years Ago in a Log School House—History of Peterborough and St. John's Inseparable

Yesterday was the first of the two Dedication Festival Sundays in connection with St. John's Anglican church, and for the first time the handsome ecclesiastical flag, presented by Rev G. C. Frewer, of England, father of Captain Frewer, now of this city, was to be seen flying to the breeze from the ancient and lofty tower of the sacred edifice Both services were of a bright and cheerful nature, Rev. Canon Davidson, the rector, officiating, assisted by Ven. Archdeacon Clark, M.A., of Hamilton, who preached sermons very appropriate to the festival occasion at both morning and evening services. The splendid choir, under Mr. Bevey's direction, rendered specially prepared music in a manner that addded considerably to the beauty of the services.

These annual dedication festivals are in commemoration of the complete renovation of St. John's in 1882, when on All Saints' Day, 26 years ago next Sunday, the present chancel was added; modern seats substituted for square pews; gallery removed; gothic windows installed, grounds laid out, and new organ procured. But St. John's has been a church and Anglican parish from the inception of Peterborough.

For 73 years has its doors been open for public service, and prior to 1835, when the present building was first dedicated to the worship of God, services were for nine years conducted in a log school house. In fact the history of Peterborough and St. John's are inseparable, and no wonder that its rector and congregation are proud of the sacred building and its associations with the past.

BRIEF HISTORY OF ST. JOHN'S.

The following summary of the history of St. John's church and parish will perhaps be found interesting reading;—

1818-19—First settlers arrived in this district.

1821—A house and mill erected by Adam Scott. This was the first building in Peterborough, then known as Scott's Plains.

1825—Hon. Peter Robinson conducted Mother a large party from Ireland, and erects the first public buildings at the corner of Simcoe and Water streets. Town plot surveyed.

1827—Name of Peterborough chosen as a compliment to Hon. Peter Robinson.

1827—Religious services begun and conducted nine years in a log school house.

1831—St. John's church projected and tenders invited.

1835—Lands constituting the rectory of Peterborough granted by the Crown.

1835—St. John's church opened for worship.

1837-8—Canvas for funds in England by Capt. Rubridge, who conducted two emigration parties hither.

1846—Communion plate presented to the church, which is still in use.

1850—, June 1—Peterborough incorporated as a town. First Mayor, Thos. Benson, esq., a member of St. John's. Population 1800.

1853—Church restored; buttresses and pillars added; old wooden clock removed from tower; Kivas Tully, architect. Pipe organ procured.

1859—School house erected in rear of church.

1873—New bell placed in tower.

1876—Ambulumbum set aside as a new parish, and St. Luke's school house built.

1878—New school house built for St. John's.

1882—St. [illegible] completely renovated, chancel added, modern seats substituted for square pews; gallery removed; gothic windows installed, grounds laid out, and new organ procured, church reopened All Saints' Day. A. P. Pousette, chairman Building Committee, R. A. Morrow, secretary committee; J. C Belcher, C.E., architect.

1889—Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls bequeathed $500 to each of the two Sunday schools in this parish. Pulpit procured.

1891—All Saints' church (nave and basement) built and opened free of debt.

1897—Chancel, vestrys, etc., added to All Saints.

1900—Class rooms, basement, etc., added to St. John's school house and opened free of debt. R. M. Dennistoun, chairman Building Committee; J C Belcher, architect.

1901—Interior of church decorated. Collection of historical photos unveiled in guild room.

1902—Parish of All Saints' separate from St. John's.

1907—New and enlarged modern vestry erected. D. Hughes-Charles, chairman Building Committee; J E. Belcher, C.E., architect.

1908—Rectory now being built. Peter Campbell chairman Building Committee; J. C Belcher, C.E., architect.

The Dedication festival will be continued next Sunday, the anniversary of the opening of the church on All Saints' Day, 1882, after complete renovations.

Watching for the Vote Briber

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 25.—The police here have been asked to watch for Wm. Watch, jr., of Dorchester, who is accused of bribing voters in the interests of the Liberal candidate.

The Insinuations Against the Police

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 25.—Private Detective Huckle, who was arrested on a charge of blackmail and extortion, has insinuated that he would consult the attorney-general's department and have warrants issued for the arrest of some of the local police.

Suit for Libel Against the Dundas Paper

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 25.—Cyrus Nawn has issued a writ for damages for alleged libel against the Dundas Banner. The suit arrises out of a report of a burglary in which the paper stated that Nawn could not have been connected with the robbery as he was in jail at the time. The Banner published an apology, claiming that it was a typographical error

Eastern branch of C.A.A.U. Organized

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 25.—An eastern branch of the C.A.A.U., was formed here this Sunday night when the following officers were elected;

President—Henry Southam, Ottawa.

1st Vice—J. Stanley Cook, Westmount.

2nd Vice—T. Dilbock, Montreal.

Secretary—Percy Lee, Ottawa.

Assist.-Sec.—A. Gour, Lachine.

The C.A.A.U. was represented by Messrs. J. E. Merrick and J. H. Crowe.

The new organization will control all the amateur associations in Quebec, Ottawa city, and the district south-east of the Ottawa river. The clubs represented were chiefly those those from the Independent Harriers leagues.

Very Low Water at Stony Lake

Visitors to Stony Lake, who have recently come down report the water as extremely low. In fact it is years since it reached its present level. One man stated that it is now possible to walk on the rocks between some of the islands. Heretofore those rocks have been several feet below water at low water mark, and it was possible to sail over them. Rocks are now above the surface which were never seen by the majority of people before.

The present time is an ideal one for constructing and repairing wharves, and several people are taking advantage of it. The new government wharf at Juniper is being rapidly pushed ahead, and it will be a big improvement, and will be greatly appreciated by all residents of and visitors to the lakes next summer.

130 Square Miles of Timber Burned

Mr. Richard Lees, Public School Inspector, has been recently through the townships of Dummer, Methuen and Belmont where disastrous fires have ravaged woods and fields over an area of 125 to 130 square miles. They started at the east end of Stony Lake and spread rapidly in an easterly direction to the eastern boundary of Methuen. From there they stretched northward from Sandy Lake to the south end of Round Lake leaving a wide belt of smoked and charred ground and trees and causing thousands of dollars loss.

Mr. Samuel Hubbin, postmaster at Oak Lake, states that he has lost $1,000 by fire passing through a small woods of virgin pine. Other farmers who have splendid sugar bushes fear they have been injured more or less seriously by fire running through them.

HOGS ON FIRE.

Mr. Lees remarked that it was in the dried out swamps and bogs that the worst fires resulted. The ground was burned several feet down and the roots and trees were charred and severed as the ground around them smouldered. These swamps very vividly show the work of the flames. The ground is all ashes and logs, blackened trees have fallen in all directions, many of them being almost entirely reduced to ashes, and those of smaller stature have disappeared entirely, swallowed by the flames that enveloped them. When the fire had gone through a woods it would catch the fences, take hold of it then spread to the adjoining field of stubble through which it would run at all threations finally making its way into another woods and there it crawled and ran according to the nature of the material from field to woods, covered mile after mile in spite of the farmers' efforts. It was a difficult task to check the fire. In one instance a farmer cleared a path through a woods and ploughed through it a score five feet wide. Water carts from threshing machines were pressed into service and many other efforts were made with

ELECTION RETURNS

Watch for tomorrow morning's Times for a full report of the election returns. The special wire service which has been used by The Times for the past few weeks will be devoted to securing as correct and full a report of the returns from the Dominion as possible.

The Times will also contain the leading features connected with the election and these will be delivered to you before you have your breakfast, and several hours before the Toronto papers can be secured. The Times makes a feature of furnishing its readings with the important news of the outside world, and of furnishing it several hours before any other paper entering the city.

Young Lad Fell Into River, Saved by Inspector Watt

Fishery Inspector Watt was successful in saving a little lad from drowning in the river on Saturday. Mr. Watt was paddling around the C.P.R. bridge when he heard a splash. At first he paid no attention, but almost immediately he heard calls for help. He hastened up the river towards the slip back of Rogers boathouse where the C.P.R. spur line crosses, and there found a youngster struggling in the water. Mr. Watt succeeded in getting him into the canoe and then onto the land.

It seems two youngsters had been playing on the spur line and were running across the trestle work to get away from an approching train when one little fellow went through. He would have been drowned had not Mr. Watt arrived in time.

Will Vote in Three Algoma Bush Poles

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—The three bush polls in Algoma, in which there was no much trouble over the lists and in which there was some doubt as to whether there would be any vote, will be able to vote all right, the government expects. The lists have been finished and sent west on a special train from here.

Tom Longboat Lowered Record

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 24.—Longboat won the Marathon road race here today, covered the 25 miles in one hour 25 minutes and 44 seconds, which is one mile faster than the record. Fred Simpson the Hiawatha Indian, ran sixth.

The Comedy "All the Comforts of Home"

"All the Comforts of Home," as the title of the play suggests, is about ninety per cent. of laughing gas, and, to use the words of Mr. W. Winter, the veteran critic of the New York Tribune, "It is a perfect antidote to melancholy." With the possible exception of "Charley's Aunt," it has been the most popular comedy of modern times and those who go to see it on the 3rd and 4th of November will not be disappointed. Mr. Wm. Gillette, the eminent actor and playwright, who is playing at the Princess in Toronto at present, is the author of this delightful four-act comedy, and Burns Mantle, the dramatic critic of the Chicago Tribune, has said "if Mr. Gillette had never written anything but "All the Comforts of Home." it would have been enough to make him famous."

Although the situations and lines are intensely humorous, and the climaxes irresistibly funny, there is not a word in it that would bring a blush to the most modest cheek. The scene of the piece is laid in a private drawing room of a residence in one of the residential quarters of London, England, and the Pettibone, the owner of the house, has a young wife of whom he is very jealous, without cause, and in the midst of his best and fury suddenly abruptly takes the entire family away on a three months' trip to Venice and other places, leaving his nephew, Alfred Hastings, a young doctor, who is always broke, to take charge of the house, during his absence. Pettibone gone, Alfred is man behind the gun and after rapturously surveying his new surroundings and looking at the keys to the wine cellar which his uncle has left him, calls in a partner Tom McDow, the funniest ever, and they both decide to turn the Pettibone mansion into a lodging house. A crude mode of rules and regulations is drawn up by Alfred in which a condition is enacted that children and dogs must keep off the grass and Tom McDow, a jack of all trades, puts a sign out in front of the house, announcing "Lodgigs to Let," with a blasing footnote to the effect that lodgers will have "All the Comforts of home." A lodging or boarding house in that locality is surely a new thing, and in a very brief space, the house is full of all sorts and conditions of men and women; country town folk, mad musicians, opera singers, English dudes and dead beats, dope fiends, men with minds and men without minds.

All sorts of complications arise and the fun at once becomes fast and furious. Old Bender falls in love with the opera singer; Alfred falls in love with Bender's daughter. Tom has his troubles with the mad musician and the dope fiend upstairs. Mrs. Bender is on the war path, the officers of the law come in to arrest Langhorne and the queer entanglements that follow are just the funniest ever seen amid the glare of the footlights. Things are going from bad to worse when the Pettibones return home. What happens after that is too funny to tell. You'll have to come and see it in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on November 3rd and 4th.

Following are the principals forming the cast; Messrs. Chas. Barber, Geo. Lynch, Irving Rivers, Mort Johnston, A. C. Yokome, F. D. Craig, D. B. McRae, W. G. Ferguson, Claude Brady, and C. G. Graham.

The following ladies will take part; Misses. L. L. Halliday, Nellie Halliday, Pearl Morgan, Nell Graham, Mona O'Shea, Agnes Pentland and Mrs. J. N. Barber.

The play will be staged under the direction of Irving Beers, who put it on with marked success in all the western cities of Canada and the United States.

Mail Steamer Struck a Rock

(Special to The Times.)

Little Current, Oct. 25.—The mail steamer Iroquois from here to Cutler, went on a reock near Spanish Mills, while she was running at almost full speed through the fog and smoke. The steamer listed over until her promenade deck took water. The cook stove and lanterns upset, and the boat took fire. The tug belonging to J. & S. Charlton, which was working on a boom near by heard the distress signals and went to the assistance and picked up the passengers and crew from the life boats. Only three mail bags were saved. The passengers and crew lost everything.

Obituary

BENJAMIN ALLCORN.

A very sad death occurred at Nicholls Hospital on Saturday evening, when Benjamin Allcorn, aged 37 years, passed away. The deceased was brought here from Fraserville two weeks ago, suffering from typhoid fever. In Fraserville he carried on a general store and did a big business. He was very widely and favorably known, and his death will be generally mourned. He leaves a wife and one child, to whom the sincere sympathy of the community is extended.

The remains were taken to Bellegham's undertaking establishment and will be shipped today to Cobourg and from there they will be taken to the home of Mrs. Allcorn's father, Mr. John Ball, Baltimore, Ont., The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere, a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the screen stage, to head off all colds. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

C. P. R. STEAMERS FOR PACIFIC TRADE

An Important Announcement Made by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy

Montreal, Oct. 26.—The oft-repeated report that the C. P. R. steamships Empress of Britain and Empress of Ireland will eventually be transferred to the Pacific service, and that other vessels, perhaps larger and faster, will be constructed for the Atlantic trade, has been substantiated by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who is at present in Victoria, B. C.

Sir Thomas, in his speech before the members of the Board of Trade of that city, last evening, stated that the Empress steamships might shortly be expected at Victoria, to take part in the Trans-Pacific trade. This being the case, there can be but one alternative and that is the construction of other vessels for the Atlantic service.

When shown the despatch today, Vice-President McNicol stated that he had nothing to say concerning Sir Thomas' remarks.

It is known, however, that the move has long been contemplated, and to the well informed shipping men of the port of Montreal the announcement does not create a great deal of surprise. In the construction of the Empress steamships, the C. P. R. had in view the trying out of certain ideas, always with a view of eventually giving to the Pacific service better and newer vessels than are now steaming over that ocean and at the same time building again for the Atlantic service.

As yet no announcement has been made by the C.P.R. concerning the giving of a contract for additional steamships, but an announcement to this effect would not now be a matter of any great surprise. The Empress steamships have met with unqualified success since their launching and entrance into the Canadian-British trade. They have, however, outgrown to some extent the business for which they were intended. In fact, they have in several instances beat the passenger figures of the greatest liners running out of New York, to wit the Mauretania and Lusitania, and time after time during the present season they have not only left port with every bit of passenger space filled, but have been obliged to refuse a great many would-be voyagers,—as they had no place to put them. This in view of the general depression during the summer now closed is looked upon as favorable to even larger vessels than the present Empresses.

Sheppard Perished in the Blizzard After a Hard Fight to Reach Shelter

(Special to The Times.)

Medicine Hat, Oct. 25.—Held up since Monday, it was not until Saturday morning that the eastern trains arrived here. Stories of hardships on the prairies are reaching here at frequent intervals. On Saturday afternoon Donald Cameron passed away in the Cypress Hills. Cameron and Donald Fisher were shepherds in the employ of Alexander Shaw, and they were forced by the blinding blizzard to leave their flocks. Cameron plodded on until he became exhausted, when Fisher helped him, carrying him for about fifteen miles in hopes of reaching some camp. When Fisher could carry Cameron no longer, he laid him down and stayed beside him until he passed away and then pushed on alone until he reached the D.D.D. ranch, after 16 hours without nourishment or rest. A searching party which started out found the body on Thursday. It is feared that many others have perished in the same way. Over three thousand sheep were driven into many Island lake, and only about three hundred were saved.

Ottawa Young Man Met With Peculiar Death will Hold Postmortem

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—Alfred H. Calder, a young man known as "Slim," met with a rather peculiar death here this morning, according to the story of his room mate. The deceased's companion states that last night after the customary jollification they both retired to rest at their boarding house on William street. During the night Calder, his roommate says, woke him up and asked him for an apple which was on the table, and which he got up and gave him. Later on he was awakened by a peculiar noise caused by Calder's breathing. He got up but the deceased passed away soon after. That he was choked by the apple was not a sufficiently satisfactory story for Coroner Baptie, who will hold a postmortem over the body.

Lindsay Defeated Y.M.C.A. Won in the Second Half Visitors Have Good Team

In the oldest kind of argument Lindsay defeated the local Y.M.C.A. team in a junior O.R.F.U. game on Saturday at Riverside Park. The score was 9—6 and at half time the locals looked good to win with a lead of 6—0.

The rough team braced up greatly in the second half, however, and with but a few minutes to play and the score a tie 5—5, kicked a goal from the field, and made it 9—5 Y. M.C.A. obtained another point from a rouge before time was called, making the result mentioned above.

Rain fell during the afternoon but the game was fast, and the exhibition quite an interesting one. The Lindsay outfit was encouraged by about 50 supporters who accompanied the team.

Lindsay has a well balanced aggregation and played an aggressive game. Y.M.C.A. played in fine form too, Kelly doing some phenomenal punting in the first half. He was well supported by Evans at full. The only touch down was made by Cahill early in the first quarter. A rouge in the last quarter gave Y.M.C.A. the other point. Two goals from the field and a rouge gave Lindsay their page.

The visiting back division was stronger than that of the Y's. Cotton at center and Green at right half distinguished themselves by the splendid games they played. In the first half Green made some sensational dashes for good gains. Cotton punted cleverely during the game. The Lindsay team had it on the locals in the matter of weight. The game was a hard one, but was not at all rough.

Dr. McPherson refereed and Frank O'Connor acted as umpire. Both officials were most satisfactory.

The teams lined up as follows;

Y.M.C.A.		LINDSAY
	Back.
Evans		Watson
	Halves
Moore		Green
Kelly		Cotton
Stanton		Sylvester
	Quarter
McDonald		Kilten
	Scrimmage.
Patterson		McQuarrie
Armstrong		Deagan
Shirley		Newton
	Inside
Dewary		Murdil
Henderson		McHugh
	Middle
Hall		Engle
Archibald		Green
Cahill		Conway
	Outside

On Saturday afternoon at the Riverside Park previous to the big game the clever little aggregation from the Collegiate Institute, put it all over the T.A.S. Juniors by the handsome score of 23—0. The game all through was a one-sided match, and the spectators could at all times easily see that the T.A.S. boys needed more practice and a better team to oppose the students. The features of this game were the punting of Forsyte, who played full back for the winners, and the long run of Kennedy for the losers The following is the line-up of both teams;

P.C.I. (23)—Full Back, Forsyte; halves, Gaele, Conroy, Hall; quarter, Giroux; Wings, Shenby, Leahy, Layfield, Gilbert, Anderson, Quinlan, Matthews, Gibson and Harstone.

T.A.S. (0)—Full Back, McGill; halves, Larkin, Fitzgerald and O'Hern; quarter, Milloy; wings, Henry, Kennedy, Galvin, Dawson, O'Brien, O'Donnell, Hanrahan, Foley and Nearn

Shortly after this game at the Oval the Rough Riders, most of whom are bankers, easily defeated the Y.M.C.A. by the score of 9—5. During the first half it looked as though the Association boys would carry off the honors, but the Rough Riders outclassed their opponents during the last half and won by 9—6. The following is the line ups;

Rough Riders (9)—Full Back, Munroe; Halves, Wade, Dobbin and Ecclestone; quarter, Hutchinson; wings, Patterson, Reid, Sutherland, Mowry, Cranfield, Storey, Laing and Mitchell

Successful Series of Addresses by Rev. Dr. Harris

Rev. Dr. Harris concluded his series of studies of the Bible on Sunday evening in Stanley street Baptist church, when he delivered a splendid sermon to a very large congregation. Dr. Harris was brought here under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A. Bible Study department. He delivered nine addresses beginning last Wednesday night in St. Paul's church, and all were well attended as well as greatly appreciated by everyone who had the pleasure of hearing him. On Sunday he occupied the pulpit in St. Paul's church, and in the even-

Shrubb Defeated Picked Team of Three Men

(Special to The Times.)

Buffalo, Oct. 25.—Arthur Shrubb, the world's champion distance runner, defeated the picked team of three men at Kensilworth Park track this afternoon. Three miles were run with Allens and Moynihan, two local men, each taking a mile and a half, and Billy Davis, the Hamilton Indian two mile champion, running the last two miles. Shrubb gained a 100 yards on Allens and 60 yards on Moynihan, while he simply toyed with Dishman upon the entire last mile and was a half a mile in the lead at the end of the race. The time for the five miles was 26 minutes and 103-5 seconds. A large crowd saw the race and a lot of enthusiasm greeted the Englishman at the finish.

NERVOUS, SLEEPLESS WORN OUT.

Expected to Die or go Crazy With Nervousness.

"I could not sleep—I could not rest—was ready to cry on the least occasion—yet I was plump and fat. Can you imagine a more distressing condition than weakness of body and mind?" writes Mrs. Wembley, of Halifax. "I lost myself in a sort of self pity because health seemed so shattered, and with the mental distress that grew with my bodily weakness, I was a burden to myself and a greater burden to my family.

"Though I sought and really needed pity, I got very little, for I did not look so very sick. It was only my nerves that were sick, and anyone who has sick nerves knows too well how awful a sickness it is.

"From the first Ferrozone strengthened my nerves, and it seemed to help them for I became stronger, more composed, slept more and grew more hopeful. When I had taken Ferrozone for about two months I lost that miserable sense of dread. I never could tell what I was afraid of, but expected something dreadful was going to happen me. Ferrozone gave me the strength to throw aside all these fancies and made me well again."

Go at once to any druggist, get a few boxes of Ferrozone—start right on the road to health and vigor. Ferrozone will keep you there—will show you what it means to be healthy, vigorous, full of nerve energy. Once you're dressed up and energized with Ferrozone you'll never again be content with ill-health.

All dealers sell Ferrozone, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50.

Free Rural Mail Delivery Not Started

(Special to The Times.)

Picton, Oct. 25.—Rural Free mail delivery from here to West Lake was promised the residents along the route for this week, by a Mr. Dureton, who was mapping out the proposed routes through this county, to be instituted if the government was returned to power, but the West Lake people did not get the house to house delivery on Tuesday and Wednesday. Alfred Mills, the stage driver on this route, and who also has the contract for carrying the mails, has as yet received no instructions to carry out the new idea.

Machine is O.K.

The Lindsay people like the cutting machine which the water commissioners loaned to the Lindsay commissioners this week. Several connections are being made to the mains and especially one which connects the pipes with the new filter beds. It did its work well and the Lindsay people are more than pleased.

Who was Columbus?

In the afternoon in all the schools a part of the time was devoted to the study of the life and deed of Columbus. An amusing reply was given by one of the pupils. A teacher had told the class of the wonderful voyage of Columbus and how he insisted on continuing the voyage after the other men were clamoring to return. Then she asked; "Who was Columbus?" with the view of learning how well they had followed her talk. One little hand went up.

"Well, Johnny, who was he?" asked the teacher.

"Columbus was the gun of the vessel was the answer.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sen on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted, and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

A SATISFACTORY REPORT

The officers and directors of the Molsons Bank are to be congratulated on the result of the operations of the last financial year, as set forth in the report submitted at the 3rd annual general meeting, held at the head office of that institution in Montreal on Monday last.

The profits amount to $612,646.41, from which have been paid in quarterly dividends 10 per cent. for the year, $387,287.77; taxes, $16,948.59; contributions to Officers' Pension Fund, $10,000; expended on branch premises, $48,813.25, and a sum of $100,000 has been applied to cover depreciation in value of bonds and stocks owned by the bank, being part of its reserves, leaving $39,596.79 to go to profit and loss account, raising it to $151,684.40.

Branches have been opened during the year at St. Ours, St. Cesaire, and Waterloo, in Quebec Province, and at Zurich, in Ontario.

FINANCIAL PANICS OF HALF A CENTURY

In order to show them that their recent financial depression was not so bad as it might have been the people of the United States are being told about other troubles in the past half century. A particularly readable article is contributed by Mr. Louis Windmuller, a New York merchant, to the Forum. In 1857 Mr. Windmuller went through his first panic but having been "under fire" in the failure of the Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co., he drew in current bills some money from a Williamsburg bank and $1st in gold from the Bank of New York, so that when subsequently, almost every financial institution this side of the Rockies closed its doors, the writer could play chess in his office with his clerk, while his distracted neighbors chased the fleeting shadows of ephemeral bankers."

THE WILDCAT BANK.

In 1857 wampum had been discarded and clearing house certificates had not been invented. Coin was scarce, and the circulating medium consisted of bank notes, some issued under a guaranty of a safety fund held by various States, and some were issued by what were called "free banks." The former passed at their face value, but the notes of the free banks, sometimes called "wildcats", were discounted at from 1-3 to 10 per cent. The possibility of having to cash these notes never troubled the mind of some of the bankers, who stamped the new bills "Payable at President's counter," and set them in circulation. Mr. Windmuller relates that a New York broker who had become "loaded" with the bills of one of these free banks sent a clerk with a satchel full of the greenbacks to the Illinois town whence they had been issued. He found the bank in a log cabin on a prairie road, its only occupant a "cashier". This official examined the notes, but expressed his profound regret at being unable to cash them, the president having gone to Chicago, taking with him the cash box.

THE SECESSION PANIC.

Institutions of this part had been wiped out when the depression of 1857—1 descended on the land. This panic was the result of the secession movement in the South. Southern merchants had always been "slow pay," but generally honorable in their dealings, but in 1860 they came to consider the payment of Northern creditors treasonable, if the Northerners happened to be abolitionists. They therefore shut down on them, and brought ruin to many a Northern merchant. Occasionally, however, a Northerner was more fortunate than he could have expected at the time, as the following incident proves;

A New York merchant was induced personally to go South to collect his outstanding accounts. As money was unobtainable, he took rosin, cotton, or any commodity he could get instead, and, by a sloop chartered at Wilmington, N.C., he consigned this merchandise to New York, with instructions to store on arrival. After his Southern claims were thus secured this ardent patriot stumped the Carolinas and Georgia for freedom, until he was himself deprived of it. Mistaken for a Northern spy, he lingered for some time in Southern dungeons. When finally liberated he returned to New York and found his Wilmington cargo in his Brooklyn warehouse. The rosin he accepted for $1 was worth $40, while Sea Island cotton, which cost him 12 cents, was worth 90 cents a pound. Although these prices were paid in depreciated money, the small cargo realized a large fortune.

THE FREE SILVER CRASH.

War was "hell" for merchants as well as soldiers and their families, and at one time a third of the commercial buildings on Lower Broadway, in New York City, were to let, although the prediction made when Fort Sumter surrendered, namely that "grass would grow in Wall Street," was not fulfilled. The next great crisis came in 1893, and was caused by the withdrawal of foreign capital, which had become scared by the agitation for free silver. The incident that precipated the crash was the exposure of the fraud connected with the Old Cordage Company. The managers of this concern had incorporated at fictitious values one rope walk after another. Of the millions ostensibly paid to control the market, a slight portion was allotted for dividends made to establish a fictitious market for the stocks. What became of the rest of the money nobody ever discovered. Industrials began to tumble, and Mr. Windmuller relates that one day, having been invited by a wealthy friend to lunch at the Lawyer's Club, he found him pressed for margins he could not furnish. "He received numerous messages through the club's waiters before the roast was served, and was harassed by a call to the "phone after every glass of wine we raised to our lips."

BANKERS AS BURGLARS.

Some bankers adopted original methods to restore "confidence" to alarmed depositors. A German brushmaker drew $500 from a bank that was shaky, and safe deposit vaults being unknown, hid the money under his bed. Thereupon, the banker organized a "fake" burglary, but the German was found on guard with a revolver. He sat up till morning, and then, still carrying his revolver, returned the money to the enterprising banker. Keen brokers watched the depositors drawing this money from the banks, and following them home, induced them to part with their savings in consideration of a premium. Some employers paid these sharks as much as four per cent. premium for their payrolls. When the premium dwindled and finally disappeared, many brokers lost more than they had previously gained. Speaking of the troubles that began in 1907, and which, it is hoped, are about over, Mr. Windmuller remarks;

"The paucity of commercial failures in the face of compulsory retrenchment has demonstrated that American merchants who confine themselves to legitimate business are worthy of confidence. Of the security which the New York Clearing House accepted during the panic for certificates more than 70 per cent., consisted of commercial paper, which was all paid as it matured."

The wintergreen, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Sheop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective cough medicine. Dr. Sheop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Sheop's. Sold by all dealers.

CHINA'S CONSTITUTIONS BY INSTALLMENTS

Two or three years ago it was announced from Peking that the court, which meant the empress dowager, "the only man in China," as she has been called, had decided to grant the people a constitutional form of government. At certain intervals since, the report has been officially or semi-officially confirmed, without, however, causing much joy or excitement either in the Celestial Empire or in the hard, prosaic West. To China, the mysterious, the inscrutable, the French proverb, "The more it changes, the more it is the same thing," applies with peculiar force.

And yet it is not to be denied that since the boxer uprising things have been happening in China. Her merely external transformation has been amazing, and Peking is scarcely recognized by travellers and correspondents. The outward manifestations argue an inward grace, a new outlook, a mental and political unrest.

It is now reported that the Chinese government has promulgated a bulky document, with a flowery, rhetorical preamble, which is called a constitution. This document reaffirms the intention of establishing provincial and local self-government plus a national parliament. A nine-year programme is carefully mapped out, and this current year is to see the beginning of the great task. The first steps are to be local self-government, revision of the criminal code and reorganization of the national finances—a lot of work for what remains of the year.

In 1909 provincial assemblymen and constitutional commissioners will be elected. Finally, in 1916, parliament will be summoned and a premier named to head the executive branch of the government.

Meantime "boundless daily improvement" is promised or predicted, to the amusement of western observers. The preamble to the queer oriental document contains many apologies and arguments for caution and delay, and they seem rather superfluous. Whether the West is too skeptical or not, the fact remains that the outlined reforms would be regarded as marvelous and miraculous, even if they should be realized in fifty years.

We shall see what we shall see. The empress cannot live much longer, and the young emperor, before he was effectually suppressed, showed a decided leaning to western institutions and ideas. There are enlightened mandarins and scholars in China, and they would carry out the new programme with method and skill if they had the chance. But what of the strength of the reactionaries; the plotters, the corruptionists?

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Sheop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Sheop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

News in Brief.

Winnipeg, Oct. 23.—The auction sale of 250,000 acres of land in Saskatchewan that was extensively advertised in the east and south was not the success expected, as the attendance was very much smaller than was looked for. Several sections of land was sold at prices ranging from $10 to $14 per acre, and several syndicates of American buyers took up much larger areas from the Canadian company's offerings.

Sympathy

A large touring automobile containing a man and his wife met a load of hay in a very narrow road. The woman declared that the farmer must back out, but her husband contended that she was unreasonable.

"But you can't back the automobile so far," she said, "and I don't intend to move for anybody. Besides, he should have seen us."

The husband pointed out that this was impossible, owing to an abrupt turn in the road.

"I don't care," she insisted. "I won't move if I have to stay here all night."

Her husband was starting to argue the matter, when the farmer, who had been sitting quietly on the hay, interrupted:

"Never mind, sir!" he exclaimed, with a sigh. "I'll try to back out. I've got one just like her at home."

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bonafort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has even made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the agency of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave, Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offlowers and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance scenes to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 38 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government on canal construction work the sum of $1,220,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,768, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lakes and northern waters.

Thus, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to exercise of representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $60,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheat traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. It found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 200 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to secure all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

"I'll tell you, sir," interposed Lieutenant Fraser, studying the paper. "I don't believe he ever speaks. You'll notice that it says here, 'but he has never.' I can't be sure, but I think the next word is 'spoken.'"

"Vow of silence?"

"Something of the kind. Captain Oliver has been telling me about these bucks that are degraded, and I don't believe that, even if this fellow spoke, the rest of the tribe would treat with us through him."

"That's probably true."

"They've made a squaw of him, sir."

Deep humiliation instantly showed in the pariah's eyes and posture. He looked at Lieutenant Fraser imploringly and drew his blanket still more closely about him. Then, as with a sign he was bidden to put it off, he suddenly let it drop to the floor.

"Great Scott!" cried the colonel. "He's dressed like one!"

"His punishment, sir. And he won't be taken back as a warrior till he does some big deed."

"What does that paper say again? 'Out of the weakness of the flesh he wept under the tortures of the sun dance.' So that's the cause of his trouble! What did they do to you, Red Moon?"

To reply Squaw Charley quickly divested himself of the calico waist and turned about. And Colonel Cummings, uttering his horror, traced with tender finger the ragged, ghastly seams that lined the pariah's back.

"Muscles torn loose," he said. "Not old wounds either." As Squaw Charley resumed waist and blanket he looked on pityingly.

"I'll give him his freedom," he said when the outcast stood ready to depart. "He can come and go in the post as he likes. Robert, see that the adjutant understands my order. Now let him get something to eat in the kitchen."

When Squaw Charley's hunger had disappeared before the enforced and rather nervous generosity of Colonel Cummings' black cook and Lieutenant Fraser had left him he hurried away from headquarters. Making his way to the sentry line north of Brannon, he gathered firewood along the Missouri until dark.

The lantern had been out for an hour in the cottonwood shack. Father and daughters were asleep. But at the end of that time Dallas was suddenly awakened by the sound of loud stamping and reading in the lean-to. Ben and Betty, roused by the fear of something, were plunging and pulling back on their halter ropes. Startled, her heart beating wildly, the elder girl crept softly to the warped door.

Her father and sister still slept, undisturbed by the noise in the stable, which now quieted as abruptly as it had begun. Dallas heard the team begin to feed again. And from outside the shack there came only a faint rustle. Was it the uncovered meadow grass of the eaves as the wind brushed gently through it or the whisper of moccasins on snow?

• • • • • • • •

Later, when Squaw Charley entered the sliding panel of the stockade, he crept noiselessly toward the shingle roof. But he was not to gain it unseen. Afraid-of-a-Fawn, who had been looking about for him, hailed him savagely as he neared.

"Wood for the morning fire," she demanded.

By the light streaming out of a nearby lodge she saw that Squaw Charley was looking at her defiantly. She set upon him, cursing and kicking, and drove him before her to the shelter.

"The pig!" she cried. "Running free since the sun was at the center of the sky and yet not a stick! May a thousand devils take the coward! He quakes like an aspen!"

"Wood for the morning fire," she demanded.

Squaw Charley was indeed trembling, but only with the cold, and soon, under the shingle roof, the snuggling dogs would warm him. Blows and abuse counted nothing this night. He was fed, freedom was his, and he had paid a debt of gratitude.

CHAPTER VI.

"DAD, what's the day after tomorrow?"

Evan Lancaster pursed his mouth and thoughtfully contemplated his elder daughter.

"Ah c'd figger it out," he declared after a puzzled silence, "ef Ah had th' almanac." He hunted about, found the pamphlet and began to study the December page. "Trouble is," he said at last, "Ah don' know no day t' figger fr'm—Ah los' track 'way back yonder at th' fore part o' th' month. 'Sides, Ah kain't say whether this is Tuesday or Wednesday or Thursday. Marlyn, d' you remember w'at day o' th' week it is?"

Marylyn left the farther window and walked slowly forward. As she halted beside her sister the latter put an arm about her tenderly and drew her close. A change had recently come over the younger girl—a change that Dallas had not failed to see, yet had utterly failed to understand. Marylyn still performed her few tasks about the house, but with absentminded carelessness. Her work done, she took up the long neglected vigil at the windows, spending many quiet and seemingly purposeless hours there—all unmindful that the beaded belt lay dusty and unfinished on a shelf. Only by fits and starts was the shack enlivened by her happy chatter. At all other times she was wistful and distrait. Now, as she answered her father, a faltering light crept into her eyes.

"The last time Mr. Lounsbury was here," she said hesitatingly, "it was the 6th, and today is"—

"Ah c'n git it," the section boss interrupted. After a moment's tallying on his fingers he sat back and clapped his knees in excitement. "W'y, Dallas," he cried, "th' day after t'morrow 's the end o' thet man's six months!"

Dallas released Marylyn. "Yes," she said, watching the younger girl wander back mechanically to the post she had forsaken. "And tomorrow you ought to start for Bismarck. Maybe it wouldn't matter if you waited awhile before going, but as long as the weather's good I think you ought to go right off."

"Ah reckon," he replied, but not heartily.

And so once more preparations for a trip were made. That night, when all was ready and Dallas and her father, having given the team a late feed, were leaving the stable together, she spoke to him of her sister.

"There's just one thing that worries me about your leaving," she said. "I don't know if you've noticed it or not, but Marylyn don't seem to be feeling good."

"I think mebbe she takes after her

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you're reached this state, read what J. W. Jarrell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, enrich out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-no's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Tag Day

For the purpose of raising funds for the construction of the new church, the ladies of St. James' congregation have decided to have tag day, although the date has not been yet decided upon. The scheme proposed is that every man, woman and child in the city be furnished with a tag for which they are expected to pay five cents. If you are not wearing a tag you will be approached and asked to purchase one and as the sum is so small it is not likely anyone will refuse it.

The Imthon Bible Class

The attendance of the Imthon Bible Class is increasing every Sunday. The attendance yesterday afternoon was fifty-one members and three visitors. A membership contest is being started this week and the Imthon's feel confident that it will be an easy matter to get two hundred members by the first of the new year. Colonel Bob Howland has his men assigned to various parts of the city and if everybody works as hard and as cheerfully as he does, and stands by the class motto, "We can if we will," the two hundred members are as good as enrolled. The fellows of Peterborough would do well to get the habit of going to the Imthon Bible Class at the George street Methodist church. You won't be a stranger very long.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions, which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeons' knife, would, it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

Will Take Part In Port Hope Harrier Meet

A number of local athletes will take part in the Port Hope Harriers meet to be held about the middle of next month. A lot of interest has been worked up here, and the indications are that Peterborough will be well represented. Among the organizations which have signified the intention of entering men are, The Harries Club, T.A.S., and the Otonabee Athletic Club. It is also possible that Bartley will take part.

THE MOLSONS BANK

Fifty-Third Annual General Meeting of Shareholders

A VERY SATISFACTORY YEAR

Directors' Report Adopted, and Retiring Board Unanimously Re-elected

The fifty-third annual general meeting of The Molsons Bank was held in the Board Room of that institution at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The President, Mr. Wm. Molson Macpherson, occupied the chair, and others in attendance were: Messrs. S. H. Ewing, Vice-President; George E. Drummond, J. P. Cleghorn, W. M. Ramsay, H. Markland Molson, Alex. D. Fraser, George Durnford, W. C. McIntyre, W. R. Miller, F. W. Molson, A. Piddington, Dr. J. Elsdale Molson, C. E. Sprague, A. G. Watson, H. S. Molson, A. Ramsay, James Elliot (General Manager), and A. D. Durnford.

The President, having called the meeting to order, requested Mr. A. D. Durnford to act as secretary, and that gentleman read the notice convening the meeting.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

The General Manager, Mr. James Elliot, then read the annual report of the Directors, as follows:—

Your Directors have much pleasure in presenting this, the fifty-third report and statement of affairs of the Bank, as on 30th September, 1908.

The profits made during the year have been good owing to a lively demand for money at fair rates, and the small amount of bad debts met with.

The net profits amount to $613,644.61, from which have been paid 10 quarterly dividends 10 per cent. for the year, $537,207.77; taxes, $16,543.80; contributions to Officers' Pension Fund $1,540.00, expended on branch premises, $48,518.35, and a sum of $100,000 has been applied to cover depreciation in value of bonds and stocks owned by the Bank, being part of its reserves, leaving $90,996.73 to go to Profit and Loss Account, raising it to $153,624.40.

Branches have been opened during the year at St. Ours, St. Cesaire, and Waterloo, in Quebec Province, and at Zurich in Ontario.

Head offices and branches have been as usual, carefully inspected since we last met.

The Bank's officers have continued to faithfully perform their duties.

WM. M. MACPHERSON,
President.

The Molsons Bank, Head Office, Montreal, 30th September, 1908.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President then said:—

When we submitted to you the Bank Statement a year ago, this country, though in a much less degree than others, was feeling the money stringency then prevailing over most of the civilized world. During the year great economy has been experienced and financial matters are now becoming normal and healthy, but it is not to be expected that a revival in manufacture and trade can be restored at once, a continuance of the greatest caution in the expansion of business should still be our watchword.

The railways have continued to extend their lines in all directions through the country, rendering most valuable service to the settlers, and opening out new territory. Cheap transportation is perhaps in this expanded country of magnificent distances, our greatest economical problem. Too much cannot be said in appreciation of the services rendered by our railways in enabling our prairie lands to be converted into productive farms, as well as rendering most valuable national service.

I am very pleased to be able to again report a favourable year's business for the Bank, as the statement just read by the General Manager shows. The immediate outlook is hopeful, and with good judgment and caution we shall see a steady revival in trade.

There is really nothing further to say in reference to banking matters and I beg to move the adoption of the report.

The motion was seconded by the Vice-President.

The President invited remarks from the shareholders, and Mr. A. G. Watson expressed the opinion that the shareholders should be pretty well satisfied with the statement which had been furnished. Referring to the shareholders who had taken up stock during the year, he said that it seemed only right and proper that those who had paid up their shares in full should receive consideration in the way of a bonus.

After further discussion, the President asked the shareholders to accept the report as submitted.

The Vice-President remarked that 16 per cent. was a very fair dividend and he thought that they could not be otherwise than pretty well satisfied with it. For the past fifty-three years the average dividend paid by the Bank had been over 9 per cent., and with that they must surely be satisfied.

Mr. George E. Drummond, spoke of the interest the President and General Manager had shown in the affairs of the Bank during the year, and said that the statement presented had had the full consideration of the Directors. The Bank had done admirably during the past year, earning about 16 1-3 per cent. They were trying to make Molsons Bank known throughout the length and breadth of the land by putting good, presentable buildings in each centre. In taking a conservative course, and providing against possible bad years, the shareholders would probably continue to get 10 per cent. The Bank was taking its stand with the best institutions in this country.

The scrutineers then presented their report showing the re-election of the retiring Board of Directors, viz., Drummond, S. H. Ewing, H. Markland Molson, W. Molson Macpherson, W. C. McIntyre and W. M. Ramsay.

The President thanked the shareholders for their attendance, and expressed the hope that next year would see results equally as satisfactory as the one just closed.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Mr. W. M. Macpherson was re-elected President, and Mr. S. H. Ewing, Vice-President for the ensuing year.

Fell from Top of Telephone Pole

Citizens of Peterborough who are acquainted with Mr. Jas. Wedlock, the well known summer resort proprietor on Nine Isanks of the Otonabee, will regret to learn that he sustained very serious injuries last week in a fall. He was assisting in the construction of the new telephone line between Stewartia and Millbrook when he accidentally fell from the top of a pole. He was on a steady heart that Doctors Hoover and Moneypenny, of Millbrook, had to be summoned in order to his relief. It is believed that several bones in his body have been fractured and that his neck bones have been injured.

Mr. Wedlock has numerous friends in the city who will regret to learn of such an accident to him.

1908 ELECTIONS---LIBERALS RETURNED WITH A MAJORITY OF 39 SEATS

Hon. J. R. Stratton was Elected to Represent West Peterboro, Majority will be Over 350

One of the hardest fought campaigns in the history of West Peterborough, was brought to a close at five o'clock last night with the result that when the votes had been counted Hon. J. R. Stratton was elected. All the returns were not received up to a late hour last night but from those that had been received gave Mr. Stratton 325 majority.

The City of Peterborough was the surprise to the Conservatives. In fact it was a heart breaker. From the beginning of the campaign the Conservatives had figured on a majority of from 800 to 500 in the city. It was this majority which they expected to carry the riding with, but the voters decided against them, and Mr. Burnham only got a majority of 5. This decided the election.

Mr. Stratton and his supporters the last few days put all their strength into the city, and their hard work had a telling effect, although neither side let up for a minute until the town clock struck five. Mr. Stratton and his supporters, however were confident from the beginning and he was well satisfied with the result of the city polling.

The result of the polls was as follows as far as was learned last night;—

THE PROCESSION.

About eight o'clock it was sure that Mr. Stratton had been elected and a procession was organized and headed by the 57th Regiment Band, paraded the main streets. The streets were brilliantly illuminated with fire works and torches, and the followers cheered lustily. Several bonfires were started but the police soon put a stop to that to protect city property.

EAST PETERBOROUGH.

The most cheering message the Conservatives received during the early part of the evening was the returns from East Peterborough, which gave Mr. Sexsmith a majority of nearly 400 over Mr. Tanner. The battle in the east was a hard one and both parties were confident to the last.

VARICOCELE CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe drinking and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I consulted to look upon all doctors as little better than regular. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were honest and skilful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $15 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $25 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

"To Them that Hath"

A SHORT SERMON TO FAT FOLKS.

"To them that hath shall be given" is a sentence that applies to fat people very keenly. It is common knowledge that once a human being begins to fatten up, to what they have already is added more than they want until finally a stage is reached where reduction must be made or decided disadvantages results.

Then comes forward the age-old query, "Reduce—but how?" To the uniformed nothing suggests itself but the (to them) twin evils—less eating—more activity. They contemplate a more or less lengthy siege of dieting and exercising. So it may be said safely that every man or woman in the land now undergoing the fattening-up process has his or her mental eye fixed dubiously on that not far distant day when he or she will have to don the "ashes and sackcloth of reduction."

This is not an enlivening prospect and so it is with considerable satisfaction that we announce the emancipation of the fat. Nowadays one may reduce much or little, a pound a day if desired, or hold their fat in check, absolutely stationary, without doing a tap of exercise, missing a single meal, doing a particle of harm or causing a solitary wrinkle. All that's required, as hundreds testify, is the taking after meals and at bedtime of one Marmola Prescription Tablet, which tablets are sold by the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., or any good druggist at the moderate price of 75 cents, this sum being accepted for a case of tablets as well and generously filled that even one produces desirable results.

Charges of Bribery in Winnipeg City

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 26.—Provincial detectives arrested R. McClellan, a prominent Liberal, and formerly a well known hockey player, was arrested while eating breakfast this morning at his home on a charge of bribery. Later he appeared before Judge Myers, and was accompanied by W. A. Carmen, and Geo. McLeod, who were in the jail over Sunday. They were allowed out on bail. W. A. Carmen is ex-president of the Manitoba branch of the Caledonia club. He was arrested by provincial detectives and placed in the provincial gaol. No charges have been laid as far as is known. E. J. Roeban proprietor of the Claridon Hotel, immediately offered bail. Bail was not only refused, but he was deprived of access to the prisoner. Roeban's friends and counsel were also deprived of access to the prisoner.

Broke Front Door of Magistrate Edmison's House

County Magistrate Geo. Edmison, who lives at 436 Rubidge street, received a bad scare about 3.30 o'clock this morning when he was suddenly awakened by a crash in the front of the house. Upon going down stairs Mr. Edmison discovered that some one had thrown a big stone through the glass in the front door, with the object no doubt of entering later. But as soon as the occupants of the house were awakened and turned on the lights the night walkers evidently decamped.

Mr. Edmison telephoned the police station and the whole night force went out to the house. At the time of going to press it was impossible to learn whether the officers had got any trace of the man.

Hot Time in Brockville Several Arrests Made

(Special to The Times.)

Brockville, Oct. 26.—Notwithstanding a steady downpour of rain from the opening to the close of the polls, the battle there was a warm one. It had its sensational features, too. The Conservatives caused several arrests, including Victor Bedford, who claimed to be a Montreal sleuth on the staff of the Field Agency, who was arrested at three o'clock this morning on a charge of vagrancy. The purpose was to hold him on accusations of electoral corruption to be proceeded with next Saturday. He was bailed out by Liberal workers. In police court this morning he changed his name to Quinn, and claimed to be a Dominion detective sent there to keep an eye on election matters, with out prejudice to either party. The Conservatives had been shadowing him for a week past. They claim to have considerable evidence, connecting him with the Liberal machine. T. Brady now of Smith Falls, and Dan McClellan of Picton, were challenged and sworn, and immediately locked up on charges of perjury. They were bailed out by party friends. John Derbyshire, son of Senator Dan Derbyshire, was summoned to appear in police court on October 31st on a charge of bribery. He fell into a trap which had been laid for him in one of the polling sub divisions in the west ward. Conservatives alleged that money was used wholesale, even reaching the electorate in letters through the mails. Hon. G. P. Graham was personally in the heat of the fight all day. His opponent was handicapped by a sprained ankle and was obliged to use crutches.

Seventeen Hotels in Ontario were Open

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 26.—There were seventeen hotels in Ontario, which were wide open today doing business. These hotels were all in South York, where Mr. W. F. McLean was elected by acclamation, and there was no election.

The Results in Canada

It is four more years of Laurier administration. Probably in general the results to the public were not a surprise, but the good guessers, at the total majorities were away wide in many instances.

At midnight there were 125 Liberals elected and 66 Conservatives, and seven constituencies will vote later.

The surprises of the campaign were Ontario, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, and the West. Ontario was expected to give the Conservatives a much larger majority. In the old house they had eight, and it was figured that this would be increased to twenty or even forty, but Mr. Rowden's following from Ontario is increased by only two.

The Conservative gains were; Center York, North Grey, Parry Sound, North Ontario, West Hamilton, South Bruce and East Peterborough.

The Liberal gains were; North Waterloo, Brantford, Dufferin, Prince Edward, South Ontario, East Simcoe and North Perth.

No one had any idea that Alex. McLaren would ever come in as next for North Perth. In fact the two Perth's were to be sold for Mr. Borden, but both went for Sir Wilfrid, and the Simcoes were likewise in the Border columns until the returns began to come in, when Mr. Bennett was found to have lost his seat.

Prince Edward Island reversed the standing of the parties in the last house, he did Manitoba. All the Conservatives in the last parliament were defeated. The island is powerfully hostile to any government, and it was last thought that the government would gain anything there, especially when not hope was held out for this council.

One of those to go down was Le-

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine taste as a valuable nutritive when with the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherry-bark in promoting digestion and building up the system by its strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages, it will cure many severe, chronic coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, even when accompanied by hemorrhages, (it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Jennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"Glycerine is employed as a solvent in preparing a fluid extract of the Black Cherry-bark, in which it is an efficient solvent of the principles extracted from it, and also as a preservative of the active principles contained in the menstruum. If there is theoretical or practical objection to the use of glycerine in pharmaceutical preparations, I am unable to perceive it. On the contrary, I regard it as a most efficient preservative, and believe that it will preserve many kinds of pharmaceutical preparations much better than alcohol or diluted alcohol."

"Golden Medical Discovery" combines with the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, the active principles of which are extracted by the glycerine, and preserved in a perfect state of preservation.

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the ingredients of his medicines.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. R. L. Borden have both two seats. The former was elected in Ottawa and Quebec, and while he has not stated which riding he will represent, it is not likely that he will go back on dear old Quebec. Mr. Borden will likely sit for Halifax.

Sir Wilfrid lost only one of his seats in Western, B.C. This was a big surprise.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sen on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

THE BALKAN SITUATION

The rulers of the East who are concerned in the new Balkan question plainly do not want war. They see that war is far more likely to bring them woe than weal. Bulgaria may be an exception to this rule; for it has little reason to fear that it will lose anything that it possesses, while it might get additional territory if the powers ran their steam roller over Turkey. But even the rulers of Servia are showing sense as they realize that they cannot hope to make head against Austria, and that there is little likelihood of any one coming to their assistance in this task.

Turkey undoubtedly feels that if it summons the European powers to a "feast", it may be compelled to play the humble and unhealthy role of the bird which in western lands bears its name. When the powers talk of compensation for Austria's aggression, it is to be feared that they do not mean compensation for Turkey, which was the victim, but compensation for themselves to make them equal in "the game of grab", with their forehanded colleague. This compensation will probably take the form of a slice of "turkey" all round; so naturally the bird is not too eager for such a thanksgiving dinner.

With the rulers in this mood, it is not likely that the people will be permitted to precipitate war. They can shut off the supply of war material and so disarm the anger or resentment of the mob. The European powers, however, will take a new view of international affairs because of this cynical action on the part of Austria. They will henceforth put little faith in treaties or arrangements. Shot and shell must still be regarded as the basis of a nation's safety. Austria has wiped out all the purely pacific resolutions of the peace conference at a sweep. Possibly this will have a good effect. It will disillusion semi-mental people who had begun to think of war as "a relic of barbarism", and to argue as if the British nation might safely reduce its preparations for so rude an exercise. Our leaders have known this all along; but the action of Austria should educate even the Peace Society.

Steals $195,000 for Daughter

Havana, Oct. 26.—La Lucha says that Miguel de La Torre, who was yesterday accused of theft by Governor Magoon, stole $195,000 from the treasury for his daughter, having placed the money safely where the government cannot recover it. La Lucha adds that De La Torre has an incurable cancer of the stomach, and does not care what the result of his act may be, having but a short time to live. Lately he cast all his capital and preferred to steal from the treasury rather than leave his family in poverty.

At a New Jersey school a promising young lass shot off the subjoined:

"Our yaller hen has broke her leg,
Oh, never more she'll lay an egg;
The brindle cow has gone plumb dry,
And sister Sal has cut a pie;
This earth is full of sin and sorrow—
We're back to-day and she to-morrow."

To Escort the Duke and Bride

Rome, Oct. 26.—The Italian cruiser Fieramosca has been ordered to await the Duke of the Abruzzi at New York, whither the cruiser Etruria also will be dispatched. It is understood that the two warships will escort the Duke and his bride to Italy.

The statement is made also that no members of the Elkins family will attend the official ceremony of the transcription of the marriage deed in Rome and that when Senator Elkins visits Italy later he will be given the title of Chevalier of Annunciade.

The cruiser Fieramosca is at present in New York waters, having arrived there Saturday night from Bridgeport, where she took part in the Columbus Day celebration. It was expected that the cruiser would go to the West Indies.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists

Woman Hypetnized Gives Wealth Away

Warsaw, Oct. 26.—The wife of one of the greatest manufacturers of Lods, Baroness Heinzell, who a few weeks ago disappeared from a sanitorium, has just been discovered in Kieff.

The baroness, whose maiden name was the Countess Kolnna-Waleska, and who belongs to one of the oldest families of Poland, is still young, and very beautiful. She married Baron Heinzell in 1896. Three years ago the people received the visit of a childhood's friend of the baroness, a certain Filomena Smolenska, who was lame and had to be wheeled in an invalid's chair.

This woman is alleged to have acquired extraordinary powers over the baroness, who allowed herself to be hypnotized. Smolenska then suggested to her friend that wealth is a sin and an obstacle on the road to salvation. The baroness, it is asserted gave her all the money she could get, besides her rings, earrings and even the family jewels. The baroness, brooding over the thought of her "dangers" wealth, began to fall into a decline. The baron travelled with his wife abroad and took her to a sanitorium in Rome. He entreated her to get rid of Smolenska's influence, but the baroness, it is said, kept on sending thousands and thousands of pounds to her friend. She even got into debt, and went so far as to borrow money from her servants.

When the director of the sanatorium attempted to interfere, the baroness left Rome and went to Russia. For a long time her whereabouts remained unknown, but finally the police discovered her in Kieff. She was staying there at the Hotel de l'Europe. In the cheapest of all the rooms, and lived a most ascetic life. Baron Heinzell sent some one to her, and the baroness agreed to go to Berlin to a sanatorium.

The woman Smolenska has been arrested.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Healing or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

Maiden Arrived in Lindsay

Mr. Richard Martin, of the Peterborough Waterworks, arrived in town this morning with the cutting machine, which the Lindsay water commissioners have borrowed for the purpose of cutting the mains in order to make necessary connections therewith.

The cutting operations commenced this afternoon and the machine used is an ingenious device, which does the cutting in a splendid manner. The machine, it is said, cost in the neighborhood of $ 700.—Lindsay Post.

Leonardo's "Last Supper."

At the request of many artists A. L. Wolynski, the Russian art critic, has been made an honorary citizen of Milan in recognition of his work on Leonardo da Vinci. The letter in which the "unusual honor" is mentioned in Figaro speaks also of the process by which Professor Luigi Cavenaghi hopes to arrest the disintegration of Leonardo's "Last Supper." "The whole surface of the great fresco in Santa Maria della Gratia," says the writer, "is a series of flakes which represent the painting, and every flake that falls is so much of the masterpiece. Cavenaghi is using a transparent glue with which he hopes to fasten all the loose pieces to their original places, and when that laborious task is completed the cleaning of the picture may take place. Even when restored the fresco will be only a reminiscence of the artist and will not show whether he painted the central figure with or without a beard."

Richest Family in Europe.

It is not generally known that the imperial family of Russia is the richest royal family in Europe and derives its vast wealth from three sources—the state treasury, the imperial domains (formerly church lands) and the so called "cabinet properties." A writer in Harper's Weekly gives some interesting facts. The state treasury pays out $7,000,000 per annum for the needs of the imperial house, principally for the maintenance of the palaces and the officials and servants attached to them. The reigning empress, for example, has an allowance of $100,000 per year and the dowager empress the same. Every child born to the czar receives from birth to the age of twenty-one nearly $20,000 a year, while the heir to the throne receives annually, in addition to the maintenance of palaces, $50,000. Daughters receive a dowry of $2,000,000 rubles when they marry.

Prof. McLean's Career.

Simon James McLean, whom the Dominion Government has appointed a railway commissioner, is still a young man, but has had a very brilliant and creditable career.

He is about 38 years old, and was born near Ottawa, and received his early education in the Ottawa schools and Collegiate. He graduated from Toronto University in 1894 in political science, and took his LL.B. in 1895. He then went to Columbia University and received his M.A., and from there went to Chicago University where he took the degree of Ph.D.

He was appointed an associate professor in the University of Arkansas, and from there went to Leland Stanford University, of which he was assistant head of a department for a time. Lastly he came back to Toronto University, and for three years has been associate professor of political science there. Prof. McLean was well liked by the students, and was especially well up in his work. For such a young man he has done a great amount of research work, and has written much for various journals on railway and transportation problems as well as on banking and finance.

Rejects Undesirables.

Thomas Robinson, the recently appointed immigration officer at Windsor, has started in to conduct an aggressive campaign against the cheap class labor which for some time has been flooding the western part of Ontario. He turned back a batch of 25 Poles who crossed over recently with dinner baskets, hoping to get work at the Windsor end of the tunnel. No attempt is being made to conduct military tactics as against the United States' head tax, which continues to be imposed upon Canadians going into the United States for the first time, but a strong effort will be made to keep out the objectionable class of immigrants which for some time past has been invading the country in ever-increasing numbers at border points.

Made Five Bears.

Roy Coon, of Apsley, came across five bears in a field of marsh hay near his home a few days ago, and, having taken his gun with him, shot two of them. The other three disappeared in the woods near at hand, one of them carrying in his hide a shot that had failed to reach his vitals. Coon and with him only a few cartridges, as he did not expect to meet any game. The bears he killed were the mother and a well-grown cub.

An Married Folks.

Mrs. Henry Polk, for seventy-six years a resident of New Boyne, Leeds county, died a few days ago. A peculiar circumstance in the fact that her daughters are all united in marriage to men of the same name, and yet are not related. They are: Mrs. W. J. Polk, Lombardy; Mrs. Samuel Polk, Port Elmsly, and Mrs. J. H. Polk, Burgess. The deceased was a sister of Mr. R. L. Jones, ex-M.P.P., South Addington.

TRENT CANAL
Lindsay Section.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock on Tuesday, 17th November, 1908, for the works connected with the construction of the Lindsay Sections of the Canal.

Plans, specifications, and the form of the contract to be entered into, can be seen on and after the 19th October, 1908, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places forms of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages Schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labor, which Schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $14,000.00 must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

ma?" ventured the section boss.

Dallas nodded.

"No, no," he said, "she favors me, an' they's no need t' fret. They's nothin' th' matter with her—jus' off her oats a leetle, that's all."

The developments of the next morning swept every thought from Dallas' mind save those concerning the journey. For when it came time to harness the mules she found that Ben had unaccountably gone lame. Whether his mate had kicked him or whether he had sprained a leg while exercising the previous afternoon she did not know. But it was plain that, so far as he went, the miles between quarter section and land office were impossible. At once Dallas suggested that Betty be driven single to a small pung that had been built for water hauling when the well froze up. Accordingly the mule was put before the sleigh. Failure resulted. Though both Dallas and her father alternately coaxed and scolded, Betty, with characteristic stubbornness, refused to budge a rod from the lean-to without Ben.

Dallas was in despair. "She won't go; she won't go," she said. "We've got to think of some other way."

"Yestiddy," observed the section boss as he unfastened the tugs, "y' said it wouldn' matter of Ah didn' go now." He was somewhat complacent over the outcome of the hitch-up.

"I don't feel that way now," asserted Dallas.

"That ol' man up at th' leetle hen' has hosses." he volunteered when they were again within the shack.

"He took 'em to Clark's two months ago and walked back."

"Waal, how 'bout th' Norwegian over by th' mountain?"

"He keeps oxen. If a blizzard came up they'd never lead you out of it." Then she was moved to make a suggestion which she felt certain, however, would only be denounced. "There are hundreds of horses and mules at Brannon. I could ask there for a team."

Lancaster's ire was roused. "Let's a' Ah want t' hear fr'm you 'bout them blamed Yankees," he said hotly. "An Ah want y' t' remember it."

"But you're wrong, dad."

"Eh?" He turned upon her in amazed disgust.

"You're wrong," she repeated gently. "We oughtn't to treat the soldiers as is they was enemies. Some day we'll be in danger here"—

"Bosh!"

"And then we'll have to take their help."

He began to hobble up and down, working himself into a white heat. "'S long as Ah live on this claim," he said, "Ah'll never go t' Brannon for anythin', an' they'll be no trottin' back an' forth. That ornery trash over thar is th' same, most of it, that fought th' south jus' a few years ago. Ah kain't forget that. An' not one of 'em 'll ever set a foot in this house."

After more hobbling he burst forth again. "Ah tell y', Dallas, Ah won't hev' you gain mootin' them no 'count soldiers"—

She smiled at him. "We don't want to meet any soldiers," she answered. "But there are women at the fort—women like mother. It seems a shame we can't know them."

"I' mother raised y' t' be 's fine a lady as any of 'em over thar!"

"Maybe that's true. If it is, then they'd like us, wouldn't they, and we could have friends? I'm not thinking about myself—just about Maryiya."

"You gain get each other. Mootin' th' women at Brannon means mootin' th' men. An' Ah won't hev it!" His voice rose almost to a shout.

"I'll never speak to you about it again," she said. And her quiet acceptance mollified him.

"M' gal, y' kain't think how Ah feel about them Yanks," he went on tremulously. "An' Ah want y' t' promise me thet whether Ah 'm 'live or dead y' 'll allus keep on yon' own side of th' river."

She glanced up at him quickly. "Do you mean that, daddy?" she asked, using the name he had borne in her babyhood.

"Ah do! Ah do!"

"Then I promise." Her tone was sorrowful.

"Mar'iya?"

The younger girl faced about slowly. "D' you promise?"

"Promise?" she repeated. "Yes—I—I promise."

Dallas knew that the trip to the land office was impossible unless Lounsbury should chance along—which was unlikely, some weeks having passed since his last visit. Undoubtedly were he to come he would help them. But would her father allow her to ask the storekeeper's aid? Probably not.

"I'll tell Charley about it tonight," she said finally. "We just got to find a way."

"What c'n he do?" retorted her father. "Far 's him 's gitting a team 's concerned, we might 's well look for some one t' come right outen th' sky."

Her determination to ask advice of the parish was a natural one. The morning that succeeded the night of the mules' terror she had awakened to find a reassuring explanation for their fear. In the growing light, as the trumpet sounded reveille from the fort, she sprang up and looked out expectantly. On the top of a drift in front of the door was a bundle of sticks! A hard crust had formed during the night, and moccasin tracks leading up to the wood and then pointing away again were cast in it with frozen distinctness.

"That poor Indian!" she had exclaimed in grateful relief.

Not once after his accompanying Indian Colonel Cummings had Squaw Charley forgotten daily to leave firewood at the shack. The evening of his second [illegible] Dallas and Lancaster's two mules in wait for him, secreted under the dismantled schooner, which she had drawn into place beside the door. And as bringing his offering he crossed the snow softly and approached, the terrified mules again announced his coming, and she hailed him.

"Come on, come near," she had called. "I want to see you."

Eager to prove his good intent he had hastened forward, and she, just as eager to show her thankfulness, had led him into the house. There, with the distrustful eye of the section boss upon him and with Maryiya watching in trepidation from a distance, he had eaten and drunk at Dallas' bidding.

At the very moment when Dallas decided to confide in him Squaw Charley was not unmindful of her. Where the river bluffs back of Brannon shoved their dark shoulders through the snow, the wind having swept their tops clean of the last downfall, he was working away like a muskrat. To and fro he went, searching diligently for buffalo chips. A sack followed him on a rope tied to a leather belt, so that he could beat his hands against his breast as he covered every square rod of dead, curly grass on the uplands. The bag crammed to the top, he took off his blanket and, despite the cold, began to fill it also. For he knew, and fully as well as they who watched the [illegible] motor hanging just outside the entrance at headquarters, that the night would require much fuel.

As he hunted along the bare ridge something more than the [illegible] that whipped the skirt about his lean shanks urged him to finish his gathering and go riverward. In the little sagg cabin out on the prairie a cheery welcome awaited him. Before the glowing coals in the stone fireplace he could warm his shaking legs. There was good food for his empty stomach. But, better than all else, there a kindly face always smiled a greeting.

A STRANGE DISCOVERY.

Scientists Find That a Beam of Light Produces Sound.

One of the most wonderful discoveries in science that have been made within the last year or two is the fact that a beam of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is thrown through a lens on a glass vessel that contains lampblack, colored silk or worsted or other substance. A disk having slits or openings cut in it is made to revolve swiftly in this beam of light so as to cut it up, thus making alternate flashes of light and shadow. On putting the ear to the glass vessel strange sounds are heard so long as the flashing beam is falling on the vessel.

Recently a more wonderful discovery has been made. A beam of sunlight is made to pass through the prism so to produce what is called the solar spectrum, or rainbow. The disk is turned, and the colored light of the rainbow is made to break through it. Now place the ear to the vessel containing the silk, wool or other material. As the colored lights of the spectrum fall upon it sounds will be given by different parts of the spectrum, and there will be silence in other parts.

For instance, if the vessel contains red worsted and the green light flashes upon it loud sounds will be given. Only feeble sounds will be heard when the red and blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel, and other colors make no sound at all. Green silk gives sound best in red light. Every kind of material gives more or less sound in different colors and utters no sound in others.

The discovery is a strange one, and it is thought more wonderful things will come from it.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Abdul Hamid's John.

Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey, thoroughly distrusts his ministers. He once said to Professor Vambery: "But what is there for me to do? If I change them I shall get others who are probably more dishonest." One evening his grand vizier gave a dinner party, at which with the sultan's sanction several court officers were present. One of these the next day gave Abdul Hamid a verbal report of the exhibition of magic which a dervish gave [illegible] after the dinner. "It a most wonderful way," he said, "this practiser of black art swallowed silver spoons in rapid succession."

"Do you consider that wonderful?" interrupted the sultan. "The feat of swallowing silver spoons is as nothing to the feat which Hassan Pasha, the minister of the navy, used to perform. He swallowed entire knuckle apparently without any trouble."

Hassan Pasha was notorious for the barefaced audacity with which he diverted moneys granted for new ships to his own use.

The MacGillycuddy.

It was a saying of that interesting and balky member of parliament, The O'Gorman Mahon, that there were only three individuals entitled to the prefix "the." They were himself, the pope and the—well, the gentleman who is rarely mentioned in polite society. He forgot, however. The MacGillycuddy of the Reeks, whose fifty-sixth birthday occurred recently. He is, if ever there was one, an Irish chieftain and descendant of Irish kings. He owns no longer that fine chain of Kerry mountains known as the Reeks, although he retains the title and also a residence of the same name. The surname MacGillycuddy dates from ancient Roman Catholic times and means the son of the servant (or devotee) of St. Cuthbert, whose motto "Cuddy" is an affectionate diminutive. The wives of The MacGillycuddys, as of other feudal Irish chiefs, are always distinguished by the title of "madam."—St. James' Gazette.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

Warning to Purchasers

Every assignment of the right of a South African Volunteer entitled to a land grant must be by way of appointment of a substitute and must be in the form provided by the Act.

Special attention is called to Subsection 3 of Section 5 of the Volunteer Bounty Act, 1908, which provides that no assignment of the right of a volunteer by the appointment of a substitute shall be accepted or recognized by the Department of the Interior which is not executed and dated after the date of the warrant for the land grant issued by the Minister of Militia and Defence in favor of the Volunteer.

J. W. GREENWAY,
Commissioner of Dominion Lands, Ottawa.

28th September, 1908.

Synopsis of Canadian North west HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Saving Work.

In the home of one woman where single beds are in general use the spreads are made of honeycomb material bought by the yard and hemmed. They are easy to wash and require no ironing. In the same home cream white madras is used for bedroom window draperies because of its good wearing qualities. It comes out of the wash with flying colors. She trims them with ball fringe and does not have them wrung very dry and wrung by hand, of course, as the wringer would flatten the little balls. She uses small rugs all through her house save the dining room, because they can be taken outdoors every week by the one maid of the establishment. Another woman saves work by having her luncheon brought to her sitting room on a tray, and another, belonging to a family that seems doomed to perpetual mourning attire, supplies her maid with very light cotton dresses in white and black because there is already too much gloom in the house.

A Photography Hint.

With a fixed focus camera the endeavor should be to get the principal objects in a good light and at such a distance from the camera that they will be nicely rendered without the necessity of stopping down the lens. The distance will take care of itself, and the foreground, too, unless there be any very prominent feature in it, when the picture is likely to suffer by unsightly diffusion or a want of sharpness.

With ordinary good fortune as regards weather and subjects, the amateur photographer who proceeds with intelligence can bring back a collection of excellent pictures, even though she has never used a camera before, and the pleasure to be derived by looking from time to time to these reminiscences of some weeks at a delightful country or seaside resort will be such that she will not readily go away in the future without an instrument which so readily records the chief incidents of a holiday.

Salt in Cooking.

If one portion of a vegetable is cooked in pure water, the other half in salted water, a decided difference is perceptible in the tenderness of the two. Those boiled in pure water are vastly inferior and in many cases will be almost tasteless. Salt brings out the delicate flavor of cauliflower, cabbage, potatoes, peas, beans and practically all vegetables. Onions cooked in water without salt can be rendered almost tasteless. As salt increases the [illegible] of boiling renders the cooking advantage is at once apparent. Salt in cold water is used to drive insects from vegetables growing above ground.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

What Every Woman Rqeireus for Headache Lanqour

Mrs. Mary Flanigan Gives Advice that is Sound, Useful and True.

Has your strength given out? Do you feel languid and tired this spring? Are you pale, nervous, finding it hard to do your housework? Thousands feel just the same—feel the enervating influence of spring, whether that brings out latent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flanigan of Bear Junction — here is her experience. "I will never again suffer the tortures of deadening spring illness — never more I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I tried through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, listless—Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite—I relished my meals and grew strong, Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic, blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Women who are continually pale, tired and sick headaches, faint and sleepy spells, aching muscles, bearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that needs Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c at all dealers.

Little Boy Lost Two Fingers

Little Stanley Killingback, the six-year-old son of Mr. Jos. Killingback, Romaine street, met with a distressing accident on Saturday afternoon at the new church of the Sacred Heart in which he lost the first two fingers of his left hand. It is learned that, with other boys, he was playing near a small derrick and got his two fingers caught in the cog wheels with the result that they were severed. The little fellow informed his parents that some other boys told him to put his fingers between the wheels. He did not cry as he went home and scarcely realized what had happened. He was taken to Nicholls Hospital, where his wounds were dressed.

Little Girl Set Fire to Clothing with Matches

Little Helen Collins, the young daughter of Mr. William Collins, of Ashburnham, had a narrow escape from being seriously burned a few days ago. The little girl was playing with matches in a bedroom when the blaze ignited some clothing, doing damage to garments and bedding, it is said, of over one hundred dollars. Fortunately Mrs. Collins noticed the conflagration when she did, or it is not unlikely that the entire premises would have been swept away. Great difficulty was experienced in extinguishing the blaze.

Personal

Mr. Jas. O'Neil spent Sunday in Hastings.

Mr. Charles Scedler of Millbrook, was in the city yesterday.

Mr. Will Brownlee is visiting friends in Owen Sound.

Mrs. R. Foster, 259 Charlotte St. has returned home from a visit to Toronto.

Mr. G. F. Warde, who is at present at Gore's Landing, was in the city yesterday.

Miss Theresa Farrell of Stirling is visiting her sister Mrs. N. Bibby, Romaine street.

Miss Nellie Waters, of Campbellford, is the guest of Miss Fleming, 677 Water street.

Mr. W. J. Tupper, who has been visiting friends in the city, has returned to St. Louis.

Mr. Frank Goslin, Crescent street left Sunday for a week's holiday down the river.

Mr. R. M. Hamilton, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Fenelon Falls spent Sunday at Auburn.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-em's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Mrs. Lefroy and Miss Gertrude Woods and the Misses Kalla of Millbrook, were in the city last week.

Major G. H. Gyes, commanding officer of the 3rd Dragoons, was in Peterborough on Saturday, looking after regimental business matters.

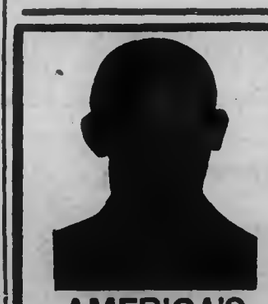
Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Kennedy leave this morning on a two weeks' trip through Ohio, Virginia, and possibly will go as far as Tennessee.

Mr. Frank O'Brien, Lake street, left last evening for St. Louis, where he has obtained a good position and will make his home in future.

Mrs. Herbert Bronson Cowan, 67 Bethune street, will receive for the first time, since coming to Peterborough to reside, on Tuesday, October 27th, and afterwards on the fourth Tuesday of the month only.

Lumberman was Lost in the Woods

It is reported that Nathan Luffman, a lumberman from Deseronto, who left Peterborough a week ago in company with H. Beyette, also of Deseronto, to work for the Peterborough Lumber Co. at their camp, 22 miles from here, had an exciting experience. On Tuesday morning he managed to wander from the bunk house and was lost in the woods until Wednesday morning. A searching party composed of fifteen. L. Coons, H. Beyette and others, set out in search of him. When found, it was discovered that he was without hat and shoes, and his feet were badly cut and bruised, but he soon revived.



AMERICA'S EX-CHAMPION WRESTLER

SAYS:

"After my great wrestling match with J. Miller, of Shirleybridge, at the Crystal Palace, England, for the International Championship, I was covered with cuts and bruises. I applied my favorite balm, Zam-Buk, and in a marvellously short time the abrasions and cuts were healed and I was fit and well again. At another time I had a piece of flesh almost torn completely off my arm above the elbow. I anticipated being unable to do anything with the arm for a long time. To my delight, however, Zam-Buk closed up the wound in two days. In three days it was covered with new skin, and a few days after, there was no trace of the injury. I recommend Zam-Buk for cuts, bruises or skin injuries of any kind.

Yours truly,
HUGH LAMON.

The above testimony given by Mr. Lamon when visiting Toronto shows the great value of Zam-Buk for injuries received in out-door sport.

Football, hockey and lacrosse players could always keep Zam-Buk handy. It prevents any foul poisons getting the wrong way, it eases the pain and soreness, and heals. It also acts as a good liniment for aching joints and muscles, etc. Used and recommended by thousands of the foremost athletes, the Trade's second greatest specialist, etc.

West End Residents Want More Police Protection

Early last evening the residents, and especially the ladies on Gilmour street, received quite a nervous shock when it was reported that a woman had been chased by a man. It appears that a young lady returning home was followed by a man who continued to gaze on her until she turned into the house where she was staying. Then the fellow hid up some bushes to wait until she should come out. Neighbors were notified, and a gentleman investigated. He found the fellow was under the influence of liquor and he led him away. In the meantime the police had been notified, and one went out, but the fellow was gone before the cop arrived.

There are evidently several tough characters in the city, who are beginning to get in their work, and the residents of the west end are complaining of a lack of police protection. The west end is particularly favorable for the operations of night hawks, and it is claimed that a policeman should be placed out there.

This week there have been a couple of hold-ups and Police Magistrate Edmison's front door was broken in on Monday night. What the next move will be is hard to say.

Skiddoo Night at the Roller Rink

Skiddoo night was a great success at the roller rink last night, when a big crowd of both skaters and spectators were present. Everything was in, including the admission, and the people enjoyed the thing immensely. The prize winners were; — Harvey Staunton, Miss Riley, Miss Maybardt, Miss Walsh, Mr. Carson, Mr. Orwel Hooper, Mr. Davis.

The next attraction will be the band concert on Friday night, and Hallowe'en sports on Saturday night. Monday night will be carnation night with prizes for graceful skating in couples.

Passed Resolution of Condolence

Mrs E. S. Chattes of this city, has received a copy of a resolution of condolence passed by Lady Erin Lodge, No. 52, L.T.B., in regard to the death of her daughter which took place recently;—

86 Riverdale avenue.
October, 1st, 1908.

Mrs. E. S. Chattes;

Dear Sister,—We, the officers and members of Lady Erin Lodge, No. 52, L.T.B., desire to extend to you, our sincere sympathy in the death of your loving daughter, which God has been pleased to call away to join the angelic host in the Kingdom of Heaven. Thank God for the victory, the battle of life is done on earth, but in your heart there is an aching for the loving voice you will not hear again. At such times words fail to express our true feeling but we assure you that every member of our lodge feels for you in your sorrow. May God give you grace sufficient to overcome your sorrow and give you strength to say, Thy Will be Done.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,
MRS. J. BIRES, W.M.
MRS. J CROWE, F.S.

Rooters Wanted for Saturday's Big O. R. F. U. Game

The Peterborough Senior O.R.F.U. team is putting in a lot of hard work on the field this week in preparation for Saturday's big game with T.A.A.C. team. This is the second game of the series, and as Toronto won the first game the locals will have to win the second to have any show for the highest honors. Upon the result of Saturday afternoon depends not only their chances to win the senior championship but also the Dominion honors. It is reported that the boys will be greatly strengthened but so will the visitors, who intend if possible to capture the O.R.F.U. without any further arguments.

It is expected they will bring a number of supporters with them, and it is up to the local fans to get out on Saturday and cheer for Peterborough's reputation as a rugby town.

Paid Money to the Wrong Man

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 27.—John Dyment began suit for $5000 against the executors of the estate of the late N. Dyment. The late Mr. Dyment in his will left $5000 "to my nephew John Dyment, the younger, and trainer." The money was paid to a grand nephew, who is also known as John Dyment the younger, and he is also a trainer. The plaintiff claims the money was paid to the wrong man.

Peterborough Boy's Great Victory Monday

The Peterborough friends of Mr A. Haggart of Winnipeg, who won so brilliant a victory for the Conservative party, will send him hearty congratulations. Mr. Haggart has relations here and years ago was a resident of the city.

Smyth Elected in East Algoma

(Special to The Times)

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 27.—Mr. W R Smyth, the Conservative candidate has just telephoned from Rydal Bank that he is elected by a majority of 41.

Demand Recount in Sifton's Riding

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 27.—Late returns from Selkirk give Bradbury the Conservative elected. This gives the Conservatives eight sure seats. Sifton's majority is now only 16, but the Tories claim a number of protested ballots, and on a recount say they will elect Daly.

Mr. A. Zimmerman for the Senate

(Special to The Times.)

Hamilton, Oct. 27.—Some of the local Liberals have not yet recovered from the soreness of defeat, and are talking of trying to unseat Mayor Stewart. It is not at all likely however that any such steps will be taken. The charges are alleged bribery and corruption. What is far more probable is that Mr. A. Zimmerman, ex-M.P., will be appointed to the senate or to the postmastership.

Giovanni Corraditti, charged with impersonation, and Louis Perani, an interpreter, charged with aiding and abetting him, appeared in the police court today, and were remanded until Monday next. They were released on bail of $100, which was furnished by W. L. Ross.

Mrs R. Foster, 250 Charlotte St. has returned home from a visit to Toronto.

Summary from the West

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 27.—The Liberals claim a chance of electing Burrows in Dauphin, when the outlying polls come in.

The present summary in Manitoba is, Conservatives 6, and Liberals 2, with a recount in Brandon.

Later figures do not supply any changes in Saskatchewan. Lake holds the only Conservative seat. The other 6 are Liberals.

In Alberta, the Conservatives hope to get Red Deer, but the outlying polls are swelling the Liberal majority. Strathcona is Liberal. The Liberals have 6 and the Conservatives 3 seats.

In British Columbia there is no change. Conservatives 3 and Liberals 1 sat.

Lord Northcliffe's Papers Pay Heavy Libel Damages

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 27.—The Edward Cooke & Co., boat makers, get a general judgement today for $115,000 against certain of Lord Northcliffe's papers, which charged that company with an attempt to form a trust.

Wm. E. Lever, a Liberal member of parliament, recently got judgment for $250,000 and costs against the same publishing houses on a similar charge.

The case of Joseph Watson and Sons, of Leeds, was settled out of court by the payment of a sum which it is said exceeds $250,000. Other firms claimed by the papers to be parties to the same combine have suits pending.

Woman Bound, Gagged, and Robbed by Old Friend

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 27.—Accusing a man whom she frequently met socially, of having bound, gagged, beaten and robbed her of $800 worth of jewelery, and $50 in cash, Mrs. Anna C. Plough, widow of a former president of the St. Paul and Duluth Railway Co., caused the arrest today of Elmer M. Swallow, a public weigher. Mrs. Plough said the robbery occurred in her home in Brooklyn last Friday night, and only a few hours after she had been playing cards with him. Her reason for not having made a complaint sooner was that she was not able to force herself to believe that Swallow could be guilty of such a crime as she is now charging him with.

Immigration for 1907 was 117,525

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 27.—The Board of Trade immigration returns for 1907 were issued today. They show the British and Irish immigration to Canada last year were 117,525, and of these 290 were rejected for the following causes;—Paupers 153, diseased 24, insane 89, convicts 4, returned without cause 9, immoral 10, cause not stated 1.

Sentenced to Three Months for Bigamy

(Special to The Times.)

Belleville, Oct. 27.—In the county court today before Judge Deroche, James Holly and Mrs. Pearl Lott, were tried on a charge of bigamy. Holly was also charged with perjury in securing the marriage license. He got three months in jail and Mrs. Lott was given three months and five days.

Charles Marcil as Speaker in the House

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 27.—A local authority on politics, says that parliament will likely meet on January 6th. The first day's sitting will be occupied by selecting a speaker and the formal opening will be on the following afternoon. It is expected Charles Marcil, member for Bonaventure, will be the unanimous choice. In that case the deputy speaker will be an English speaking member. The only name mentioned so far is Mr. G. H. McIntyre, M.P., for South Perth.

Smallpox in Toronto and the Province

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 27.—In issuing his monthly statement the Provincial Medical Health Officer calls attention to smallpox in the city and province. The authorities state that there are unbounded sources of the disease in the city and elsewhere from which other patients are being released. Warning is given that constant vigilance must be made in all such cases.

In September last from 722 divisions show that typhoid was more prevalent than in the corresponding month last year. The increase was 150 cases with 20 deaths. Diphtheria increased 74 cases and 9 deaths. Scarlet fever shows variation in places. There were 40 cases of smallpox as compared with 27 last year. Tuberculosis caused 143 deaths. The deaths from all diseases was 2272, representing a population of 2,011,000 or 13.5 per thousand.

The First Lady Mayor in England

London, Oct. 26.—England's first lady mayor since the office was opened to women by the act passed last year will possibly be Miss Dove, who was the first girl student at Girton College, Cambridge. Miss Dove, in default of a male candidate, was nominated for election at High-Wycombe, Buckinghamshire, by a majority of the town council at the meeting held this week, but so much opposition has since developed that efforts are being made to induce some male member of the council to accept the nomination, in which case Miss Dove would lose most of her present supporters.

(Among the chief objections raised against Miss Dove's installation is the fact that she cannot act as the chief magistrate of the town, for when the Government accepted the provision that women could become mayors it was expressly laid down that they should not sit on the bench.

Miss Dove said that she supposed she would wear the furred gown and gold chain of the mayoral office, if she were elected, but it is by no means certain that she will have the opportunity.

Public Speaking by British Women

London, Eng., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Winston Churchill has quickly given proof that she is prepared to discharge the public duties that fall to the lot of the wife of a Cabinet minister by opening a bazaar in aid of the work of the Browning Settlement, with a neat little speech charmingly delivered. This with her previous appearance on the platform at Dundee and Manchester ranks her among the women orators of the Liberal party.

Mrs. Lloyd-George is also taking a position in the public eye. She delighted an audience, composed largely of members of the Welsh colony in London, gathered to witness the laying of the foundation stone of a new chapel by delivering a speech in Welsh.

"No Welsh people are happy unless they have a Welsh chapel near them," she observed.

Lady Crewe, Mrs. Harcourt, Mrs. Sydney Buxton, and Mrs. Walter Runciman are other ministers' wives who have spoken on the public platform.

Mrs. Asquith, the premier's wife, is the central figure in a circle of intellectual and brilliant minds. Mrs. Birrell is greatly interested in the organization of the Women's Liberal Association. Lady Carrington takes a prominent part both in politics and society, and Lady Marjorie Sinclair, who was trained to politics by her mother, the Countess of Aberdeen, made her first public speech in her schoolgirl days.

Shot Four Lynx on One Day

Mr. Henry Goslin, of Head Lake, had an exciting time the other day while strolling in the woods adjoining his farm. Mr. Goslin was walking leisurely through the woods when of a sudden he came upon a nest of five large lynx. With great promptitude he put his gun to his shoulder and fired.

At the first shot he killed two and with the next two shots he killed two more. The others by this time had made off and succeeded in getting away.

Mr. Goslin is very much pleased over his capture, and intends having their skins preserved.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere, a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the second stage, to head off all colds. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

Secretary Saw It

Among the begging letters recently received at the office of a benevolent society was one running thus:

"This unfortunate young man is the only son of a widow, who died shiftless, and his earnings maintain his aged father and infant brothers, whose sole support he is."

The secretary of the society wrote on the margin of the epistle the following note:

"The circumstances of the case are evidently exaggerated."

President's Birthday

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, D.C., Oct. 27.—President Roosevelt observed his 50th birthday anniversary today very simply. He attended all day to his executive duties, and except for the reception of a delegation from the Hungary club of New York, in the east room of the White House, and the receipt of congratulatory messages and floral tributes and gifts from the members of his family, the day to him was the same as any other to him. In the afternoon the president donned his riding uniform, and went for a horse back ride in the park.

At night there was a jolly family dinner at which there were no guests present. King Edward's message of congratulation was one of the first to arrive. He said:—"I request that you will accept my cordial congratulations on the occasion of your birthday, together with my best wishes for your welfare and prosperity."

Taking Castaways off Wrecked Ship

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 28.—Copies of a special issue of the Western Pacific Herald, of Suva, Fiji Islands, containing an account of the experiences of the survivors of the wrecked steamer Apon on Christmas Island, written by Chaplain Patrick, were received by the S. S. Aorangi. Few additional details were given than those sent by cable.

The work of taking off the castaways was extremely difficult owing to the heavy surf, and it required considerable ingenuity to take off Mrs. Patrick and a new-born child, which was born the morning prior to the arrival of the steamer Manuka. A bed with mother and child was fastened on a boat and was swung up with both on it by the davits.

It was expected trouble would be had with the Chinese crew, who were put into a camp by themselves some distance from the other camp. The ladies' boots and shoes were worn out, and rubber boots found in the cargo were cut down for them.

The U. S. S. Solace carried Mr. and Mrs. Patrick and child and Mrs. Liddle to Pago Pago from Suva, where they were landed by the Manuka.

Canadian was Dismissed from Canal Staff

Ottawa, October 26.—Because he was an alien viewed from the standpoint of the United States Government, Mr. W. A. Graham, well known in Ottawa, Collegiate Institute, was obliged to resign a lucrative position on the Panama Canal, and is again in the capital, having been re-appointed to the Collegiate staff. While Canadians were not singled out for dismissal, it is believed that the enforcement of the alien law in Canada against engineers and others employed on the Grand Trunk Pacific surveys inspired the movement against outsiders on the great canal project.

In an interview Mr. Graham expressed the opinion that the Panama Canal would be completed within the next ten years. The Americans had set July, 1915, as the date of the opening of the canal, but he considered that the operations would not be concluded as early as that. There were 40,000 men on the pay roll of the canal, 25,000 of whom were negroes.

Soow Ran on a Rock Near Loveslek

After running on a rock in Lovesick Lake last week, a scow, loaded with 100 cords of hardwood for the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, smashed a big hole in the bottom and sank. However, instead of disappearing altogether the water did not quite reach to the deck of the scow after it had settled down. The water through the Kawartha chain is said to be lower than it has been in years, and in Lovesick it is similar to the other lakes. A smaller scow was procured and the 100 cords were taken off in three trips. The steamer Beaver was doing the towing work and finally smashed its wheel and twisted the rudder on a rock and the work had to be stopped for the present.

The Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company have brought down nearly 2,200 cords of the best maple from Deer Bay and Buckhorn Lake. Only 100 cords remain to be brought down, and unless it rains copiously and raises the level of the waters these remaining cords will not be towed down until the spring. However, although navigation is practically tied up in the lakes for the present it is felt that before the ice comes the water will be back again.

Evaporator Works at Whitby were Destroyed

(Special to The Times.)

Whitby, Oct. 27.—Today at noon the evaporator works of the Whitby Evaporator and Fruit Co. was partially destroyed by fire. The blaze which was of an unknown origon first appeared in the upper story. The building was of frame and the roof and the walls down to the second story were destroyed. All below that was saved. About 250 cases of apples were destroyed, also several small machines. The loss is about $1500 and there is no insurance.

Hoagland will be at the Roller Rink

W. A. Hoagland of Auburn, N.Y., the man with the great walking reputation will be at the roller rink next week, and will undertake to walk two miles while the skaters cover four miles. It will be a relay race and six or eight boys will do a half mile each. This should be a drawing card. Hoagland will walk at the Brock street rink against Harrison on Thanksgiving Day.

Cleaning Up

An old plasterer is called upon to give evidence for the plaintiff. Council for the defendant tries to bully him. "Have you ever been in prison?" "Yes, twice." "Ah! how long the first time?" "One whole afternoon." "What! An the second time?" "Only one hour." "And pray what offence had you committed to deserve so small a punishment?" "I was sent to prison to whitewash a cell to accommodate a lawyer who had cheated one of his clients."

LOST HIS NERVE

A Strong Man Almost Died. Grew Thin, Weak and Nervous.

A REMARKABLE RECOVERY.

"Until three years ago I was the picture of health—then I became what people call Neurasthenic. I grew sleepless, worried, lacked will power, felt great physical fatigue, experienced fears and felt always in danger of something unknown. All the time I grew thinner and weaker, felt so nervous that I felt the end must be near. No medicine helped, each one seemed a new disappointment. Then my doctor suggested "Ferrozone"—it was a fortunate choice because I improved at once. I gained weight, enjoyed my meals, got a better color, forgot my nervous fears. The way Ferrozone built me up is surprising—it made a new man of me and now I look good for twenty years to come."

Ferrozone is a nourishing tonic that strengthens, fattens, builds up, restores weak sickly people to health. If you feel poorly let Ferrozone help you get well. 50c. per box, or 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Leper Found in Schools at Camden

McDonald, United States army surgeon, stationed at Fort Mott, N. J., has notified the War Department that a pronounced case of leprosy of extraordinary interest exists in the Camden County, New Jersey, almshouse at Blackwood, and Dr. J. E. Hurff, the resident physician of the institution, was informed to-day that an expert would be detailed immediately from the war museum to make an exhaustive examination.

The disease was discovered by accident, after the sufferer had been treated in three hospitals without the true nature of his malady being discovered, and after he had mingled with hundreds of pupils in the public schools he attended in the City of Camden.

The patient is Charles Clark, a West Indian negro, 16 years old. The first leprous symptoms appeared less than two years ago, but its advance has been so swift that it has reached the stage where the spinal cord gives evidence of degeneration. The entire muscular system is contracting, the left leg is without sensation from the knee to the ankle, the fingers of both hands are contorted into the shape of a bird's claws, the toes of one foot are approaching the stage of self-amputation, the nasal bones are so soft that they can be bent with the fingers, and large patches have appeared on the upper part of the body. The boy's condition is like that of a leper who has suffered for twenty-five or thirty years.

The New York State Will Decide Election

Republicans and Democrats Both Massing Forces There

New York, Oct. 28.—With election day little more than a week away, the leader of all the political parties today started out on the final effort of what is expected to be a sensational finish of the national political campaign. New York is the real battle ground in the opinion of the campaign managers and here to-day were gathered practically all the heavy ammunition of all the parties. Wm. H. Taft and W. J. Bryan, who came in from stumping tours yesterday, spent the night in this city. They were astir early to-day to begin a week of work which will tax their endurance to the utmost. Mr. Bryan's schedule to-day provides for several speeches in half a dozen towns and a long formal address at the big mass meeting in Madison Square Gardens this evening. Mr. Taft had a mid-day engagement in New Haven, but he will return to New York this afternoon and deliver a number of addresses before midnight. He will devote the entire week to New York state. In addition to Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan, hundreds of speakers will appeal to voters of all classes throughout the state to-day and for the remainder of the week. They will include party candidates for governor, members of President Roosevelt's cabinet, U.S. Senators, members of Congress and just plain political spellbinders. Vice-Presidential candidate Sherman also is scheduled for a number of speeches in New York state during the week. Both parties are massing forces here, and the result in this state will be shown in Ohio and Indiana.

Washington, Oct. 28.—As a result of yesterday's Cabinet meeting, every member of the Presidents official family will go out some time next week to make political speeches in the States where there is a doubt as to the outcome of the campaign in favor of Mr. Taft. The President earnestly considered the entire situation with only six members of his Cabinet, and at the end of the meeting it was learned that each of these officials next week will make several campaign speeches.

The campaign engagements in Virginia of Senator Depew, who was scheduled to speak at Harrisonburg, Lynchburg and Norfolk, beginning October 26, have been called, and the Senator will take the stump in more doubtful States than Virginia.

Secretary Root, who expected that he would speak only in New York city next Saturday night, has been requested to go into Ohio and assist in the campaign there. He will speak in Cincinnati next Wednesday night, and at Toledo on Thursday night. His engagement to preside at a meeting in Carnegie Hall, New York City, on Friday night, has been cancelled, but he will speak at the Riding Academy meeting in that city on Saturday night, October 31.

Secretary Cortelyou will speak in New York City next Thursday night. He does not know in what hall the meeting will take place.

Vessel was Helpless at Sea for Thirteen Hours

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 27.—The 300 passengers, who arrived today on the steamer Furnessia from Glasgow, spent thirteen anxious hours at sea last Wednesday while the vessel floundered helplessly before a 90-mile per hour gale. The accident was due to a screw head slipping out of place on the engine, which necessitated the abrupt slowing of the machinery. The passengers, gathered about their dinner tables, were startled when the engines suddenly stopped. Many rushed on deck, thinking the ship had struck a rock. Others, who had been in the smoking room, were thrown to the floor by the sudden stoppage. Women and children were hurried to their staterooms, and the crew was ordered to their stations. Then the engineers began to work on the machinery. Meanwhile the ship was tossed about like a cork. Waves broke over the bridge and poured down the companionways. Many of the passengers were seasick. Others were thrown from their berths. Dishes and furniture were smashed. Finally the engineers succeeded in repairing the damage, and the ship proceeded on her way.

Three Hundred Millions In New York Buildings

Vast Sums Being Spent in the Great Metropolis

New York, Oct. 28.—In spite of the hard times, vast sums of money are being spent in building operations in New York. Work is now in progress upon buildings, the aggregate cost of which exceeds $100,000,000, and if to this sum be added the value of those buildings projected for erection in all the boroughs of the city in the near future, the valuation figures at a single bound jump to the $300,000,000 mark. And the best of it is that there is no prospect of abatement in the work now under way. For the thousands of workers in the building trades in New York plenty of employment throughout the winter months is assured.

To enumerate all the building enterprises now going forward and to be started soon in greater New York is a well-nigh impossible task, but there are a number which because of their size and the amount of money involved in their execution are forced into the foreground and may not escape notice. Notable among these is the $35,000,000 terminal of the New York Central Railroad, which, now that the work upon the track area is so far advanced, will soon engulf the old Grand Central station; the new $4,000,000 terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad between West Thirty-first and West Thirty-third street, Seventh and Eighth avenues; the new $2,500,000 postoffice to be erected in Eighth avenue in connection with the Pennsylvania terminal; the $4,000,000 Fifth avenue building now going up on the site of the old Fifth Avenue Hotel; the $1,500,000 addition to the Hotel Astor; the Downtown Building to be 23 stories high and to cost $1,700,000, at the northeast corner of Broadway and Exchange place; the new Bellevue Hospital buildings, the estimated cost of which is $3,500,000; the new theatre, now being erected in Central Park West, between Sixty-second and Sixty-third streets, at a cost of $2,000,000, and the new library, dormitory and chapel buildings of Union Theological Seminary, going up on the quadrangle in Claremont avenue, between One Hundred and Twenty-second streets, at a cost of $325,000. The new Masonic Hall extension in Twenty-fourth street near Fifth avenue, which is to be ready for occupancy January 1, 1909, will cost, complete, about $1,250,000. The cost of the Sailors' Home, at West and Jane streets, which was dedicated the other day, was $250,000.

Lewishon Angered by Wedding Story

Atlantic City, N.J., Oct. 27.—Friends who used the 'phone from distant points to congratulate Jesse Lewishon, the New York banker, upon his supposed marriage to Edna McCauley, a footlight favorite, at the Hotel Shelburne, were told by the thoroughly angry banker that the story of the engagement and prospective wedding was a fabrication.

Arrivals of large consignments of flowers which flowed in from the railroad stations to Miss McCauley's suite of apartments, and a similar flood of cards from those who desired to pay their congratulations personally, only increased the New Yorker's irritation. Mr. Lewishon retired to his rooms when messages began to come at the rate of one a minute, and flatly refused to see newspaper men. Late this evening he issued this statement;

"There has been no wedding, and there will be none. Please say for me that this report is without the slightest foundation, and has caused me exceeding annoyance."

Asked if it was true that Miss McCauley had promised to become his bride at some future time, Mr. Lewishon refused to say.

Miss McCauley lunched with Mr. Lewishon and a few friends in the private dining room of the hotel, but fled to her rooms when messengers began to appear with despatches and bell boys arrived with fresh consignments of flowers.

"This is most outrageous," she said over the telephone, "I came down here to see Mr. Lewishon, and straightaway someone started this story.

"Engaged! No, we are not engaged. We are simply good friends. Mr. Lewishon finds this notoriety exceedingly annoying."

Jacob Weibel, manager of the hotel Shelburne, said;

"It is my opinion that the whole story was started by a former woman friend of Mr. Lewishon, who imagines she has ceased to make it unpleasant for him."

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sen on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted, and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

THE SUFFRAGETTES RIOTS

Sentences to prison for the suffragettes will not discourage those who have the martyr spirit. Yet the courts can do nothing else. This is the weakness of the state in conflict with fanaticism. When men or women escape from the usual trammels of opinion and become callous to gains and penalties that generally are enough to stop infractions of the law, the state is helpless until it devises new weapons. If it cannot find effective weapons, it is eventually overthrown; and we call that revolution. While the suffragettes lack the force to work a revolution, they are plainly worrying public men into concessions. Political candidates dislike facing the storm they can raise in a constituency; and are inclined to make peace with the enemy. This affects the attitude of the party leaders; and we have Premier Asquith astutely giving a qualified promise to the Amazons.

It is surely to be expected, however, that in the long run these street riots will bring reaction. Men will cease to regard them with tolerance as a spectacle, and will come to look upon them as a nuisance. Moreover, they must be steadily convincing thoughtful men that it is worth while to endure some annoyance and do some steady fighting in order to save the government of the country from the sway of such lunatics at the polls. With Austria tearing up the most sacred treaty in Europe, with Britain increasing her navy and talking of conscription, with Germany taxing everything in sight in order to keep up its enormous shipbuilding programme, this is hardly the time to entrust the government of the Empire to women. Some unctuous prophet of peace might stir them up to vote against warlike preparations at the fatal moment; and the Empire might fall helplessly before its enemies.

When the reaction comes, some very good women are going to get hurt. They are good because they have a zeal for what they believe to be the public good and are willing to make sacrifices for it when so many of us merely shirk. But this will not save them from trouble when the people of Britain finally make up their minds that this sort of thing must be put down. Yet so long as they meet with little effective resistance, the suffragette movements are likely to grow worse, and the final catastrophe will be the greater.

Big Wrestling Match on Friday Night

All preparations have been made for the big wrestling match between Yankee Rogers and Young Hackenschmidt at Brock street rink on Friday night. This go promises to be the warmest ever, as the men have been anxious to meet for some time. Rogers is in great shape at present as he has won three matches during the past week on his tour through the West. The best Cyclone Burns at Montmorency, Mich., on Friday night, is invincible, but he is up against a man this time, for Hack is just as confident that he will win. The management have arranged a good preliminary that will set the fans thanking.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. News in Brief.

London, Eng., Oct. 26.—In the House of Commons today during a debate on the unemployed problem, Kier Hardy reiterated his statements that 40,000 heads of families are receiving relief in Lancashire. Mr. Greenwood challenged his authority, and Hardy replied Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Toronto, and added that the name of Englishman was degenerated in Canada owing to the inferior class of immigrants sent out.

Brockville, Oct. 26.—E. N. Catlin, watchman on the Cleveland canal at Cardinal, was found dying about midnight last night. He was all alone and the symptoms pointed to heart failure. He never rallied. The strange feature of the case is that at the time he was supposed to be in the last agonies of death his daughter, Miss Flora Catlin, who was visiting at Brunsfield, was suddenly awakened by the voice of her father calling her in agonized tones. Immediately following this strange experience a telegram was received announcing her with the death of her father.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 26.—Copies of a special issue of the Western Pacific Herald, of Suva, Fiji Islands, containing an account of the experiences of the survivors of the wrecked steamer Aeon on Christmas Island, written by Chaplain Patrick, were received by the S. S. Aorangi. Few additional details were given than those sent by cable.

The work of taking off the castaways was extremely difficult owing to the heavy surf, and it required considerable ingenuity to take off Mrs. Patrick and a new-born child, which was born the morning prior to the arrival of the steamer Manuka. A bed with mother and child was fastened on a boat and was swung up with both on it by the davits.

It was expected trouble would be had with the Chinese crew, who were put into a camp by themselves some distance from the other camp. The ladies' boots and shoes were worn out, and rubber boots found in the cargo were cut down for them.

The U. S. S. Solace carried Mr. and Mrs Patrick and child and Mrs. Liddle to Pago Pago from Apia, where they were landed by the Manuka.

Calcutta, India, October 27. — Upon the completion of his term of service as military commander in India, General Lord Kitchener announced to-day that he will return home to England by way of Canada and the United States.

"It is my desire," said the General, "to see Canada and the United States the countries and their people, that prompts me to include them in my itinerary."

Lord Kitchener will also visit China and Japan on the way, possibly travelling through Australia and New Zealand.

An immense volume of correspondence is pouring in upon the General from England urging him to take up a reorganization of the British War Office. There is no doubt but that he would be appointed to the post if he wished to accept the position.

BACK FROM EUROPE.

The Right Kind of Homecoming and the Wrong.

The position of persons who have just returned from a trip to Europe is extremely difficult. If it is their first trip, the most delicate management will not keep them out of scrapes. For a full month their popularity is at stake, and it is three months before they know whether they have lost or regained their friends. If they come out of the ordeal well, every one admires them with renewed vigor, for they have proved themselves to be of rare metal. If they do not educate you, if all conversational roads do not lead to Rome, then they are worthy of your best friendship. If as they leave the ship they say, "I wonder if I can get an evening paper as early as this," they warm the hearts of those who came to meet them; if as they enter their home they exclaim, "I was afraid I'd forgotten to close those windows," they have brought peace back with them, and one regrets every minute that they were away.

But—and it is so large a but—if they regard you as the only people they have seen who did not interest them enough to make them exclaim, "Oh, see the natives!" if on your saying "It has been cruelly warm here," they answer, "It was warm in London; this cold I have now is a London cold," your heart drops down to your boots and you know what is in store for you. When you say, "The cream is not very thick," they are bound to answer, "The cream was remarkably thick in Scotland, but quite horridly thin in Naples." Your regret at the cars not coming brings out of them: "They have cars in Rome now. I wonder when we will have as good cab service here as they have in London." You think it may be the weariness of travel, and you say: "I know you want to get into your bath. You will feel better, I am sure." They pitilessly sing, "Oh, the baths we had in Normandy were so droll I must tell you all about them." And they do tell you. They mean it when they say they must. They stop halfway upstairs and deliver themselves of the entire tale.

These are the milder types, the average that we have always with us. There are, one hears, people who tell you how long the Seine is and how high the Eiffel tower, and once there was a man who remembered the population of every town and city he had been in, but we believe something was done to him. The dear returned travellers who realize the danger they are in slink around corners for months, afraid of meeting people and so succumbing to temptation. They blush with closed lips if you ask them a question, and it is years afterward when in intimate friendly converse that they finally say, "You know when I was in Ber—I mean Hoboken—I had an awfully interesting time, and if you dare it out of me—well, go on and do it. Dare!"

A POUND OF FEATHERS.

It Is Really Heavier Than a Pound of Lead.

The favorite question with the school commissioners of olden time was, we are told, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of lead?" The first rash answer almost always used to be, "A pound of lead." Then, of course, from the older pupils would come the reply, "Both alike."

If this question was asked to-day the old time querist might receive a decided surprise, for the pound of feathers could easily be proved to be the heavier. A simple experiment is all the evidence needed.

With any accurate scales weigh out a pound of lead, using ordinary shot for convenience. Pour the shot into one of the pans of a balance. For the feathers a light muslin bag will be needed, and care must be taken that feathers and bag together do not weigh more than a pound. When the bag of feathers is put into the other pan of the balance the beam will, after a few oscillations, come to rest exactly level.

So far the verdict "both alike" seems to be proved. But place the bedroom on the receiver of an air pump, with lead and feathers undisturbed. Cover the whole with the glass bell jar and exhaust the air. Slowly the feathers sink, and the lead kicks the beam. The pound of feathers is heavier than the pound of lead.

The truth is that what we call a pound was not much in fact, for the atmosphere heaps up everything upon it in proportion to the body of supported by the air to a considerably greater extent than the lead. Removed from this supporting medium, their true weight is made evident.

Charles Reade propounded a similar question in one of his novels. A Jewish trader is made to ask, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of gold?" After awhile he explains to the satisfaction of his audience of miners that the feathers are the heavier.

Gold, he explains, is weighed by troy weight, while feathers are weighed by avoirdupois, and as the twelve ounces in a pound troy contain only 5,760 grains, while the avoirdupois pound contains nearly 7,000 grains, the pound of feathers is, of course, 1,240 grains heavier than the pound of gold.

The blanket piled so high with chips that its weight balanced the grain sack, he prepared to start riverward. But first, prompted by an old habit, he climbed to a high point of bluff near by and standing where lookouts had maintained a post before severe weather compelled their withdrawal carefully scanned the white horizon. To the west, from where—the band in the stockade boasted—warriors of their tribe would come in the spring to make a rescue; to the north, on either side of the ice bound Missouri; to the east, in the wide gap between the distant ranges of hills, he saw no creature moving. But facing southward, his hands shading his eyes carefully from the glare, he spied on the eastern bank, and at not a great distance, the approach of a familiar milk white horse drawing a heavy pung.

The stooping pariah was transformed by the sight. He threw up his arms with an inarticulate cry and sprang away down the slope to his sack and blanket. Seizing them he made for the level ground north of the barracks, descended to the ice, swiftly crossed and dragged the fuel up to the cottonwoods. Then he started down the river, taking long leaps.

The upper part of the improvised sleigh that was tilting its way across the drifts like a skiff on angry water was the green box of an ordinary farm wagon set on runners. The wheels of the vehicle lay on some hay in the rear of the box. On the broad wooden seat was a man, facing rearward to get the wind at his back. He was almost concealed by quilts, his arms being wrapped close to his body, and the milk white horse was taking his leisurely way unguided. Above the man, and nailed so loosely to the wagon seat that it wavered from side to side and kept up a squeaking, was a tall board cross, rude and unpainted.

When he came close to the sleigh Squaw Charley caught the sound of singing and stopped. The traveler was comforting his lonely way with a sacred hymn, the words of which, scattered by the wind, reached the Indian in broken but martial phrases:

"Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching * * * war,
* * * the cross of Jesus
* * * * * on before."

Again Squaw Charley spurred himself into long leaps. And behind Shanty Town, on the open prairie, he brought the horse to a halt.

Once more he gave his wordless cry—a cry like the shrill hail of a mate. It brought the man face about. Another second, answering, he shook up shook off the quilts to free his arms, reached down and caught the pariah to his breast.

Tall and spare he was and aged. Over his shoulders flowed long white hair. A beard as white fell to his waist. His sharp eyes were shaded by heavy brows. He wore a coat of coarse cloth that touched his feet, and about his head was wound a Cobbe. As with face upraised he embraced the Indian he was a stately, venerable figure.

"God be praised!" he said over and over. Then he held Squaw Charley away from him for a moment to look him up and down. "I feared some harm had come to you—that your people had behaved so cruelly to you that you had died. But you are well. Yet how thin! Ah, I am so glad to see you once more!"

He held him close again, murmuring a blessing. When he released him it was to make room for him on the seat and wrap him up in a thick, soft quilt. All the while the benevolent old face was shining with happiness and tears were streaming down the wrinkled cheeks.

Squaw Charley, too, was overcome. His black eyes were no longer sad and lowered. They glowed softly, almost adoringly, as he watched his friend.

"David Bond had not forgotten you, Charles," the old man said as he clucked to the white horse. "I was at Dodge City—that wickedest town of the plains—when news came of the capture of your village. At once I started, for I knew that my duty lay here—here with your poor people, who will not realize how foolish and puny is their warfare. I did not come alone," he added, casting a look behind. "A white man accompanied me—a man so full of evil and blasphemy that I quake for the safety of his miserable soul. He has walked most of the distance, for he is warmer walking, and away looked back. A mile to the rear trailed a solitary man.

Squaw Charley made a quick, questioning sign.

"His name is Matthews," said David Bond, "and his mission, I fear, is a bad one. All the way he has urged my poor Shadrach on and on, so that we have hardly had time to rest and eat. And all the day, as he rides or tramps, he mutters to himself. When I ask him what he is saying he replies, 'You'll find out quick enough!' and curses more vilely than before."

The pung was now opposite the stockade. Looking across the river David Bond got his first view of the high walled prison with its ever moving and wary guards.

He pulled up his horse. "Alas," he exclaimed mournfully, "how misguided they are—white and red men alike!"

The pung slid on until the cut in the river bank was reached. Again the old man reined. "I cannot cross the river with the ice is so smooth. Shadrach could not keep his feet. And I will not leave him behind. But where can I stop on this side?"

Glancing to the left he saw the line of saloons. "There, Charles," he said. "I shall drive there and ask for shelter."

He turned the white horse into the cut. As they approached the shanties a woman's voice was heard, raised in ribald song.

"God sends David Bond whither he is most needed," the old man murmured fervently.

A shingle sign was nailed over the door of the first building. On it, in bold, uneven letters, were the words, "The Trooper's Delight." David Bond climbed down and knocked.

There was a moment of dead silence within, then sounds as if several persons were moving about on tiptoe. Again silence. The old man knocked louder. After a short wait the door

HIS MISTAKE.

Why Lawyer Bunsen Ceased to Be a Kidder.

Bunsen was always a great kidder. He isn't any more.

Bunsen is a lawyer, although, of course, he is known by a different name. Don't ever get the idea, though, that this didn't really happen just because Bunsen's real name isn't mentioned.

Well, as we were saying, Bunsen used to be pretty much of a kidder. He would even kid his own patient little wife. Those who care to read on down a little farther will learn why he ceased to be a kidder.

One evening last week when Bunsen got home his wife had a new hat to show him. It was some hat. Anybody could have seen that it was the final phrase in female headgear.

But Bunsen started in to make fun of it. He said it looked as if it had been trimmed by a cross eyed milliner on an empty stomach. And he made a lot of other disparaging remarks that were extremely harassing to poor Mrs. Bunsen. "D'je buy it night unseen?" he inquired. "Say, how much do they pay the girl that sold you that? She ought to have a raise. Any girl who could put that one over a customer must be something of a smooth saleslady, I'm here to remark."

Mrs. Bunsen was almost in tears. Bunsen had to go into the other room to have a quiet laugh at her expense. Oh, he was the great kidder, all right!

The next day, though, he had forgotten all about the hat.

The day after that he was reminded of his little johnfest. Mrs. Bunsen handed him a slip of paper when he came home to get his victuals that evening. It was a bill for retrimming that hat—$18.24 it came to.

Bunsen paid it without a murmur and said the revised edition of the hat was just exactly right. He isn't making fun of hats any more.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Minor Matter.

A young broker in Boston while visiting a certain household in the Hub not long ago encountered a number of young women graduates whose conversation suddenly turned to a discussion of the development of the English novel.

The dealer in stocks and bonds speedily found himself "out of it." Presently during a lull one young woman asked him:

"What do you think of Fielding, Mr. Brown?"

"Oh, fielding is important, of course," quickly responded the broker, "but it isn't worth much unless you've got good pitchers and men who can hit the ball."—Harper's Weekly.

His Trick Dog.

One day as a dealer was driving into a village he saw a man a little the worse for liquor assuming a crowd of spectators with the antics of his trick dog. The dealer watched him awhile and said:

"Sandy, how do you manage to train your dog? I can't teach mine to do anything."

Sandy, with the simple look in his eyes so common in some rustics, said:

"Well, you see, doc, you have to know more'n the dog or you can't learn him nothing."

Bad News.

"What are you worrying about, Bagsby?"

"My wife."

"I thought she was at the seaside."

"She is."

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor cure bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this horrendous much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

Every assignment of the right of a South African Volunteer entitled to a land grant must be by way of appointment of a substitute and must be in the form provided by the Act.

Special attention is called to Subsection 3 of Section 5 of the Volunteer Bounty Act, 1908, which provides that no assignment of the right of a volunteer by the appointment of a substitute shall be accepted or recognized by the Department of the Interior which is not executed and dated after the date of the warrant for the land grant issued by the Minister of Militia and Defence in favor of the Volunteer.

J. W. GREENWAY,
Commissioner of Dominion Lands, Ottawa.

28th September, 1908.

Synopsis of Canadian North west HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

CLEAN UP INSIDE

Blood and System Cleansing in the Spring Makes Good Health all Summer.

In spite of all your careful habits safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely bilious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years, says W. B. Sangster, of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite suffered from indigestion and gas, had sores pulse in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt dependent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They suited me exactly. In one week I felt like new, I was brand up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clear all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect spring medicine; they destroy germs and poisons of every description and strength whereby the system rallies and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills—to-day—25c at all dealers.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients glady spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Sang Harrigan

A young fellow who had imbibed just enough hops to make him forget the more serious side of life, took up his stand near the post office last night, and endeavored to entertain the passers by, with a few bars of Harrigan. He was getting nicely underway, and the people began to flock around him, when P. C. Mahurry walked up and advised him to hunt the hay and pound his head on the pillow for a few hours. The sound of the cop's voice was enough and without seeking any explanation or demanding satisfaction the warbler went up Water street like a flash and soon disappeared in the darkness.

Obituary

ISABELLA ELLIOTT.

A very sad death occurred yesterday afternoon when Isabella Elliott, relict of the late Rev. A. L. Adam, passed away after a short illness. The deceased was born in the township of Smith in 1852, and lived at her home until she was married to Rev. Mr. Adam, who died in Hastings in 1902. Since then she has resided at 284 Hunter street, where she died. The late Mrs. Adam was well known in the city, and very highly respected, and her death is much to be regretted. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon from the residence of her brother, Mr. E. M. Elliott, 28 Manning avenue, at 3 o'clock, and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

Those who are left to mourn her loss are one son, George Adam, of the staff of Commerce staff here; two brothers, E. M. Elliott, county treasurer, and Ald. Geo. H. Elliott, and one sister, Mrs. J. K. Moore of Smith.

JOHN H. SAVIGNY.

On Tuesday at noon John H. Savigny of Otonabee, an old, well-known and highly respected resident, passed away at his home. He was 68 years, 9 months old, and has lived in Otonabee the greater part of his life. Besides his widow, he is survived by three sons, Bruce, Gordon and Frank, and one daughter, Mrs. W. Taylor of this city. Messrs. John, George, James, William and Thomas Savigny of the city, are nephews, while Mr. Alex. Savigny and Miss Jane Savigny are brother and sister. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock from his late residence on lot 15, con. 16, Otonabee, and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. WM. CROUGH.

The death occurred in Ennismore Monday of Mrs. Wm. Crough, after a lengthy illness from rheumatism. The deceased was 71 years of age and was born in Emily. Her maiden name was Ellen Scotland. She was widely known and highly respected.

Besides her husband three sons are left to mourn her loss. The sons are Messrs. William, Daniel, and Michael, all residing in Ennismore.

The funeral will take place this morning at 10 o'clock to St. Martin's church, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

J. H. STILLMAN.

Word has been received in the city of the death at McDougall's Chutes, on Oct. 18th, of Jeremiah H. Stillman of this city. The deceased who was an employe of the Ferguson Lumber Company, left here three months ago for the north country. He was 47 years of age, and was well known in Peterborough. He is survived by his wife, who resides at 542 Gilchrist street, and two daughter, Lennie and Ethel. The funeral took place at Alberta Landing.

Maple Leafs Won from the Rustlers

A very fast game of basketball was pulled off at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last night when the Maple Leafs gave the Rustlers a handicap of 15 points and won out by a score of 56 to 41. The half time score was 26—17, and full time score was 56—29 with the handicap added. The Maple Leafs had a much better combination and also had the advantage in weight. Referee Evans and Umpire Collings gave general satisfaction.

The line-up was as follows,—

Maple Leafs—Ray Best, Long, Martin, Dawney and Sutherland.

Rustlers—Bull, Pringle, Lees, Meldrum and Dobbin.

The Big Match Did Not Come Off

There was no contest between the Nationals Hotel bunch of bowlers and the Munro Colts last night as was expected. The former sent out a challenge several days ago for a game with the colts, the losers to pay for the oysters. Arrangements were made for the contest to come off last night, but the challengers got cold feet, probably the election frost nipped them, and sent word in the afternoon that it was impossible to get the boys together. The Colts are ready any time to meet their adversaries.

Wedding Bells

HUNTER—MORRISON.

At St. Justine Station, Que., yesterday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Morrison, the marriage took place of Miss Rodena S. Morrison, formerly of this city, to Mr. George Warren Hunter of Toronto. The bride was unattended, and wore a pretty dress of cream voile over taffeta with bouquet of bridal roses. After the wedding dejeuner, the happy couple left for Montreal and New York before taking up residence in Toronto. The bride's going away dress was of navy blue cloth with hat to match.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Finance Committee Met Yesterday

A meeting of the Finance Committee was held yesterday afternoon for the purpose of settling several matters and passing accounts before the council meeting next Monday night.

Those present were; Ald. Morrow, chairman; Mayor Rush and Aldermen Neill, Phelan and Bradburn.

Moved by Ald. Neill and Mayor Rush, that the city solicitor be instructed to take action against Conrad Schwardt for the cost of the maintenance of his son in the Victoria Industrial School.—Carried.

A letter was read from Mr. B. T. Huston, secretary, asking for a grant to the Peterborough Poultry Association.

It was moved by Ald. Neill and Mayor Rush that a grant of $50 be made to the Peterborough Poultry Association towards the expenses of an exhibition to be held by the association.—Carried.

Moved by Aldermen Bradburn and Phelan that $50 be paid to the selectors of jurors in accordance with the certificate of the clerk of the peace.—Carried.

Moved by Aldermen Neill and Bradburn, that the treasurer be authorized to issue a cheque to Mrs. Mollaburn for taxes paid in error by her on part block west Concession street, and that the city treasurer be instructed to charge the taxes against the property that was assessed for it, if that can be done now.—Carried.

Moved by Aldermen Neill and Bradburn, that no action be taken on the letter of the chief constable regarding an extension telephone in his residence.—Carried.

A number of accounts were examined and recommended for payment.

The committee then adjourned.

Bad Symptoms.

The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has gnawing distress or heavy full feeling in stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weaknesses and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not result fatally.

No medicine extant has such a long and numerous record of cures in such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a strong professional endorsement of each of its several ingredients—worth more than any number of ordinary non-professional testimonials. The very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments enter into its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath.

In any condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of this "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure tumors—no medicine will. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Women suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (1008 pages) is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address as above.

How It Feels to Die of Thirst

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 27.—Dying of thirst in the desert west of Death Valley, E. F. Pratt, a prospector of the Grape Vine district, whose body was found in the Argus Mountains, by another miner, left the record of his sufferings on the pages of a diary found by his side. Pratt, after being informed that the trip was a dangerous one, started for Mojave, and for several days succeeded in finding water. He finally entered a region entirely destitute of moisture, and lost his way. Here the pages of the dairy contain entries that becoming illegible that read as follows:

"No water today, must go over the next range to find my trail back. Things ahead look bad.

"Can't find my trail. No water now for two days. Am about all in. Will be able do hold out though tomorrow.

"I can't stand the pace. Have left my grub and blankets. Am going blind with this sun and headache, lips and tongue are cracked and bleeding. Must get water today or I'll sink in."

This is the last legible entry, although Pratt had previously foreseen his fate, and left a request that notification of his death be sent to his brothers.

Board of Works Dealt with Several Requests for Sewers and Walks

The Board of Works, as is usual at this season of the year, has a large work of requests for short pieces of sewers and sidewalks, that the interested parties are anxious to have constructed this fall. The committee, however, has about reached the end of its tether, and aside from the lack of funds the weather will not permit of much work being done, so that a large number of them will have to be laid over until next year.

Those present were Chairman Ald. Phelan, Mayor Rush, Aldermen Morgan, Butler and Tovey.

The Water Commissioners intend laying a water main on Aylmer St. north, and City Engineer T. A. H. Hay, submitted a profile of a grade which he has established. This he suggested should be confirmed by a bylaw to protect the council from damages to property in the future.

It was moved that the engineer's suggestion be adopted, and a by-law be prepared.

Mr. Pouquette presented a duly signed petition for the sewer on Patterson street, west of Park, and he asked that the sewer be laid at once, as he has a couple of tenants now who want to go into his new houses.

On motion it was decided that this sewer be gone on with.

A letter was received from Thomas Guerin, complaining about the condition of the road at the corner of Gilchrist and London streets. He claims that every time it rains the mud and water flows into his place.

Engineer Hay stated that Mr. Guerin's property was several feet what is the matter with the machine ing but a big slam would prevent the water flowing in.

ABERDEEN STREET SEWER.

Mr. Taylor was present and asked for a sewer on Aberdeen street to the new house he is building. He said the water commissioners would put the water in if the Board of Works would raise a portion of the road so that the commissioners would not have to dig so deep.

The engineer pointed out that the sewer will have to be filled to a depth of 19 inches, and the city had not material. It was intended that the crest of the hill be cut down and that material used for filling in.

Mr. Taylor will, however, bring the water from the Normal school to his house this fall, and the council will build the sewer from Aylmer street along Aberdeen avenue, to his house.

The request was granted on condition that Mr. Taylor gets the water in.

PRIVATE SEWER.

Mr. Leplante was present in reference to a sewer on Murray street, south, down a lane to the rear of lot 4, He asked permission to connect with the city sewer. There will be three double houses emptying into it. On motion the request was granted, and Mr. Leplante will pay for the whole cost.

James Graham guaranteed to deliver to the city 200 cords of field stone at a price to be agreed upon. The matter was left over.

A number of petitions for granolithic walks were read, but as the board now has more than it can do they were all laid over.

Hospital Work Among the Foreigners in the West

There was a large number present at St. Andrew's school house last night to hear Miss McLeod tell of the work being done in the Home Mission fields and especially in the hospitals The rain was the only reason why there was not a crowded house, but those who went were exceedingly well repaid. Miss McLeod is a sister of a former pleasant director of the local Y.M.C.A., and a large number here will remember the family.

The home missionary spoke of the work being done by the Presbyterian Church in the Northwest, and especially in the hospital at Touton north of Winnipeg, where Miss Bell, daughter of a former pastor of St. Andrew's Church, is a nurse The hospitals at Wakaw and Vegreville, were also spoken of. In connection with these hospitals, two mission homes are maintained at Ethelbert and Sifton.

Miss McLeod is at Wakaw hospital, which is thirty-six miles from Duse station on the C.N.R. It was started few years ago by Dr Arthur. Among the number, who are assisted by these institutions are Polish, French, Russians, Swedes and Hungarians. Most of them are of the peasant class and the considerable treatment they receive at the hands of both the government and the church is simply surprising to them for fact the gratuitously dispensed, has created a suspicion that it is for some selfish purpose.

The clothing sent out by the ladies is widely distributed, and greatly sought after. While the picture books, etc., sent by the children are much appreciated.

The speaker referred to the work of the church among the Galicians A number of the young men are being trained in the Manitoba college as ministers to their own people.

In answer to a question Miss McLeod stated that the nurses in the hospitals do attend cases outside the hospitals when called upon.

Turf Club Held Annual Meeting

The Peterborough Turf Club starts out for 1909 with prospects that were seldom brighter, with a good membership, a strong body of officers and with every promise of a successful future. The membership is now in the neighborhood of 30, some of whom are young men and all are interested in the welfare of the club. The officers elected for the coming year are as follows,

Hon. President—A. H. Stratton.
President—Dr. Johnston.
1st Vice-President—Dr. King.
2nd Vice-President—Dr. Leach.
Secretary—Eddie Joyce.
Asst.-Sec.—Mudgon Storey.
Treasurer—A. A. Hollingshead.
Track Manager—Martin Connors.

A Board of Directors comprising eleven members were appointed.

The "Walker G" affair of Fair Day was dealt with and it was decided to give Mr. Hodgins of Orillia, until Nov. 1st. If he has not replied to the club before that date, action will be taken against him.

The club intends to do its best to provide clean races and ideal sport and its meets will doubtless be well conducted.

High Court Sustains Magistrate's Judgment

Toronto, Oct. 28.—The Calcutt Brewing and Malting Company of Peterborough, was fined $20 and costs for selling liquor to Joseph Levesque, jr., "knowing that he bought for the purpose of reselling, and was not a person entitled to sell liquor," and the Divisional Court reduces the conviction. The matter reached the High Court in an appeal from the county judge of Peterborough, who had quashed the conviction by the police magistrate. The company appealed to the County Court, and the License Commission to the Divisional Court.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs most falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists

Sixth National Assembly Hear Speech from Throne

(Special to The Times.)

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 28.—The sixth National Bulgarian Assembly, convened for the autumn session this afternoon. The speech from the throne was presented by Emperor Ferdinand, and was imminently pacific in its character. He defended the recent action of his government. The typical passage of his message was as follows; "Peace and prosperity are inscribed on the banner which was unfurled at Vienna on October 5th, and I cannot ponder my valiant and progressive people to assist me in the defence of our righteous cause of spreading prosperity and civilization in the Balkans."

Continuing, the emperor promised to reimburse all just claims against his government. He made no reference to Turkey, but emphasized his present friendship by Emperor Joseph as proof of the benevolent attitude of Austria-Hungary. He closed by expressing the hope

Will Protest in North Lanark

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—T. B. Caldwell, Liberal candidate, who was defeated in North Lanark by Thornburn, by a majority of 9, will institute proceedings to have the election voided. The action is based on the usual allegations.

Liberals will Tell Archbishop on Priest

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—Rumor from Lavelle, is to the effect that the Liberals will report to the Archbishop on the action of certain of the parish priests, who it is alleged were very outspoken last Sunday in favor of Conservative candidates Since the visit of Cardinal Merry del Val there in 1896, there have been few complaints of a similar nature.

Election Scandal in East Hastings

(Special to The Times.)

Belleville, Oct. 28.—There may be an election scandal in East Hastings At Stoco, the deputy returning officer, Pat Murphy, it is alleged, gave ballots to four persons who were not on the lists, in spite of protests of the Conservative scrutineers.

(Complete returns in this riding, give Northrup, Conservative, a majority of 1419.

Ministers in Ottawa for Cabinet Meeting Today

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—The cabinet ministers in the city tonight, are Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Hon. L. P. Brodeur and Hon. Chas. Murphy. The cabinet council will be held tomorrow and the rumor that Chas. Marcil will be chosen as speaker for the House of Commons, seems to be well founded.

Conduits for the Electric Wiring

The electric wiring that is being strung through the new armories is according to the most modern ideas Yesterday a large switchboard, which will control the entire lighting, was received from the C.P.R. and taken to the building, where it will be installed. It is a marble slab with many switches of various sizes, and was manufactured by Jones and Moore Electrical Co., Toronto. A feature of the work is that all the wiring will be covered. That is, the wires are strung through specially prepared pipes of a particular metal, similar to lead in appearance. It is inspected and approved by the underwriters and is a modern conduit for electric wiring. These are found throughout the building, and danger from electric wiring is thus eliminated.

Wedding Bells

STEWART—MATTHEWS.

An interesting matrimonial event was celebrated at the Baptist church Campbridge street, this afternoon, three o'clock, when Miss Isabella Matthews daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Matthews, Lindsay, was united in marriage to Rev. Harold Stanley Stewart, of Coudersport, Penn., the ceremony being performed by Rev. Mr. Welch.

The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Alice Matthews, the groom's man being Dr. Stewart, of the Theological Seminary, Rochester, N.Y. The Misses Dorothy and Grace Matthews of Ottawa, aided in the capacity of flower girls.

The out of town guests at the wedding were; Mr. A. Stewart, Kilmore, N.Y.; Dr. and Mrs. Stewart, Rochester, N.Y.... Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Matthews and Mr. and Mrs. A. Matthews, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Matthews, Brantford; Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Peterborough; Alex. Stewart, Sewickly, Penn.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Stewart will reside in Coudersport, N.Y.—Lindsay Post.

Many Inmates in the House of Refuge

There are thirty-five inmates in the county house of refuge at Lakefield at the present time. This is the largest number that have been in the institution since it was opened. Mr. and Mrs. Shevlin are very busy looking after their charges and upset to have a very busy winter.

Reeve Hood, chairman of the house of refuge committee, stated yesterday that the crops grown on the farm grain and roots yielded well and have been garnered in good condition.

Several improvements have been made recently at the farm. The fences have been improved in several places and a new one has been built along the road. It adds greatly to the appearance of the property.

Splendid work is being done at the county house of refuge. When the large number of inmates is considered, at the present time, it seems strange that the county got along without it so long.

Zam-Buk Saves a Farmer's Arm

Some Sensational Proofs of It's Healing Power.

Every day brings interesting instances to light of the wonderful healing power of Zam-Buk, the herbal balm. Mr. Wm. Snell, a Langenburg, (Sask.) farmer says: "I saved my arm by using Zam-Buk. I had a terrible scalding accident and the arm after the injury took the wrong way.' When I started to use Zam-Buk it was all swollen up and discolored, and I feared it would have to come off. In a few days Zam-Buk killed the poison, reduced the swelling, and finally healed the arm completely."

ECZEMA CURED. Mr. J. K. Cusick, of 149 Wilson St., Hamilton, says:—"Every winter I used to have eczema on the back of my hands, but after I was especially bad—so far that I had to lay off work for three weeks. While suffering acutely I was advised to try Zam-Buk and did so. I could not have believed anything could have healed so quickly! It just seemed to dry up and clear away the sores, and in a wonderfully short time my hands were quite cured."

PILES CURED. Mr. Neil Devon, of Webbwood, (Ont.) says:—"For eight years I tried all kinds of things for piles, but I got nothing to do me any good until I struck Zam-Buk! That quickly worked a complete cure."

Zam-Buk heals all skin diseases cuts and bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ulcers, chapped places, scrofulus ailments, poisoned wounds, swollen glands, boils. As an embrocation it cures rheumatism, sciatica, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 3 boxes for $1.25. Send 1c. stamp for dainty trial box.

W. B. McInness Invited to the Yukon

(Special to The Times.)

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 28.—Mr. W. W. B. McInnes, the defeated Liberal candidate in Vancouver, has received an invitation from the Yukon Liberal Association, to contest the constituency at the deferred election, and he is now considering the offer. It is felt that one of the seats in the deferred elections in British Columbia should be opened to Mr. McInnes and his services will be retained. In the event of his election, which is almost certain, he will be elevated to cabinet rank.

Will Treat Them with Benevolence—Bulgaria May Buy Independence

(Special to The Times.)

Budapest, Oct. 28.—Baron von Arbrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, in an important speech yesterday, indicated a yielding attitude on the part of Austria which may end materially in the preservation of peace.

Addressing the Austrian delegation, the Foreign Minister admitted that it was Austria's desire to do its utmost to relieve the present tension, and that therefore the Government would not insist that the question of the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina should be entirely eliminated from the program of the International Congress, although naturally he could not admit that the powers had the right to question the annexation of the Provinces, or the idea of any territorial compensations in other directions.

On this basis, however, he added, there was no objection to the Congress placing on record the abrogation of the articles relating to Bosnia and Novipazar. The Austro-Hungarian Government was trying to smooth the way for the conference, and he hoped his government's intentions would be appreciated at Constantinople, and a hand extended for a friendly agreement.

STOP MILITARY MEASURES.

He would also be glad to see the Turko-Bulgarian negotiations lead to an understanding for which conditions were by no means unfavorable. Acting with that view, Austria in common with other powers had dissuaded the administrations at Constantinople and Sofia from adopting military measures calculated to increase mutual distrust.

With regard to Servia and Montenegro, he said, neither was entitled to interfere in the matter in any way, but notwithstanding this his government was willing to treat both with benevolence and take their interests into consideration. It would, however, be better for their own interest to set practical aims for their activity instead of pursuing dreams that could never be realized.

Ten Years in Kingston for Assault

(Special to The Times.)

Brantford, Oct. 28.—E. Hill, charged with assaulting Mrs. Levi General on the Six Nation Reserve in July last, was sentenced to Kingston for ten years by Chancellor Boyd. The jury, after a few minutes' consideration brought in a verdict of guilty. The Indian never moved a muscle, when the received his sentence during which the judge said the assault had been planned and cunningly carried out. During the absence of her husband, Mrs. General had been attackked and maimanced by Hill, who shot her and finally succeeded in his purpose. After his committal the prisoner shamed insanity, and was moved to the Hamilton Asylum. The question of his sanity was settled by the jury yesterday.

Local Option in Ontario, One Hundred Campaigns

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 28.—Local option contests are now on in one hundred municipalities in Ontario. Of these 99 are for the abolition of the license system, and 60 are for the repeal of local option bylaws now in force. Secretary Ben Spence of the Alliance, says the campaign is becoming hotter every day, and that it was especially hot this week as Saturday is the last day for filing compulsory petitions to municipal councils etc it is optional whether the council submit the bylaws at the January elections or not.

Manitoba Attorney-General Attacked on Main Street in Winnipeg

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 28.—An aftermath of the latter election contest took place on Main street this afternoon, when Mr. E. L. Howell, K.C., son of Chief Justice Howell, attacked the Hon. Colin Campbell, attorney general, who has now sworn out a warrant for the arrest of Howell. The matter arose out of a conversation between Howell and the attorney general, on Saturday night when the former demanded admittance to the two Liberals who were arrested and placed in the provincial jail on bribery charges. The former accuses the latter of having called him a blatherskite The Hon Colin Campbell was going down Main street, when Howell met him and struck him.

A DISEASE OF YOUNG GIRLS.

Interesting and Suggestive Advice that All Should Read.

Many mothers will echo the conclusion expressed in a very interesting and suggestive letter written by Mrs. Zaidanta Bollard, of Grand Bay.

"It is one of the illusions of motherhood that once the diseases of childhood have been successfully passed a smooth road lies before their dear ones. Boys bruise themselves, or perhaps break a limb, but the physical history of the young girl, is subject to so many dangers, it is only when some great one has been successfully overcome that we realize how many dangers there are. My eldest child, a daughter, just as she had entered upon the sixteenth year, suddenly developed weakness, her color faded, some unpleasant heart symptoms indicated a lowered vitality of that organ, but strange to say she appeared plump The bodily functions were obstructed, and a waxy or pallid, or yellowish skin gave her a ghastly look. The doctor's tonic failed to improve the symptoms, we decided to try Ferrozone as highly recommended in the newspapers. It was probably three weeks before any manifest change was noticeable, but once that Ferrozone checked the running-down process the upward advance was rapid. I suppose if I had neglected to give her Ferrozone she would have fallen into permanent ill-health, as it is I am deeply thankful that Ferrozone has completely restored my daughter to vigorous robust health."

No tonic so nourishing, as strength-giving, as Ferrozone. It gives you a grand appetite, brings fine color, a healthy glow to the cheeks. If thin, you gain in weight. Think it over, Ferrozone is just what every person in poor health requires. Sold by all druggists, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50 Try Ferrozone today.

Will Seek Prohibition in New Brunswick

(Special to The Times.)

St. John's, N.B., Oct. 28.—The New Brunswick Temperance Federation will at the next session of the legislature present a monster petition asking for prohibition. It is expected that fifty thousand signatures will be secured.

Horse Thief in Town of Lindsay

(Special to The Times.)

Lindsay, Oct. 28.—When Mr. Davis of Glen Dean, drove into the town today, he left his horse in the Benson House sheds, and when he went to get it to drive home again, the animal was gone. Upon making enquiries he learned that the thief had been seen driving rapidly west. Mr. Davis set out after his horse, and traced it to Blackwater, and finally found it tied in a swamp outside the village. It was suffering from inflammation, and died soon afterward. A young man who gave his name as James Brooks was arrested.

C.P.R.'S ADVANCE

Telephones to Take the Placeof Telegraph System

Montreal, Oct. 27.—As outlined in The Star some weeks ago, the Canadian Pacific Railway is getting its telephone system for the purpose of despatching trains into such shape that it will soon be in use in many divisions. The Farnham branch service has been a great success, and between Montreal and North Bay there is a telephone system that the company feels has justified the greatest expectations. In the West, the work of installation has commenced, and Mr. M. J. Kent is out there at the present time in this connection.

A despatch from Winnipeg says that in discussing the question, Mr. Kent said: "By the time the double-tracking is completed from Fort William to Winnipeg we shall have established a system of telephones between Winnipeg and Montreal. The telephone lines are being strung on the telegraph poles, and a circuit has already been established from Montreal to North Bay, and from North Bay to Whitemouth. The completing section will be finished by the time the operating department takes over the double-tracked line, and this will be very shortly."

Typhoid Fever in Lumber Camps--Unsanitary Conditions are Blamed

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Oct. 28.—The outbreak of typhoid reported from the lumber camps, is due to the lack of sanitary conditions and the lack of protection to the water supply makes disease inevitable. Dr. Bell of the Provincial Health Department, reports 100 cases at Kenora hospitals, and the contractors' hospitals on the railway construction camps are full. He describes the conditions as appalling in the Rainy River district, although there are nine hospitals within a radius of 200 miles with doctors and nurses in attendance. The men generally are foreigners, and refuse to go to the hospitals when taken sick. And after sleeping out for a night or two in an effort to reach civilization the majority of them become hopeless cases. The carelessness in protecting the water from sewage and poisonous garbage, Dr. Bell claims is the main cause of the prevalence of disease.

Taft Collapsed at Big Brooklyn Meeting

New York, October 29.—(William H. Taft collapsed at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, during a fervid reply to the recent attack of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, upon Roosevelt's administration, its candidate and policies. Speaking from the first with painful difficulty his utterances more and more frequently interrupted by coughing spells. Taft's voce grew hoarser and hoarser, until it sank to an almost inaudible whisper. "So long as I have strength to exult myself", he said, " I will raise my voice in protest against the insidious attacks of Bryan, Debs and Gompers upon the power of the courts." Then came the breakdown. Henry H. Taft, who had been watching his brother with growing anxiety, motioned to a physician with the Taft party, and as the candidate stopped, exhausted, they literally pushed him to the back of the stage. Then while a band struck up, and another speaker sprang forward to attract the attention of the audience, Taft was hurried to his apartments in the Waldorf-Astoria, Manhattan, where he was at once placed under medical care. Taft's engagement to meet distinguished Republicans at the Union League Club was cancelled. It was said early this morning that the condition of the candidate was not serious.

Union Members Cannot be Fined

Boston, Oct. 29.—The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, in making permanent an injunction against several labor unions to-day, ruled in a decision attending the decree that labor unions cannot impose fines on their members in order to force them to go out on a strike.

The decision was rendered on a petition brought by L. D. Willcut, Sons & Co., of this city, asking for an injunction against the Bricklayers and Stone Masons' Benevolent Union, restraining them from imposing a fine of $100 each on two members of the union who had refused to go out on a strike.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus sent on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS

In the United States as in Canada there is a law to the effect that no party shall accept contributions from corporations and both the big parties in the States—Republican and Democratic—have announced their willingness to abide by it. The Democratic national committee has made public the total of the money contributions received by it and the names of each contributor of $100 or more. From now on until election announcements of additional contributions will be made from time to time. The Republicans have promised to make known after election the amounts of money received for campaign expenses and the names of the contributors. It is suggested that these reports should be accompanied by statements as to the nature of the expenditures and such statements will be probably forthcoming.

The publicity to which the party funds have been submitted under the new law—for it is new law in the States as in Canada—has doubtless undone many of the evils of the old system under which the large corporations gave unstintedly to the party of their choice or to both parties in some cases. There was no adequate provision for publicity under the old system and the campaign funds, so easily got, were doubtless as easily spent, in a manner which must have been a scandal to the community if the community could have known about it.

But the party managers have found it difficult to persuade individual citizens that it is their duty to contribute to the party funds. The individual citizens have not been in the habit of contributing to party funds. The rank and file have probably given no thought to the sources of the funds which have been spent so freely during past years. It certainly could not have occurred to them that they would ever be called to contribute to it themselves. In practice they do not contribute such amounts as would be necessary to reproduce the colossal expenditures of recent years. The Chicago News remarks that voters should know that a great deal of money is needed to meet the legitimate expenses of a well-conducted campaign. Publicity and comparison of expenditures will lead to the elimination of waste. When the people realize that funds of considerable size are actually needed and when they see how the money is spent they will learn, says the News, to contribute their share in small sums instead of leaving the whole burden to a few.

However, that may be, it is a fact, that since adequate provision must be made by candidates for purely legitimate campaign expenses it would be fair that a man having at heart a set of principles which are at issue in any campaign should be prepared to contribute his proper proportion to the support of the candidate whom he has accepted as his official advocate in respect of those principles. A party open contribution under the law with its attendant publicity would rob the campaign fund of the sinister look

SEEING AND LISTENING.

Nearsighted Man Wears Glasses in Talking, but Not in Reading.

"There's a sort of queer thing," said a nearsighted man. "I am very nearsighted. Strong glasses are indispensable to me for ordinary, general seeing in my goings about, but when I sit down to read I take off my glasses and bring the print up to within the natural focus of the eye. It seems to me that reading with the natural eye I read with a more intimate and a closer understanding.

"So much for my reading without spectacles, and now here is the thing that is queer to me. If when I am reading then, with my glasses off, somebody comes along to speak to me, why, then, to get a clear understanding of that question I must have on my spectacles.

"So I say, or I would say if this happened at home where I knew the people, 'Wait a minute till I get on my spectacles,' and I would put them on and then say, 'Now go ahead,' and really, with my spectacles on, with my power of seeing at its best, with the sharpest definition of things in general to the eye, I get the clearest apprehension of things said to me.

"So in reading I do best with my glasses off, but in understanding things said to me, in listening, I do best with my glasses on. There is one modification to this—where there is no light, as in a dark room, where I can't see, I can understand equally well with or without glasses."

QUEER TITLES.

Bestowed on His Favorites by an Emperor of Haiti.

Among the whimsical titles which appear on the pages of national history few are more apparently frivolous than the Duke of Marmalade, the Count of Lemonade and the Earl of Brandy. They are or were, however, real titles bestowed by a genuine monarch on those of his favorites, and that, too, during the last century.

In 1811 a revolution occurred in Haiti, and Christophe, a negro, declared himself emperor. Through conspiracy and plot, his life often attempted, he retained power till 1820, preserving to the last the pageantry of a royal court and creating a numerous nobility. Among them were the three already mentioned, and the oddity of the titles has suggested to many writers the frivolousness of the African character.

In fact, however, all three names were those of places, the first two being originally plantations, but latterly towns of some importance. This not being generally known, a misapprehension has arisen with regard to the titles themselves, which, however absurd, were scarcely more so than some which were bestowed in France and Germany during the middle ages.—Pearson's Weekly.

Liberty.

The spirit of liberty is indeed a bold and fearless spirit, but it is also a sharp sighted spirit. It is a cautious, exacting, discriminating, farseeing intelligence. It is jealous of encroachment, jealous of power, jealous of man. It demands checks, it seeks for guards, it insists on securities, it entrenches itself behind strong defenses and fortifies itself with all possible care against the assaults of ambition and passion. It does not trust the amiable weaknesses of human nature, and therefore it will not permit power to overstep its prescribed limits, though benevolence, good intent and patriotic purpose come along with it. Neither does it satisfy itself with flashy and temporary resistance to illegal authority. Far otherwise. It seeks for duration and permanence. It looks before and after, and, building on the experience of ages which are past, it labors diligently for the benefit of ages to come.—Daniel Webster.

The Blue Sky.

The blue sky which reveals itself as the hemispherical vault of the firmament in the absence of clouds is the fair depths of the air sending back to the observer some part of the solar illumination which they receive. The light thus returned to the eye is "blue" simply because the particles of the air are of such exceedingly diminutive size that they can effectively deal with only the smallest of the luminous vibrations—that is, with the "blue" undulations. There are a few faint intermingings of the other colored rays in the blue of the sky, but they are in such trifling quantity that the blue swallows them up.

ing of crickets depends so closely on temperature that the height of the thermometer may be calculated by observing the number of chirps in a minute. At 60 degrees F. the rate is eighty chirps a minute, at 70 degrees F. 120 per minute, and the rate increases four chirps to the minute with a change of one degree. Below a temperature of 50 degrees F. the cricket is not likely to make any sound.

He—Oh, yes. That's one of the most treasured recollections of my youth.

THE ROAD TO WEALTH.

It Is the First Thousand Dollars That Counts.

"The thing that counts," said a man of independently large means, accumulated by hard work, saving and wise investments, "is the first thousand dollars. When you've got that amount together you are beginning to get somewhere, and with that start you will want to keep on. The red ink interest entries that you see put down in your savings bank book twice a year will strike you very pleasantly indeed. As interest on your thousand dollars you'll get $30 or $40 in a year. Your money has begun earning money for you.

"You've got an income now, and you'll want to add to it. You will leave that interest in the bank, to be added to your principal, and now your interest will begin to draw interest, and, to be sure, you will keep right on adding to your principal, too, and every six months you'll see those red figures growing bigger and bigger, pretty figures to contemplate, and you'll keep right along saving. But the thing that really counts is the first thousand dollars. Get that and you're all right, and you'll always be glad you saved it.

"For there really is nothing like financial independence or like having at least some money laid by. Then if you want money you've got it. You don't have to go to friends to borrow and take the risk of being refused, the risk of being compelled to go without what you need. If you've got money in the bank you can go there and get it. There might come a time when you would need money for your family or for yourself very much. It's a grand thing to have it where you can get it.

"There's nothing mean about being saving and accumulating money. On the contrary, it is every man's duty to make himself financially independent. I don't mean at all that a man wants to set out to accumulate great wealth. There is no great fun in that. But what he does want to do is to get together enough to live on modestly."

DODGES OF COAL MINERS.

They Have Many Ways of Adding Extra Pennies to Their Wages.

In coal mining, as in other trades, there are many tricks played. Seams below three feet are paid extra tonnage, generally a penny per ton extra for each inch in the reduction of the thickness of the seam. Certain days are set apart for the purpose of measuring, and many schemes are resorted to by the miner to make the measurement as low as possible. Thus, according to the inequalities or irregularity of the floor and roof, a place may measure 3 feet one day and the next only 2 feet 9 inches. The miner takes advantage of this fact by letting his place stand for a whole shift, and sometimes a day, when he comes to a reduction in the thickness of the coal seam, and it pays him, too.

In other cases stone bands run in the seam of coal, and they vary in thickness also, but the miner is paid extra tonnage for the increase in the thickness of the band. Thus, you see that it means a considerable addition to his income to obtain an [illegible] supported by the air to a considerably greater extent than the lead. Removed from this supporting medium, their true weight is made evident.

Charles Reade propounded a similar question in one of his novels. A Jewish trader is made to ask, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of gold?" After awhile he explains to the satisfaction of his audience of miners that the feathers are the heavier.

Gold, he explains, is weighed by troy weight, while feathers are weighed by avoirdupois, and as the twelve ounces in a pound troy contain only 5,760 grains, while the avoirdupois pound contain nearly 7,600 grains, the pound of feathers is, of course, 1,840 grains heavier than the pound of gold.

with thrown wide. A thickset man, whose eyes squinted at cross purposes over his flat, turned up nose, filled the entrance.

"What in the devil do you want?" he demanded roughly when he saw David Bond. But his seeming anger illy concealed his relief that it was not an officered guard searching for recreant soldiers.

"I wish for nothing in the name of the devil," was the simple answer. "But in the name of God I ask for a roof."

"That buck with you?" The squint eyed man shut the door behind him as he pointed at Squaw Charley.

"No. He lives in the stockade yonder."

"Oh! He's the one that goes prowlin' round here day 'an' night, sneakin' an' stealin'!"

"He may prowl," said David Bond stoutly, "but he does not steal. He is a good, honest Indian."

The keeper of the Trooper's Delight laughed immoderately. "Get out! Who ever heerd tell of a' honest Injun? Say"—taunting—"where'd you an' your broomstall come from anyhow?"

"From Dodge City."

"Dodge City!" the man cried. "Then maybe you seen my brother there or heerd if he's comin'. Nick Matthews is his name"—

David Bond lifted one hand and opened his mouth to answer. But the words stopped at his lips. For from the top of the high bank behind the tips of shanties there came a shout. Looking up, the squint eyed man, David Bond and Squaw Charley saw a face peering down upon them.

"Hello!" came the voice again. "Hello, Babe! Hello, gran'pa! You beat me here, didn't y'? Look out. I'm comin'!"

And amid an avalanche of snow, icicles, dirt and stones that frightened the milk white horse so that he all but overturned the pung Nick Matthews tobogganed down the bank on his overcoat and landed beside them on the shelf.

"Short cut," he said as he got up and shook out the coat. "Well, Babe, old socks, how's things goin'? How"—he threw his thumb back over his shoulder toward the east—"how 'bout over there? What news y' got?"

Squaw Charley followed the direction of the pointing.

"You ain't come a minit too soon," declared Babe. "Only just a day or two left of your six months, an' they"— The two moved toward the shanty, whispering together.

David Bond called to the brothers appealingly. "May I put up here?" he asked. "Have you a vacant building that I may share with Shadrach? I have hay and food of my own."

Nick Matthews came back. He had a putty colored face upon which his blond eyebrows failed to show, but he summoned a look that was as near to a scowl as possible. "Look a-here, gran'pa," he said, "d' you think I'm goin' t' let you sponge offen my friend's? Not by a long shot! Hain't I come all the way fr'm Dodge City t' keep th' redskins fr'm takin' your scalp? What more d' y' want?" He gave a laugh in which there was no humor, disclosing small teeth, ranged close and like the first set of a child's.

David Bond did not quail. "You have accepted my hospitality for a month," he said. "I ask nothing that is not justly mine."

Matthews snapped his fingers derisively. "We can't have you here t' snoop an' spy," he declared. "Git!" As he turned to enter the shanty he came face to face with the Indian. "What's this?" Then, noting the squaw skirt, "Gran'pa, who's your lady friend?"

Hate flashed across the pariah's face like forked lightning on a dark sky.

"One of Sitting Bull's warriors," answered David Bond, "and a good man."

"Uncapapa, eh?" said Matthews. "I savvy their lingo." He plucked at Squaw Charley's dress. "Our warrior wears fine garments," he jeered, speaking in the Indian tongue. Then, with another laugh, he followed his brother into the shanty and banged the door.

David Bond took his horse's bridle. "We must find hospitality elsewhere, Shadrach," he said resignedly. And he headed the pung up the river. As he got back into the wagon box he looked round for Squaw Charley.

The pariah was standing close to the shanty, his head held forward, as if he were watching to spring, his hands opening and clinching angrily.

"Charles!" pleaded the old man reproachfully. "Remember—do good to them that wish you evil and love them that hate."

The Indian dropped his arm weakly and shuffled over to the pung. But when David Bond again drew him on to the seat his lips moved silently and until the cut was reached and Shadrach pulled them out upon the prairie once more he continued to glower back at the line of saloons.

"It will be a terrible night," the other said as they came to a standstill beside the cottonwoods. "It is getting late. I suppose I must try to cross the river."

The pariah was recalled from his backward glances. Rising he extended an arm to direct David Bond's attention. And the old man, rising also, made out the squat shack of the Lancasters, almost hidden from sight by drifts. With a fervent prayer of thanksgiving he touched up Shadrach and steered him toward it, pausing only long enough for the Indian to load the chip sack and the filled blanket on top of the wheels and hay.

"If this lonely house will give me shelter and welcome," vowed David Bond, urging his horse on, "it will find me grateful."

CHAPTER VII.

WHEN four distinct raps—Squaw Charley's familiar signal—sounded upon the outer battens of the warped door Dallas drew back the iron bolt eagerly, caught the lantern that lighted the dim room from its high nail above the hearth and held it over her head. Then, standing in the opening, with the icy wind fluttering the wide flame till it leaped and smoked in its socket, she met not the faltering eyes of the faithful Indian, but the piercing gaze of aged David Bond.

She fell back and let the lantern drop to her waist. There she held it, her fingers trembling despite her effort to appear calm. Many days and nights she had waited expectantly for the man who by voice and fist had displayed an enmity toward them. She had pictured his arrival or that of his emissary and planned what she would say and do. Now, certain that he was come at last—after she had long ceased to watch for him—and reading justice and fearlessness in the stern visage before her, she was dumb and helpless.

Her father's voice, rising from the hearthside, brought her to action. "Waal, waal," he was saying, "don't keep th' door open all night!"

With a defiant step forward and as if to bar intrusion she spread out her arms. "You're here," she said in a low tone.

Dallas' words did not penetrate the head covering worn by David Bond.

THE PACK PEDDLER.

His Varied Store and a Sale That Was Missed.

I had been thinking that the old style pack peddler was no more or that he existed only in out of the way localities like the Ozark mountains or Philadelphia. I was mistaken. The man with the pack is as common in the farming districts of Illinois as grasshoppers or prickly heat.

The oldest inhabitant in my neighborhood, who lives across the field from me, says that one pack peddler has nested in our part of the country time out of mind. Where he comes from with his assorted conglomeration of dry goods and hardware nobody knows; also where he goes after he has exhibited his wares and turned an honest nickel is a mystery. This general merchandise pedestrian has made a number of descents upon our house in the last year, but if he has no better luck with his other patrons than he has with me he isn't much interested in the banking system of the country.

He evidently has made an exhaustive study of my habits of living, for he always times his visit so that when he arrives all out of breath or any other useful thing he finds me well supplied with the necessaries of life and with not a cent in the house. All his visits begin, are carried on and end in the same way.

There comes a knock at the back door just at mealtime. I open the portal and see an overheated individual in the act of crawling from under what at first I take to be our new tar paper henhouse. The apparition quickly shapes itself into our peripatetic retail store, unlimbering for action.

I try to head him off by saying, "There will be nothing today, Alphonso."

Treating this remark with silent contempt, the tradesman begins loosening six buckles and a bed cord.

I watch him a moment and then remark, "You need not take down your shutters and open for business, Felix, my friend, for there is absolutely nothing doing."

"Handkerchief?" he suggests reproachfully.

I shake my head. Then he begins to unpack and lay out his entire stock, naming each article with a rising inflection.

"Suspenders? Fait soles? Clothes lines? Horseshoes? Stove polish? Chimney pots?"

"Have you any watermelon on ice?" I ask.

"No," he replies, quite seriously, "but here is a fine remnant of watered silk. No? Clothespins? Spectacles? Laundry soap? Toothbrushes? Garden hose? Split shingles? Ax handles? Doormats? Ox yokes? Insect powder?"

"No, no," I say. "I'm sorry, Augustus, but we send to Paris for all our goods."

"Could I sell you a good snow shovel?" asks the anxious salesman.

"No. We have our snow delivered already shoveled."

"Horse blankets?" he insinuates. "No? Collar buttons? Needles? Farming tools? Railroad spikes? Bed slats? Pressed bricks? Barbed wire? Coal bins?"

I leave the door open and go back to the table. After awhile I hear the buckles and straps being adjusted, and when the weary merchant has donned his burden and made a mile or so toward the setting sun I think the incident closed. Then my wife comes downstairs in a heartless state, clutching four spools of a forgotten color and declares that she must have much to buy white thread to finish my sewing."—Chicago News.

Royal Chickens of Japan.

"The most beautiful and extraordinary chickens in the world are those bred by the royal family of Japan, the privilege of raising them not being accorded to any of the mikado's subjects," said Mr. L. J. De Courcey of Yokohama. "These chickens are celebrated for the wonderful growth of their tailfeathers, a full grown rooster's tail often reaching a length of twenty feet. The tail is of a lovely deep blue shade, while the body is buff, and about the neck is a white ring. A pair of these chickens has been known to sell to a wealthy Englishman for $1,000 on condition that he would take them out of the country.

"I believe that ere long the species will entirely disappear, as I heard before leaving Japan that it was the intention of his majesty to cease their breeding."—Baltimore American.

Reforming the Head Hunters.

A curious development is in steady progress in the Solomon islands, the group in the south Pacific which lies to the west of New Guinea, whose people have earned such unenviable notoriety as head hunters. The young men of the tribes in these fertile and beautiful islands are abandoning the historic pursuit which has made them dreaded for centuries in the south seas and are taking to the copra industry. Copra, which is the dried interior of the cocoanut, is valued commercially for the oil which can be pressed from it, and some of the young Solomon islanders are accumulating considerable wealth by extracting it, though the older generation, to whom head hunting is still the only profession for a gentleman, are said to look down upon them as being "in trade."—London Standard.

What Willie Knew.

When Willie saw a peacock for the first time he said to his mother:

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a sudden, tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and Kidneys also have been made controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first searches the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is then directed to those weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds Nerve Strength; it enters real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen those Nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

VOLUNTEER BOUNTY ACT 1908

Warning to Purchasers.

Every assignment of the right of a South African Volunteer entitled to a land grant must be by way of appointment of a substitute and must be in the form provided by the Act.

Special attention is called to subsection 5 of Section 6 of the Volunteer Bounty Act, 1908, which provides that no assignment of the right of a volunteer by the appointment of a substitute shall be accepted or recognized by the Department of the Interior which is not executed and dated after the date of the warrant for the land grant issued by the Minister of Militia and Defence in favor of the Volunteer.

J. W. GREENWAY,
Commissioner of Dominion Lands, Ottawa.

28th September, 1908.

Synopsis of Canadian North west HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Obituary

JOHN MILLER.

In the death of Mr. James Miller Tuesday night at 6.30 o'clock, at his residence, 189 Dublin street, the city loses one of its oldest and most highly respected citizens. After an illness that was rather extended, the deceased was called to his reward at the grand old age of 88 years. The late Mr. Miller was born in the village of Burwell, Cambridgeshire county, England, in the year 1820. Fifty years later, in 1870, he came with his family to Canada at first residing in Millbrook. Two years later he moved to Peterborough, and has lived here since then continuously. In the year after coming to this city Mr. Miller first identified himself with the 57th Regimental Band of which he was a valuable member until about 10 years ago.

The surviving members of the family are his wife and the following children—Mrs. Wm. Osborne, London, Eng.; Mr. F. W. Miller, Water street; Mrs. Edward Avery, London, Eng.; John Miller, Waterford street; Mrs. N. Rouse, Burwell, Neb.; Mrs. Jas. Rouse, Pine Grove, Alta.; Alfred Miller, Nanton, Alta., and Mrs. William Walters, of Doure.

The deceased was a member of the Methodist church and in politics was a Liberal. The funeral will be held this afternoon at two o'clock from the family residence, 189 Dublin street, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

MRS. O'DONOGHUE.

At noon yesterday the death occurred at the House of Providence of Mrs. O'Donoghue, at the age of about 75 years. She originally came from Cobourg. The funeral will be held this morning to St. Peter's cemetery.

MISS MARGARET CONDON.

A sad death occurred Tuesday evening when, after a lingering illness, Miss Margaret Condon, daughter of Mr. John Condon, 169 Perry street, passed away at the age of 19 years and nine months.

The funeral will be held this morning at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

Fifty Deer Hunting Licenses Issued

Up to last night fifty deer hunting licenses had been issued. The season opens, as is generally known on Nov 1st, but this year that date falls on Sunday, so that the devotees of the chase cannot hunt until Monday. Many of them are making extensive preparations for their annual two weeks' outing. Most of them will leave the city on Saturday so as to be ready for an early start on Monday.

Colonel Miller, who is issuing the licenses in this city expects a big rush of applications during the next two days.

Those who have taken out licenses are as follows:

Messrs. J. G. Stinson, F. Stinson, A. Blade, Peterborough; P. Nicholls, E. Pearson, Smith; J. Tedford, R. Hamilin, Wm. Bedford, George Moore, Rich. Tedford, Warsaw; T. Rudkerford, A. J. Hoolahana, J. Dammett, H. Dammett, H. Ringer, Charles R. Nixon, city; George A. Grant, W. J. Grant, Warsaw; John Lumsden, John and Thomas Brightman, Wm. Gill, Dixon Best, J. D. Collins, R. Neill, Chas. Gladman, G. Pentland, G. Curtis, A. E. Curtis, S. Ray, B. O'Dell, D. Evans, John Davis, H. J. Miller, Robert Miller, D. Miller, A. Henderson, Warsaw; D. Gladman, Toronto; William Flemming, Hall's Bridge, and L. Fife, Otonabee.

COMMON SENSE

Leads most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition. Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily growing in favor. The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody. Dr. Pierce being desirous of having the search light of investigation turned fully upon his formulæ, being confident that the better the composition of these medicines is known the more will their great curative merits be recognized. Being wholly made of the active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs. Examine the formula on their bottle wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and hang-on-coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption.

Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" as directed and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get its full benefits. The ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed have the unqualified endorsement of scores of medical leaders—better than any amount of lay, or non-professional, testimonials. They are not given away to be experimented with but are sold by all dealers in medicines at reasonable prices.

Permanent Grounds for the Peterboro Exhibition

The question of a permanent home for the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is at present commanding not a little attention from the directors of that organization, and some of the aldermen. When the proposition was first put to the city council to purchase the grounds at the south end of the city, it met with some favor, but the fair people did not show up at the meeting of the council when the matter was to have been discussed. Since, then nothing more has been said at any of the council or committee meetings, although it is evident that there has been something doing on the outside.

The directors have considered the suggestion of utilizing the Billiard farm, which it is unofficially reported the council will allow, and a deputation will visit the farm lands tomorrow afternoon. Undoubtedly the farm has many features in its favor as well as some against it. It is doubtful, however, if a better place than the present grounds could be secured.

The time has come, however, when something must be done to place the Peterborough fair in a better position. The buildings and grand stand are in very poor condition and must be replaced, and new quarters for poultry and live stock are required. The present accommodation is too scattered and by the time the visitors at the fair make a round of the stables or up to the grand stand they have done a day's work and are in no condition to enjoy the sports or the exhibits. The directors should take this into consideration when providing for the future.

Mrs. Barney Delighted Audience with Lecture on W.C.T.U. Work in Prisons

A large audience assembled in the George street church last night, to hear Mrs. Barney of Rhode Island, U.S.A., the Prison Evangelist of the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union.

No one present had anticipated the great delight that was in store, from the soul-stirring address of the visitor. The Rev. E. A. Pearson was chairman, and at the close of the address said that he had heard Miss Francis Willard, and all knew of her great worth and excellence as a speaker, and after hearing Mrs. Barney would always couple her name with the one who had done so much to stir the world in the cause of temperance.

To ask for a formal resolution would be to place this great address on too common ground.

In consequence of the very large number present and the great interest awakened by the address, the meeting which was to have been held in the Y.M.C.A. Parlor this afternoon at four o'clock, will be held in George street church, and a genuine surprise is in store for all who take advantage of the opportunity to hear and see this talented lady.

Words are inadequate to give our readers any idea of the continuous interest in which the entire audience was held, as Mrs. Barney told the story of her work as Prison Evangelist, and how after repeated refusals to undertake a visit round the world to the great prison centers, Miss Frances Willard had at last prevailed upon her, and how through fourteen months she had accomplished what at first seemed to her to be an impossible task.

Crossing the American Continent from Rhode Island to San Francisco, she had the privilege of addressing 1100 men, 600 of whom signed the pledge. Taking steamer from this part the journey was made to Japan, then to New Zealand, Tasmania, Queensland, South Australia, West Australia, Ceylon, Port Said—then by storm driven to Syria—returning to Jaffa, then on to Jerusalem. In all these places the W.C.T.U. were revived or organized, prisons visited and personal work done.

In Tasmania, a notable visit was made to the poor house—called by the aristocratic name of "Invalid Depot" where a great revival was begun among the old women of that home.

Everywhere she had been greeted with the greatest kindness and courtesy. In many of the places dozens of white-ribboners hailed her and she was more convinced than ever of the power of the Gospel to save men and keep them from strong drink. After leaving Jerusalem the journey homeward was begun, touching at Port Said, Naples, Florence, Rome, Paris, London and reaching Boston after a journey of 25,000 miles, holding 25000 services, and having given 5000 pledges to men and women by the way.

An interesting episode occurred at Boston when the customs officer examined her trunk. Covering the contents was a beautiful silk flag, which in the ordinary way was hoisted. She called his attention to the fact that all around the world not officer had touched it so roughly, but said she, "Take care how you touch what is beneath it." Carefully he lifted the flag to find the British Union Jack. Thus had carried her safely round the world, and proved to her the tremendous privilege and power for the good of the world of the English speaking nations.

She joined the flags by the W.C.T.U. white ribbon, surmounted them on her parlor wall with a cross, and to her they always said, "By these signs conquer."

The meeting to have been held in the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon, has been changed to the George street Methodist church.

Difference Between British and American Unemployed

(Special to The Times.)

London, Eng., Oct. 29.—John Burns, one of the leaders of the Labor party in the House of Commons, and chairman of the local government of the Board of Trade, in a speech on the unemployed problem tonight, contrasted the unemployed of England with the unemployed of America. "The only difference, he said, "between the British laborer out of work and the American out of work, is that the Englishman drinks more liquor than the American does, and consequently the Americans could stand a longer seige and dress better and present a better appearance." This remark brought forth a storm of cries of "It's not true" "Sit down" "Shame!" etc.

British Steamer Sunk 23 Men Perished

(Special to The Times.)

London, Oct. 29.—Wreckage picked up on the North Sea, confirms the fears that the steamer Yarmouth foundered two days ago while proceeding from the Hook of Holland to Harwich.

The Yarmouth was a channel freighter belonging to the Great Yarmouth (Steamboat) Company.

She carried a crew of 23 men, and it is believed that they all perished.

Postmaster-General Elected

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 29.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, postmaster general, was elected today in the county of Gaspe, defeating W. Flynn by over 1200 votes. The Liberal candidate in Chicoutimi and Saguenay, was also elected by several hundred majority. This gives the government a total of 54 supporters from Quebec.

Compulsory Vaccination in Kingston

(Special to The Times.)

Kingston, Ont. 29.—The medical health officer in view of the smallpox cases has given orders that all scholars who have not been vaccinated, be prohibited from attending classes, and the parents are fining all kinds of complaints. The law gives the health officer authority to do this with the consent of the school board. Compulsory vaccination is likely to considerably reduce the attendance at the schools.

Hotelmen Kept Bars Open on Election Day

(Special to The Times.)

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 29.—Eighteen white men were today fined $75 each for looking on in a Chinese gambling den. They were caught in a raid last night.

Bishop Cosmo G. Lang Unanimously Chosen as Bishop of Montreal

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct 29.—By a unanimous vote of the Synod of Montreal tonight, the Right Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Bishop of Stepney and suffragan to the Bishop of London since 1901, was declared elected to the Bishopric of Montreal. This vote concluded the 7th and final ballot in which the Bishop of Stepney received practically a unanimous vote. The figures were, clerical vote; Rt. Rev. Bishop Lang, 89; Rev. Rexford, 4; Dean Evans, 3; Dean Farthing, 4; Archdeacon Kerr, 1; Rev. Osborne Cook 1. The layman's vote was; Rev. Bishop Lang 70, and Dean Farthing 7.

At the conclusion of the election the following cablegram was sent to Stepney; "The Synod of Montreal consisting of 107 clergy and 209 lay delegates have unanimously chosen you Bishop, and earnestly hope you will accept."

A reply is expected tomorrow. The name of the Bishop of Stepney was sprung as a surprise upon the Synod, and came after the stubborn duel between Dean Evans and Dean Farthing developed a deadlock. The laymen refused to support Dean Evans and went solid for Dean Farthing, while the clerical support was for Evans, although Farthing had a slowly increasing number of adherents.

The question as to whether Bishop Lang will accept is regarded here as doubtful in both clerical and lay-men circles, as he is in direct line for preferment as co-adjutant to the Bishop of London.

BISHOP LANG.

Bishop Lang is the son of the Very Rev. John Marshall Lang, D. D., and will celebrate his 44th birthday on Saturday. He was educated at Glasgow University and Valiorll college, Oxford. He became a member of the inner temple in London in 1888. From 1893 when he left the curacy of Leeds, his career became identified with wonderful advancement. He was a Fellow and Dean of Divinity at Magdalen College, Oxford from 1895 to 1896, and during that time was Vicar of St. Mary's the university church. Leaving Oxford he became Vicar of Portsea, where he remained for five years, when he received the appointment as chaplain to Queen Victoria, and in 1891 was made a canon of St. Paul's.

STOMACH DERANGEMENT

HER LIMBS ACHED. MOTH OUT—TIRED. HEADACHES. DIZZINESS.

Mrs. Sabolos' Case Like that of Thousands Cured by the Celebrated Tonic Ferrozone.

This is but one example of the sicknesses the dull, drag weariness that afflicts so many homes today.

Hundreds of women, single and married, will recognize in Mrs. Sabolos' statement symptoms from which they suffer continually.

Almost instant in its wonderful results, better than any other tonic in the world is Ferrozone. All other medical discoveries seem as dough compared with the vital leaping health Ferrozone so surely brings.

PROOF OF CURE.

"People in ordinary circumstances find sickness the greatest burden of all," writes Mrs. W. S. Sabolos, the wife of a well-known citizen in Russell. But this mother with young children must keep going whether sick or well. This was my plight just before my third child was weaned. I became weak and pale, and at night I was so weary that I ached all over. I slept poorly, suffered with indigestion and headaches that almost blinded me.

"At last, when thin, wrinkled and hollow-cheeked, I was urged to use Ferrozone. For the first time in years I enjoyed freedom from headaches, my appetite picked up, I grew stronger, felt better and slept soundly. You can't imagine my joy in seeing my strength, color and spirits returning. Week by week I improved, gained eleven pounds and have been robust ever since."

Because Ferrozone invigorates—nurishes—builds up—because it will make you feel the exultant thrill of vitalizing blood and strong nerves—because it will give you confidence, energy, sound lasting health, these are a few of the reasons why you should use Ferrozone. Sold by all dealers, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50. Try Ferrozone. Do it today.

Deadly Fumes are Killing Men

New Orleans, Oct. 29.—Deadly fumes from Mexico's great oil well fire, sixty miles from Tampico, have killed more than a score of workmen during the past few days, completely blackened the white paint on the side of the ships, endangered commerce and caused thousands of dollars damages to ranches and other neighboring interests, according to Captain Michael Henrichen of the steamship City of Mexico, which reached New Orleans Monday night.

Battling to save what they could from the wreckage, American mine owners after spending more than a million dollars, finally succeeded in extinguishing the blaze, but even greater terrors than before prevailed them. The flames had consumed the noxious gases, but when the fire was stopped the gases burst forth. Laborers, inhaling a bit of the stuff, dropped in their tracks.

Owners of the well have applied to the Mexican Government and several companies of soldiers have been sent to the scene to take the places of the laborers, who refused longer to remain there.

Holland's Ultimatum Expires on Saturday

Diplomats Expect a Blockade of Ports will be Next Move

Washington, D. C., Oct 29. — Diplomats, together with State Department officials, are wondering just what is to be Holland's next step in her dealings with Venezuela, now that President Castro has declined to revoke his decree of May 16th, prohibiting the trans-shipment of goods for Venezuelan ports at Curacao. Holland's latest note demanding the revocation of that decree generally has been understood to be an ultimatum by Holland, and November 1st was set down as the limit of time in which she expected Venezuela to take favorable action on her demands, and that time is now near at hand.

Holland has maintained that the restoration of Curacao's commercial intercourse with Venezuela is absolutely necessary to her existence.

There has been some talk of the blockade of the ports of Venezuela by Holland. If Holland is determined to do this, she is fully prepared for the work, having three good sized vessels in West Indian waters.

With a blockade of Venezuelan ports, the Holland Government believes they can force Castro to terms.

Grand Stand is Free for Saturday's Game

The attention of the public is drawn to the fact that at Riverside Park the fine new grand stand, which is free of charge for all rugby games furnishes the very best view of the game that it is possible to secure. Every play can be followed from the comfortable seats, and this should attract a bigger crowd than usual to the Senior O.R.F.U. match on Saturday afternoon. The locals are confident of winning on Saturday from the T.A.A.C. Whether they do or not the game will be one well worth seeing.

Seventy New Members Sent to Parliament

Ontario Representation will Show Many Changes when the House Meets

Ottawa, October 29.—There will be at least seventy new faces in the new House of Commons. Already that number of members of the tenth House of Commons of Canada have either dropped out of the political ranks of their own free will, or have been relegated to private life by their constituencies.

In Ontario there were fourteen members who did not seek or get renomination. The Liberals were: J. T. Schell, of Glengarry; V. Rats, of North Middlesex; Robert Stewart, of Ottawa; G. Smith, of North Oxford; R. R. Hall, of West Peterborough; A. A. Wright of South Renfrew; Norman Wilson, of Russell; L. G. McCarthy, of North Simcoe; and John Finlay, of East Peterborough.

The Conservatives were: H. A. H. A. Ward, of Durham; Wm. Jackson, of Elgin East; Col. Tisdale, of

Hunters Off to the Woods

The hunters are off for the tall timbers where they will camp on the trail of the deer, moose, bear or any other wild animal that comes along. Although reports have come into the city that deer will be scarce there will be just as many hunters this year as ever. Some of those who are going out in parties are as follows;—

OEER LAKE CLUB.

The Deer Lake Hunting Club, composed of Messrs. J. B. Larocque, R. H. Shepland, ... Mahaffy, Louis Houdry, and B. Larocque of Toronto, will leave Peterborough for the vicinity of Deer Lake on Friday morning. The boys anticipate a jolly good time, and expect to get their number of deer.

The members of this club held a meeting at the Montreal House a few nights ago, to conclude arrangements, and everything is now ready to start out.

EAGLE LAKE CLUB.

A happy party, probably numbering sixteen or eighteen sportsmen, will spend their allotted two weeks at Eagle Lake Hunt Club are Captain J. J. Nottingham, Geo. Fitzgerald, L. Grimsdale, H. Evans, W. White, O. Dunstie, R. Stevens, Felix Brownscombe, H. Lowden, C. Gunn, Mark Dobson, John Gibbs, T. Parker. They will join Chas. Boucher and "Bessie" Mitchell, who have been back at headquarters during the past three weeks. A friend of Mr. O. Dunstie, from Montreal, will be with the party.

SWAMP LAKE CLUB.

Saturday morning will see the Swamp Lake Club depart for their grounds in the northern part of the county. It is composed of Messrs. Alex. Calder, Ed. Graham, Fred Cobb, Bert Scriver, Thos. Arnott, George Metcalf and Alex. Young.

BOTTLE LAKE CLUB.

There will be nothing slow in the neighborhood of the Bottle Lake Hunt Club's camp when they get back for their annual sport. They leave on Saturday night as follows; Dr. Amy's Gun Cochrane, Mr. O'Brien, Arthur Read and J. E. A. Fitzgerald. They will probably be joined later by Messrs. W. Westlake and M. Blewett.

OTHER PARTIES.

Mr. R. J. Soden will join an Orillia party for a fortnight's sport in Northern Ontario. Mr. J. D. Collins and Mr. W. Black of Cobourg will hunt through the upper limits of Hastings county. Messrs. Thos. and John Brightmore have also departed for their annual chase. Mr. Con. Young joins a Lakefield party for the upper extremity of Peterborough county.

FOR BIG GAME.

Mr. Jas. A. Storey and Mr. R. A. Elliott have gone to Seagram's Falls, New Ontario, where they expect to find big game. Moose are said to be plentiful and their hopes should be realized.

GLADMAN PARTY.

Ten members of the Gladman party which consists in all of fourteen hunters, left on the early C.P.R. train yesterday morning for the Parry Sound District where they will spend the next two weeks. Among those in the party are Chas. Gladman, S. Ray, Curtis Bros., G. M. Rogers, Dickson Bros., B. A. Lillie and B. Lovekin.

SINCLAIR-ELLIS PARTY.

Rev. Geo. W. Henderson, of the Charlotte street Methodist church, is hunting with the Sinclair-Ellis hunting party which left Lindsay yesterday morning for Long Lake, Anson township, twenty-eight miles from Gelert station on the G.T.R. Mr. Dougall Sinclair, of Lindsay, is captain and guide. The party is composed of the following, in addition to Rev. Mr. Henderson; D. Sinclair Johnston Ellis, Lindsay; Wm. Thorndyke, Oakwood; C. H. Hopkins, Ops; Rev. Mr. Irwin, Newcastle; Martin Leverty, Toronto; F. Galbraith, Port Hope; Rev. Shorey, Cobourg, and Less. Veitch of Lindsay, will look after the cooking.

Local Rugby Team in Fine Shape to Meet T.A.A.C. in O.R.F.U. Championship

The T.A.S. players had a fine practice last night, and are prepared to put up a great argument against the T.A.A.C. at Riverside Park next Saturday afternoon. The Toronto bunch had little difficulty in defeating the locals when the two teams came together in Toronto, and expect to win here. But they know the Peterborough aggregation will be reinforced by several good players and are taking no chances. They will bring down a line-up that will be a particularly strong one, and according to the Toronto papers will be a hard go to beat in the Canadian championship finals.

Reg. Dilworthy, who was unable to play in Toronto on account of injuries will be on the visiting team and his presence will count for a great deal.

There will be no admission fee charged to the grand stand, which has accomodation for 600 spectators.

The senior O.R.F.U. fight is no; giving the Toronto Athletics much to think about. The defeat of Peterborough is practically assured and even then not an overwhelming shade of honor will go to the winners for their pains.—Toronto News.

The local boys now are that they are up against a real cocky bunch, and it is up to them to show the Big Town boys a thing or two.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-no's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick man. Sold by all dealers.

Government Official Had Exciting Experience with Grizzly Bear on Glacier

(Special to The Times.)

Vancouver, Oct. 29.—A few scratches are the souvenir which Mr. J. M. Bales carries off from his adventure with a grizzly bear in South-Alaska lately. Mr. Bales was at one time the assistant in the department of the interior at Ottawa, but lately has been with a survey party engaged in locating a portion of the international boundary line.

While descending a glacier at Head Valley, and after jumping over crevis Mr. Bales heard an anonymous growl and upon looking up he was startled to see a huge grizzly bear, looking down upon him from an ice hummock, 50 feet above. He threw away his pack and instruments, and made a dash down the mountain side with the bear bounding after him, and for several minutes the chase proved a lively and a most exciting one. Reaching a steepar descent, Bales slid, uncertain where he would land, into the canon below. Down, down, for hundreds of feet, rolled the surveyor with the relentless animal on his trail. Almost stunned he landed in a snow bank, and before he could regain his breath, the grizzly was upon him. Being buried as he was in the snow the bear could not inflict a very serious wound, and it was not long until Bales' companions appeared upon the scene, and dispatched the animal.

Yankee Rogers in Fine Shape to Meet Hack

I will never believe it, said Yankee Rogers, in Manchester, N.H., the other day when a Peterborough paper, was placed in his hands by his manager with the result of the Gene-Kaiser match. Do you mean to tell me that Gene after beating a strong man like Abdallah and a clever man like Fritz Stahl, staying off Conkle for an hour, has been beaten by Kaiser. Oh I know Charley is good, but to meet Gene he said Yank. Why didn't it take me over twenty minutes to throw him the first fall, and surely he hasn't got worse. There must have been something wrong with him that night. It happens to the good men as well as the runners, this dropping of form, but this looks most things.

Why we were only just beginning to think that any match with Gene would have to be a straight one, never mind three falls in an hour.

Asked how he thought he would go with Young Hack, Yankee said the Manchester Mayor that he could win, but knew he would have to move fast and keep his eyes open for Buck is fast after the feet. He has been talking to New York in the gymnasium where he trains that I was scared of him, and refused to meet in Montreal. I should have been in pocket if I had wrestled him for it was the same night that I wrestled Burtubise in Peterborough. However, Mr. Graham has kindly given me him the chance he brags he has been wanting, and I guess we shall be there to participate in the fireworks. He will be like his one famous remark, after Gotch got through with him. He will have a hazy notion that he has been in a wrestling match if anything worse. I am in fine shape, better than when I wrestled Stahl and Young Hack will have to travel to keep up with me. It is certainly going to be the real thing.

Fowl Supper at All Saints' Church a Great Success

The annual fowl supper given by the ladies of All Saints' church last night was a decided success. The tables were laid in the basement, and as popular has this affair become, that there is not nearly enough room to accommodate the diners. Three long tables were spread and these were filled several times between the hours of six and eight o'clock, and the several hundred people who enjoyed the supper were delighted with the menu and the service. The ladies deserve great credit for the successful manner in which they handled the affair, and they are entitled to the large revenue which they received as a result of their efforts.

After the supper was served, an impromptu program was rendered in the church, and included the following numbers;

Miss Reeder sang very sweetly, "The Lord's my Shepherd."

Mr. Gordon Wright was in fine voice, and sang very well, "The Flight of Ages."

Mr. James Brown, a popular singer, rendered "Two Cities."

Mr. J. M. Johnston, baritone, sang very well. "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

Mr. Beers gave a recitation.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus s on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

TAFT OR YRAN

After the conventions of the two leading parties had made their nominations The Times expressed the opinion that both the Republicans and the Democrats had put their best foot foward —had selected their strongest standard bearers to head their respective tickets. Judge Taft, to any candid mind, certainly appeared to be the fittest and most logical candidate for the presidency on the Republican side. His distinguished record, his acknowledged ability and rectitude, his candor and fairness, and his sympathy with the progressive movements within his party would have dictated his nomination if the President had not expressed himself by a word or sign in his favor.

Mr. Bryan, on the other hand, was the equally natural, almost the inevitable, nominee of the Democrats. He owed his wonderful popularity in and outside the convention to his eloquent and effective advocacy of political and social reform, to his earnestness, his dignity and good temper in defeat, his many attractive personal qualities.

The campaign is nearing its close. It has not been necessary to revise our early estimates of the leading candidates. Judge Taft has made a splendid impression by his speeches and arguments, and has confirmed the high opinion which not only his friends but his honorable opponents had formed of his mind and character. Mr. Bryan, surpassing himself, has made an extraordinarily brilliant canvas and has astonished even his intimate associates by his vigor, his enthusiasm and his adroitness.

Not which of these two progressive and able candidates is entitled to the preference of independent voters? Which excels in those special qualifications which the might, the position, the responsibilities of the United States and the power and influence of the chief executive demand of the presidential candidate?

The people are committed to the essential policies of the Roosevelt regime, and no backward step is possible. The war on corporate and political abuses must go on, but it must be directed judiciously, in a spirit of construction and evolutionary progress. Judge Taft is pledged to maintain and "clinch" accomplished reforms and to extend them gradually without undue haste or unnecessary disturbance of industry and commerce. His election would make for more rapid recovery, for a sense of confidence and security, for faith in the future of the country. There would be no fear of excessive radicalism and consequent reaction.

A Lesson to Others

A much-needed lesson was taught a fence-fighter in Hamilton, who showed too much sympathy with a law-breaking who supplied him with the goods. A man who had been put on the Indian list was found to have obtained liquor and was arrested. On being interrogated as to the source of his supply he refused to give the information, and was sent to jail. Those on the Indian list should not forget that the law is very clear on this point and that the magistrate is required to commit them to prison if they refused to divulge the name of the person who supplies them with liquor.

United States Elections are Very Doubtful

New York, Oct. 27.—Although the campaign will end in a few days, there is no betting, genuine or otherwise, here or elsewhere, on the result of the elections, national, state or local, so far as can be learned. Of course, under the gambling laws of this state, New York betting men are not eager to lay odds openly, but at the gathering places of the politicians, it appears they have not been even any offers of bets among friends worth recording. Reports from other States, where gamblers or occasional bettors are not troubled by strict laws, indicate a similar condition. The explanation is, according to old-timers, at the Hoffman House, that men who have money to risk on the result of the elections, are awaiting developments.

An agent of a stock brokerage firm which formerly conducted a sort of election betting headquarters at the Hoffman House, in campaigns, covered the situation when he said:

"There may be some tall betting during the last few days before election, but even the most reckless gamblers would not care to take risks just now. I have never observed a presidential campaign like this one, I is a complete mix up. When Taft and Bryan were nominated, it looked as if a two to one bet on Taft would be a good thing. So many remarkable things have occurred since the nominations, however, that I have advised my friends to proceed cautiously. Personally, I believe that Taft will carry New York, and the former pivotal states, including Indiana, but what about the West, especially the Northwestern states? Things seem to be in a state of upheaval out there, and the wise man keeps his money in his pocket.

"As to the New York State election, the big betters, book-makers, and others are waiting. Of course, they are all, or nearly all, opposed to Hughes. But when it comes to putting up their money on election results, they are not guided by sentiment or political affiliations, or by anything else, except a desire to win. They are looking over the field, just as they look over the prospects of the various horses in a race before laying odds. The fact that Hughes appears to be the favorite in the Gubernatorial race is not enough for them. They consider that Hughes was forced on the Republican bosses, and are calculating what effect this may have on election day. It is the same as when they are figuring out the chances of a favorite in a horse race. They consider not only previous performances but also possible track conditions and other points about which the general public is thoughtless."

The political managers of both sides appear to be as conservative as the betting man. No doubled claims are given out now. A few weeks ago Chairman Hitchcock, of the Republican National Committee, gave out a list of States which, he said, Taft would carry. About the same time, Chairman Mack, of the Democratic National Committee, asserted, in his exuberant way, that Bryan would make a clean sweep of the country. Since then both of the chairmen have stopped "claiming" and have settled down to hard campaign work. They seem to have come to the conclusion that this is not a year for walk-overs, and that election results will depend largely on what may happen in the last week.

Not only has there been no up-town betting this year to talk about, but there has been no Wall Street curb betting. The latter has been presumed to be more genuine than the political headquarters wagering, and it is a tradition that the curb market odds have never been wrong at the finish. Even in 1888, although Cleveland was the favorite throughout September, as 10 to 8, the odds changed to 10 to 9 on Harrison in October. In 1896 they were 4 to 1 on McKinley just before election. In 1904 they were 3 to 1 on Roosevelt early in October and rose as 8 to 1 on the day before election.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy,—and with amazing success. Rub-outs, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by means of the blood from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an out of the way thing, to tell the risk of a way to

CANADA'S ELEVATORS.

Dominion Boasts the Largest One in the World To-day.

As a necessary complement to the building of a great fresh water marine Canadian shipping interests required grain elevators and within the past decade and a half, the most modern plants in the world have sprung into existence at lake ports north of the international boundary.

Canada is in the grain-growing business, and in the grain-moving business now with a vengeance. Since the impulse of national expansion thrilled the country and brought great enterprises into being, $23,000,000 has been invested by Canadians in great buildings for the lifting, forwarding and storage of grain.

The story reads romance into a prosaic subject, for no healthy Canadian can fail to feel the thrill of national spirit when he is told that this country has the largest grain elevator in the world. At the head of the great lakes are Canadian elevators which can spill fifty thousand bushels of wheat into a big lake steamer in less than an hour. At Georgian Bay are great modern steel tank receiving elevators, which can unload 30,000 bushels of grain an hour from a vessel's hold and at the same moment be filling a train of cars on the other side for quick despatch to the seaboard.

Become [illegible] are hundreds of young men who marveled at the elevators which stood at Owen Sound, Midland, Prescott, Kingston, Collingwood and a few other ports fifteen years ago.

One great modern Canadian elevator can hold more wheat than all these little buildings of a past decade combined. They are insignificant today in the light of a great nation's larger needs.

MACKENZIE'S LETTERS.

Interesting Correspondence Presented to Ontario Archives.

Through the kindness of Dr. A. B. Cook, Alexander Fraser, provincial archivist, has received a couple of interesting letters written by William Lyon Mackenzie to Col. Carroll of Norwich.

Dr. Cook obtained the letters for the archives from Miss Caroline Carroll, daughter of Col. Carroll, and now the sole survivor of the family. Col. Carroll was one of Mr. Mackenzie's most intimate friends and sympathisers. On the eve of the outbreak north of Toronto, Mr. Mackenzie went out to Col. Carroll's house, then in Toronto Township, and requested his active assistance. The colonel point blank refused, stating that while he was in full sympathy with the demand made for constitutional changes, he deprecated violent measures and that if he took part at all in the rising, it would be as an officer of militia and against his friend.

After Mackenzie's flight he was befriended and hidden for some days by Mr. Holcombe in Pelham Township on the Niagara frontier, until he was safely conducted across the river. Mr. Holcombe was an intimate friend of Dr. Cook's, and in after years gave him minute particulars of Mackenzie's escape, which the doctor is drawing up into a statement for the archives of the province.

After Mr. Mackenzie was pardoned and entered into public life once again, his intimate relationship with Col. Carroll was resumed and the letters now presented to the archives deal with political matters in which Hincks and his supporters figure.

A Laurier Story.

During the royal tour of the heir apparent in 1901, Sir Wilfrid was obliged to turn down over-zealous admirers who sought to make his progress across Canada in the entourage of the Prince of Wales a sort of joint affair.

The royal train ran in two sections. The first, which ran half an hour ahead of the second, carried detectives, correspondents, Sir Wilfrid, and the Rideau Hall party. Going down through Northern Manitoba, en route to Toronto, the first section stopped for half an hour at one point to take in water and to have the wheels tapped. The local Liberal association was promptly on hand with an address in honor of Sir Wilfrid, placing him in a very awkward situation. It would have been a gross breach of etiquette for him, as a subsidiary personage in the vast machinery of the British Empire, to accept an address on a tour in honor of the heir apparent. At the risk of offending the delegation which had planned this foolish political display, he sent them about their business, informing them that he was merely a private individual on this tour, and that honors were reserved for the prince.

Canada, and something to criticise. R. B. Craig declares the Quebec farmers to be conservative and interesting, but the worst farmers in the Dominion, while regarding Ontario farmers, he observes a Buchan man would eat more thistles with less dash. There is plenty of room in Ontario for men with capital, though land is not cheap, he says, and points out that a quantity of land is wasted in New Brunswick and Quebec for want of sheep, because each man must keep a useless dog. Agricultural colleges are the objects of warmest appreciation.

Model of Old Quebec.

Among the recent additions to the objects of interest in the archives branch is a complete model of old Quebec City, which was sent one hundred years ago to the British Government by Colonel By, the founder of Ottawa.

The model was sent probably for military purposes and has been in Woolwich arsenal since. Dr. Doughty has succeeded in securing it and it will repose in the capital hereafter.

Wolfe's chair, which was donated by the Prince of Wales, was another interesting historical relic now in the archives' branch.

shd the fire having died down for lack of fuel the interior of the shack was so dark that he could see only her gesture. He thought her alone and frightened.

"Have no fear, daughter," he begged. "I will go somewhere else. But the ice is so"—

His gentle address surprised and disarmed her. She advanced reluctingly as her father came up behind.

"W'y—a stranger!" cried the section boss.

She stopped him. "Yes, but we wouldn't turn a dog away tonight, dad." She motioned David Bond to enter.

As he crossed the sill Dallas for the first time caught a glimpse of the white horse and the pung and saw Squaw Charley lifting his load of chips from the wagon box.

"You came together!" she asked.

"Charley pointed out your house to me," was the answer.

A sudden hope came to her. "Maybe I made a mistake," she said. "Tell me, who are you?"

"David Bond—an evangelist by the grace of God."

She lifted the lantern so that he could see the others. "My father and my sister," she said. Then she put the light on the table, retired to a corner and suddenly sank down.

Squaw Charley, having brought in and emptied the sack and blanket, fed the blaze and crouched at one side of the fireplace. Evan and Marylyn were across from him, intently examining the features and dress of the traveler. It was Dallas who, ceased yet shaken, remembered to be hospitable.

"Come, Charley," she said, rising, "we'll put the horse up. No, no," as their guest would have accompanied her, "we won't need help. The mules are used to Charley now and Simon's pretty ugly to strangers." She started out. "Maryiyn," she said from the door, "you take Mr. Bond's coat." Then, to the evangelist, "I'm glad it's you and not—somebody—else." A rare smile crossed her face.

The aged man, divested of his fur ulster, advanced and with fatherly tenderness lightly touched her braids.

"'I was a stranger and ye took me in,'" he quoted solemnly.

Dallas lingered a moment, arrested by the picture. Lancaster was leaning forward from his seat in unaccustomed silence. Maryiyn sat beside him, the cubis thrown across her arm. Nearer was the Indian, his copper colored face marvelously softened, and, before them all stood the evangelist, priestly, patriarchal.

When Dallas and Squaw Charley were gone the section boss and his younger daughter were for a space tongue tied through a lack of something to say. Soon, however, David Bond broke the quiet to assure Lancaster of his gratitude. And thereafter the two men talked freely.

"You need not fear any trouble with my horse," the evangelist said as Dallas was heard bidding Simon keep to his side of the stall. "Shadrach is a gentle beast."

At the name the section boss cocked his head like an inquiring bird. "M-m, Shadrach," he began in important reflection. "I' call y' boss Shadrach. Ah seem t' hev heerd that name before."

Maryiyn raised to her father a quick, warning finger. "It's in the Bible, pa," she whispered.

"Hen?"

"It's in the Bible."

"Don' y' think Ah know?" Evan poked the fire cheerfully. He was fairly started in a conversation. "Thet Shadrach was a prophet, of Ah recall it jes' right," he said tentatively.

The evangelist shot him a sorrowful glance.

"No, pa," whispered Maryiyn again. "He was put in a furnace. Remember the furnace, pa?"

"With th' lions!" cried the section boss. "Certainly Ah do."

"Oh, pa, that isn't the story!"

Evan stroked his mustache. "Ah'm kinda offen th' trail, honey, ain't Ah?" he said aside. Then, to cover his mistake and forestall any embarrassing explanation, he poked the fire again and resolutely began, "Paheon, how 'd y' come t' name you' boss Shadrach?"

"He had been christened Spooks," began the evangelist, as if repeating an oft told tale, "because his last owner mistook him one night for a ghost. I could not bear to call the faithful animal by that name and day after day thought over all the names I had ever heard, striving to find one suitable. That summer something happened that decided for me. Spooks and I awoke to find ourselves surrounded by a prairie fire. And I, having hitched up and then got down into the bottom of the wagon, my good horse was forced to meet the wall of flame alone. He came out unscorched. I knew at once what his name should be. Henceforth I called him Shadrach."

The light of returning knowledge—of blessed total recall—illumined the face of the listening section boss. He gave the fire a glad poke that sent the burning chips to every side, thrust out his chest proudly and pinned the other with a triumphant eye. "Waal, how 'bout Mehach and Abednego?" he demanded.

David Bond studied a moment, knitting his brows until their heavy arches met in a single hoary line. "I take their place," he said at last, with dignity.

Following supper, which Dallas prepared, all gathered before the cheery blaze. There the evangelist, anxious over the welfare of the people among whom he had preached and taught, promptly began to question Squaw Charley.

"You have not told me of your capture," he said, "or of the fight that came before it. How did you learn of the north—in the country of the White Mother—or in Dakota?"

The Indian nodded.

"Dakota?"

Swiftly the pariah's whole aspect altered. A moment before, satisfied as to food, happy and comfortable, he had squatted down in his blanket. But now, his shoulders bent, his chin sank to his breast, his eyes grew dull and sullen.

"Were you in the Mauvaises Terres?" queried the evangelist.

Squaw Charley shook his head.

"On the Powder?"

There was a silent assent.

"The soldiers pursued. Maybe they surprised you—which?"

To answer the Indian rose slowly. With one of Lancaster's crutches he raked out some ashes and leveled them upon the hearthstones. Next, across them, stooping and using a finger, he drew a varying line that showed the trend of a stream. Far up toward its source, in a bend, he placed bits of bread from the table to indicate the lodges of his tribesmen. Slivers from a stick showed that the tepees had been set thickly in a grove of tall cottonwoods. White beans, from a filled pan on the floor near by him, stood for the warriors that had fought. His fingers moved more quickly as by means of a handful of corn that Dallas had put in his leather pouch he planted the United States troops on three sides of the Indian campground and moved them forward to the attack.

Adroitly he maneuvered the opposing forces, with advancing here and retreating there, groans when the white men felt the fight too keenly, low whoops to picture an Indian gain, little puffs of the breath to betoken flying bullets. The onlookers saw the battle as it raged about the tepees. And the flickering lantern, as Squaw Charley moved it in a semicircle, told them that the firing began at daybreak and continued until dark.

THE ACT OF DYING.

Reasons For Believing That It Is an Easy Matter.

The mere ultimate process of dying may be a relatively easy matter. Any person who has been long ill probably suffers more on any given day of his life than he will suffer in the act of departing from his body. It is probable that a broken bone, a delirious fever, a disordered vital organ, may cause more anguish than the final struggle. I have my doubts whether the last pang is as bad as it seems, declares Elizabeth Stuart Phelps in Harper's Bazar. We are told by surgeons that chloroformed patients may give apparent evidence of acute agonies which they do not feel. Death itself is often an anaesthetic so merciful that what people call "living trouble" is obviously a worse matter.

I, for instance, who have never fainted and never been anaesthetized in my life, have twice become from serious causes unconscious for a short time, and I have often wished that I could make over to some recoiling soul whose name has been heard ringing upon the last roll call the unspeakable comfort which that brief experience has given me. There was no pang, no terror, no time, no chance, for either. One seemed to glide gently and swiftly down a warm abyss, flower scented, grass grown, safe and beneficent, into unutterable content. One melted into peace. One drifted into ecstasy beside which the deepest joys of consciousness are poor, pale things.

If one in truth should evade the body in such a moment, death would stand chosen as the supreme delight of living.

HIS THREE WIVES.

They Were All in One Picture, but Did Not Stay There.

Allan Cunningham in his "Lives of British Painters" tells a story of Copley, the father of Lord Chancellor Lyndhurst, which reveals what a portrait painter endures from the vanity and eccentricity of his sitters.

A certain man had himself, his wife and seven children painted by Copley in a family piece.

"It wants but one thing," said the man on seeing the finished picture, "and that is the portrait of my first wife. This one is my second."

"But," replied the artist, "she is dead. What can I do? She must come in as an angel."

"Oh, no; no angels for me. She must come in as a woman."

The portrait was added, but several months elapsed before the man again called at Copley's studio, and when he did a strange lady held on to his arm.

"I must have another sketch from your hand, Copley," said he. "An accident befell my second wife. This lady is my third, and she has come to have her likeness included in the family picture."

The painter introduced the likeness of wife No. 3, and the man expressed himself satisfied with the portraits of his three spouses. But the lady remonstrated. Never was such a thing heard of. Her predecessors must go. The artist painted them out. Then the man disputed the price. Copley sued him, and his son, the future Lord Lyndhurst, signalized his call to the bar by gaining his father's cause.

A Bad Dream.

It is not likely that any English speaking people understand so keen and punctilious a devotion to the niceties of language as that which characterizes the French grammarians. We may help ourselves to understand it perhaps by reading a story told of M. Lamenty.

One night he awoke and sprang out of bed with a wild cry. His wife came running. He was in alarm and de-

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a special mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, comes supplying excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

Synopsis of Canadian North west HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the District of such intention.

Why, what is the matter?" she gasped.

"I dreamed," said the professor. "Oh, I had a horrible, a heartrending dream!"

"What was it?"

"I dreamed I was talking, and I distinctly heard myself utter a sentence which had a grammatical error in it!"

Couldn't Miss the Chance.

One scarcely looks for humor in an undertaker, but that this, like most rules, has its exceptions was proved recently in Scotland. A tract distributer had affixed this text to a tree on the highroad, "It is appointed to man once to die." This was too good an opportunity to be missed by the local purveyor of coffins, who promptly added the following announcement: "Funerals economically furnished by Blank."

Honor.

"What they call 'honor' is a mighty curious thing," observed Uncle Jerry Peebles. "I know a man who would cheerfully starve himself to pay a gamblin' debt, and he still owes the preacher that married him twenty-seven years ago."

Art in the Soup.

The artist's wife leaned over and looked at her husband's soup after she had handed it to him.

"Oh," she cried, "look at the scroll the fat has made in your soup. Isn't it artistic? Don't eat it. It is so beautiful."

Forced Economy.

"Poor Tom, it cost him a terrible lot to give up his sweetheart."

"Then why did he?"

"Because it would have cost him a great deal more if he hadn't."—London Tatler.

You have only got to owe a man money to appreciate what a small place the world is.—Lippin Weekly.

Royal Chickens of Japan.

"The most beautiful and extraordinary chickens in the world are those bred by the royal family of Japan, the privilege of raising them not being accorded to any of the mikado's subjects," said Mr. L. J. De Courcey of Yokohama. "These chickens are celebrated for the wonderful growth of their tailfeathers, a full grown rooster's tail often reaching a length of twenty feet. The tail is of a lovely deep blue shade, while the body is buff, and about the neck is a white ring. A pair of these chickens has been known to sell to a wealthy Englishman for $1,000 on condition that he would take them out of the country.

"I believe that ere long the species will entirely disappear, as I heard before leaving Japan that it was the intention of his majesty to cease their breeding."—Baltimore American.

Reforming the Head Hunters.

A curious development is in steady progress in the Solomon islands, the group in the south Pacific which lies to the west of New Guinea, whose people have earned such unenviable notoriety as head hunters. The young men of the tribes in these fertile and beautiful islands are abandoning the historic pursuit which has made them dreaded for centuries in the south seas and are taking to the copra industry. Copra, which is the dried interior of the cocoanut, is valued commercially for the oil which can be pressed from it, and some of the young Solomon islanders are accumulating considerable wealth by extracting it, though the older generation, to whom head hunting is still the only profession for a gentleman, are said to look down upon them as being "in trade."

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

Weary, Worn Out, Tired

If You Feel Poorly, Use Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys, fail to work properly, health surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton, of Lewistown. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depression, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned off the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvelous, I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

Medical Association

The Medical Association meeting called for last night, was postponed until next Wednesday night.

Demand for Flowers

The green house at Little Lake cemetery is being enlarged. A building permit has been taken out for an enlargement to cost $200. The demand for flowers has greatly increased the past couple of years, and the green house has had to be enlarged several times.

Of Special Interest

Owing to the large number attending this meeting in George street Methodist church last night, and the most interesting address of Mrs. Barney, prison evangelist, the meeting which was to have been held in the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at four o'clock will be held in George street Methodist church.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Mr. A. J. Bolwell, who has been connected with the news room of the Examiner office for the past couple of years, leaves this morning to accept a position in Barrie. His many friends here will be sorry to see him go.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Harry, will sympathize with them in the loss of their infant daughter, Verna May, who passed away last night at the age of five months. The funeral will be held this morning, and the remains will be taken to Brooklyn, Ont., on the noon train for interment.

Obituary

PATRICK O'CONNOR.

The death occurred Wednesday evening at St. Joseph's hospital, of Patrick O'Connor, one of the best known and highly respected residents of Ennismore after an illness of only a week's duration.

The deceased was 76 years of age and was born in Ireland, coming to this country sixty years ago and settled in Ennismore. Thirty-three years ago he was married to Hannah Congreve, who survives him.

Besides his wife, two sons and two daughters are left to mourn his loss. The sons are Maurice, residing in the States and John at home. The daughters are Misses Mary of Ennismore, and Lillian of Saginaw, Mich. Three brothers and one sister also survive him. The brothers are Maurice, and Cornelius of Ennismore, and James of Downeyville. The sister is Mrs. John Scollard of Ennismore.

The funeral will take place this morning to St. Martin's church and thence to St. Martin's cemetery.

LORNE SPILSBURY HILLIER.

A very sad death occurred Wednesday afternoon, when after a short illness of rheumatism of the heart, Lorne Spilsbury, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hillier, and grandson of Mrs. W. Spilsbury, Perry street, passed away, at the age of 7 years and 9 months. The funeral which will be private, will be held this afternoon at 2.30 from the residence of the deceased's grandmother, Mrs. W. Spilsbury, 257 Perry street.

Funeral of Late Mrs. Adam

The funeral of the late Mrs Adam took place yesterday afternoon from the home of her brother, Mr. E. M. Elliott, Manning avenue. Interment took place at the Little Lake cemetery. Many friends of the deceased attended the last ceremony over the remains of one who was highly respected by all.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed plain in English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging-down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examination by the local specialists of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not dissolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this remedy of [illegible] composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

Funeral of the Late John Miller

The funeral of the late John Miller, who died on Tuesday night, was held from his late residence at 188 Dublin street yesterday afternoon, and interment took place at the Little Lake cemetery. A large number of citizens gathered at the house and paid their last respects to an old resident whose figure in the city was familiar for many years. In respect to his long connection with the 57th Regimental Band, the band attended the funeral, and headed the solemn procession to the cemetery.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all druggists.

NEW MEMBERS

Norfolk; and E. D. Smith, of Wentworth.

The Liberals in Ontario who went down to defeat were: A. E. Dyment, in East Algoma; W. P. Telford, in North Grey; Adam Zimmerman, in West Hamilton; T. B. Caldwell, in North Lanark; G. D. Grant, in North Ontario; R. J. Watson, in Parry Sound; and P. D. McLean, in Centre York.

The Conservatives defeated were: W. F. Cockshutt, in Brantford; R. A. Pringle, in Cornwall and Stormont; M. Avery, in Frontenac; H. S. Clements, in West Kent; Peter Christie, in South Ontario; A. F. McLean, in North Perth; G. O. Alcorn, in Prince Edward; W. H. Bennett, in East Simcoe; A. E. Kemp, in East Toronto.

In Quebec three Liberals did not seek re-nomination, viz., J. E. Archambault, in Berthier; J. A. Rousseau, in Champlain; and C. H. Parmelee, in Shefford.

One Conservative, J. B. Morin, did not seek re-election.

The Liberal ex-members defeated in Quebec, are: William Power, in Quebec West; Dr. Bourbonnais, in Soulanges; Dr. Desjardins, in Terrebonne and J. C. Walsh, in Montreal, St. Ann's.

The Conservatives who went down to defeat in Quebec are: J. G. H. Bergeron, in Beauharnois; R. N. Walsh, in Huntingdon; J. E. E. Leonard, in Laval; G. H. Brabazon, in Pontiac.

In addition, Armand Lavergne, who sat in the late Parliament, has disappeared by resignation.

In Nova Scotia, the Liberals who retired were: A. C. Ross, in Cape Breton North; H. J. Logan, in Cumberland; and Duncan Finlayson, in Richmond. Dr. McLennan died just before nomination, and four Liberals were defeated at the polls on Monday, viz.: Alex. Johnstone, in Cape Breton South; A. J. Copp, in Digby; William Roche and M. Carney, in Halifax.

In New Brunswick three familiar Conservatives will disappear by the defeat of Mr. Ganong, in Charlotte; of G. W. Fowler, in King's-Albert; and of R. D. Wilmot, in Sunbury and Queen's.

Prince Edward Island has sent an entirely new body of men to Parliament, and consequently J. J. Hughes, Liberal; A. A. Lefurgey, Angus Macleod, and Alex. Martin, Conservatives, have gone.

The West has also contributed its quota to the passing of old familiar faces.

T. A. Burrows, Liberal, of Dauphin, has gone to defeat; Thomas Greenway has gone by retirement; John Crawford, Liberal, has gone by defeat; and J. E. Cyr and D. W. Bole have both retired.

All the old members from what are now Alberta and Saskatchewan come back, but in British Columbia, Hon. William Templeman is defeated; and Messrs. J. D. Kennedy, of New Westminster, and R. G. Macpherson, of Vancouver, saw what was coming and retired before the battle.

"Daniel O'Connel" The Subject of Fine Address

St. Peter's Hall, at St Peter's new Separate school, was well filled last night when Mr. C J. Foy of Perth, was present and delivered a splendid address on Hibernianism The visit of Mr. Foy was under the auspices of the local lodge in connection with the A.O.H. The address was very interesting and will no doubt be of much benefit to the local Hibernians.

The subject of Mr Foy's address was Daniel O'Connell, the Irish liberator and who secured a seat in the British Parliament against all kinds of opposition

At the conclusion of the address a vote of thanks was moved by Rev. Father McCoil and Daniel O'Connell and was carried unanimously. Those who also assisted in the program were;

Miss Annie White, who gave a recitation, and Mr. Chambers rendered a solo in splendid voice. The chair was taken by Rev. Father Kelly.

Much Interest in Mrs. Barney's Work in Prisons

There was another large attendance at the George street Methodist church yesterday afternoon to hear Mrs. Barney give her address on Incidents connected with her own work in the penitentiaries, and her experiences are indeed creditable to her work, and she deeply impressed her audience with the importance of the success of this work. Mrs Barney has aroused great interested in this city in sending the gospel to convicts in the jails and prisons.

Canadian Immigration

Ottawa, Oct. 31.—The total immigration into Canada for September was 10,997, as compared with 19,057 for the same month last year, a decrease of 47 per cent. From January 1, until the end of September, the arrivals via ocean ports were 31,977, as compared with 191,020 for the same period of last year, a decrease of 109,043, or 57 per cent. The immigration for the nine months of this year from the United States was 45,658, as compared with 44,309 for the same period last year, an increase of 344 or 2 per cent. The total immigration into Canada from all quarters for the first nine months of this year was 127,690.

"G.T.P. WILL BE FINISHED IN 1911"

Says Chas. M. HAYS

(Special to The Times)

Montreal, Oct. 30.—General Manager Chas M Hays of the Grand Trunk Pacific, has just returned from an extensive tour over all the sections of the prairie and coast part of the new railway. He said that he felt quite safe in making the statement that there would be no difficulties arise in the engineering and, the financing of the road that would prevent it being completed from end to end by December 1911 One has only to read, he added, the reports of the government engineers to realize what a magnificent road bed is being secured and how favorable the grades and curves were all along the line. He stated that the regular trains would be put on between Port Arthur and Edmonton next spring, when another one hundred miles would be built east of the coast section of one hundred and ten miles, and also 200 miles west of Wolfe Creek would also be completed, leaving only 40 0miles yet to be placed under contract.

FINEST PORT.

Prince Rupert, said Mr. C M. Hays, will make one of the finest ports on the Pacific coast. He has just concluded arrangements with the British Columbia Government to spend the sum of $200,000 at that point.

Although the regular trains have not yet been put on between Winnipeg and Wainwright, the company are doing all that is possible to assist the new settlers, and new towns are springing up all along the line.

The rumors that have been current for some time as to the possibility of great changes being made in the near future, was referred to, but Mr. Hay said, "I have stated to all who have questioned me along these lines that as the reference to changes were made for political purposes and as a railway man I am not in politics. I have always declined to discuss them. They are merely a rehash of four years ago, and no more good can result from a discussion now than did at that time.

The company has secured a charter to build a line to Vancouver and that will be constructed in due time. The company has also decided to build a branch line to Montreal, as it is altogether out of the question to give this city the go by.

Winnipeg in Mourning, Hon. Thos. Greenway Dead

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 30.—The news of the death of Hon Thomas Greenway, was received in this city with general sincere and profound regret. This feeling was not confined to political or personal friends. All who learned of the passing away of the man who so long and so ably guided the destinies of this great province were saddened by the news. Flags on public buildings throughout the city are flying at half mast, among them being the legislative buildings and the city hall.

Probably the deepest regret is that felt by the political veterans of the province who were associated with him during the stirring times of political evolution, and who were sincere admirers of the late Hon Thomas Green way. The supporters of his government during his long term of office felt a shock at the death of their late chieftain.

Summers Robbed Wealthy Homes

(Special to The Times.)

New York, Oct. 30.—In the arrest of James Summers, who claimed to be from wealthy English parentage, the police believe they have the robber of the home of Mrs. A G. Adam of New Rochelle. The theft took place yesterday when the burglar bound and gagged Mrs. Adam and then looted the house. The detectives state that he has confessed to a similar crime on King street in September.

Unrest in India Due to Industrial Evolution

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—The work of foreign missions was discussed at the convention of the Baptist Union of Ontario and Quebec this afternoon and evening. The foreign fields receiving attention from this body are India and Bolivia. Last year the largest contingent of missionaries ever sent out by the Baptist Church went to India from Canada.

The existing conditions in India were described as causing great anxiety to the British Government. During the year there was widespread discord and murmurings in the country against the government, with serious riots and a general state of unrest. The discovery of a bomb factory in Calcutta, led to a confession of a rapidly developing plot to create an uprising against the British Government. But owing to prompt and severe action upon the part of officials a better state of things is already existing.

CAUSES OF UNREST

As to the causes of unrest the chief blame is contributed to the industrial evolution in progress in the country, and this evolution had pushed many castes to the wall and reduced many to poverty. It was stated that the missionaries' efforts was to dissolve the caste conditions and these were bearing fruit.

During the year 509 persons were admitted to the church through baptism, bringing the total membership up to 5093.

James Connolly Shot and Killed by Accidental Discharge of a Rifle

(Special to The Times.)

Guelph, Oct. 30.—Shot in the eye by the accidental discharge of 22 calibre rifle in the hands of his 15-year-old companion, Harry Scarlet, of Queen street, James Connolly of Grove street, died almost instantly at 5.30 o'clock this afternoon in the famous Tennora cut on the G.T.R. about two miles from the city. The victim was 18 years of age and was an employe at Taylor-Forbes works.

Accompanied by Harry Scarlet and young Jennings of Duke street, the deceased went out for a half a day's sport. Connolly was armed with a 32 calibre revolver of his own while young Scarlett had a 22 calibre rifle which he had rented from a Quebec street store.

The boys were just crossing the cut when the accident happened. Connelly was ahead and was sitting on the top of the steep embankment waiting for his companions to climb up when Scarlet fell and the rifle was discharged. With one cry of pain Connelly fell back. The boys hurried to a neighboring farm where they secured a rig and were driven to the city where they notified a doctor and the police. Sergeant Ackby and High County Constable Merriweather boarded a freight train and hurried to the scene, but on their arrival the lad had passed away. The remains were taken to the home of the boy's parents on Grove street.

Collected $225 from Americans

(Special to The Times.)

Gananoque, Oct. 30.—Geo. Toner, game and fish warden, has this week collected $225 from Americans duck hunting on the St. Lawrence, this sum being the license fee of nine American hunters at $25 each. In previous years there has been no patrol on the St. Lawrence, and American hunters were at liberty to shoot as many ducks as they pleas d without paying any fees. In future the wild ducks on the St. Lawrence will either have a more peaceful time or will furnish a revenue to the province.

Fifteen Years for Doctor Geoffrin

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Oct. 30.—Fifteen years in prison for an unspeakable crime was the sentence handed out this afternoon to Dr. J. W. Geoffrion, once a prominent physician in this city. He was at the head of an organization known as the Mange Le Ligne Club, which was probably one of the most infamous organizations ever known on this continent. There were upwards of 30 men members and young boys were being taken in constantly. When the exposure came most of the men fled the country, but five were caught, and convicted They will be sentenced tomorrow.

Yankee Rogers Won from Hackenschmidt Last Night Took the Last Two Falls

Yankee Rogers won his wrestling match last night in Buck street rink with Young Hackenschmidt of New York, after 2 1-2 minutes of the cleverest and fastest wrestling ever seen in Peterborough. "Buck" gave the big Yank an awful battle, and for a while it looked as if Manager Naylor's protege was about to bite the dust, at which the crowd would have been supremely delighted as Buck was a prime favorite from the start. The New Yorker took the first fall in 18 minutes, but Rogers came back at him with a fall in 2 1-2 minutes, and the second in seven minutes.

Hackenschmidt gave the crowd an exhibition of speed such as had never been seen here before. He was like a flash of lightning, and moved around Yankee so fast that Rogers was nonplussed. During the first bout he had Rogers on the defensive for the greater part of the time and his quick movements had the Yank on the run.

When on the defensive Buck showed that he had the science of the game at his finger ends and forestalled Rogers's methods with lightning speed, spinning away from him and dodging cleverely at critical moments. Rogers's weight and strength however proved too much for him in the end.

Asst. Fire Chief Taylor was referee and gave satisfaction.

When the men were introduced by Announcer Lynch it was seen that Yankee was much the heavier, Buck however, went at him from the start, and soon had him in difficulties. The bout was fast and comparatively clean with both men working at top speed, but with the advantage with Buck. Breaking away from a leg nelson he doubled on Rogers with a scissors and arm hold, getting the fall in 18 minutes.

When they came back the men mixed it up well but Roger's strength began to tell. Buck spun away from several dangerous holds, but he finally had to succumb to an arm lock in 3 1-2 minutes.

The final fall was secured by Rogers in seven minutes after Buck had had him in close quarters on several occasions. Buck doubled once with a waist and arm hold, but Rogers came back with it, and pinned his shoulders to the mat.

A. C. Yokome won the first preliminary from Landry, after an interesting "go." He was on the aggressive all the time, and secured the first fall in eight minutes with a full nelson and the second in 11-2 minutes with a wrist lock.

Ned Fitzpatrick and Jack Wilson had a lively match that enthused the crowd. Fitz had undertaken to throw Wilson twice in fifteen minutes. He succeeded in getting the first on a quick roll. The second bout produced ten minutes of fine wrestling. Fitz finally secured a full nelson and scissors hold, and Wilson had to give in.

Hackenschmidt refereed the preliminary bouts satisfactorily.

It was a great night's sport, and it was unfortunate that the crowd was only fairly large.

Negro Electrocuted Attempted Assault

(Special to The Times.)

Richmond, Va., Oct 30.— Winston Green, a negro youth, was electrocuted here today in the state prison for an attempted criminal assault on a white girl. John Finny, another negro, who was charged with a similar offence, had his sentence changed by the governor to imprisonment for life, owing to his being feeble-minded.

Denies that Rockfeller is a Republican

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, Oct. 30.—The White House officially denies that Mr John D. Rockefeller, is a Republican supporter, and they say it is only a scheme to injure the Republican party.

The corner stone of the new St. George's church at Gore's Landing, was laid Wednesday by Rt. Rev. Dr. Reeve, Assistant Bishop of Toronto.

Shot Himself in London Hotel

London, Oct. 30.—Frederic Morganthaler, a native of Switzerland, who, in company with John Watson, an Englishman, came here Wednesday, shot himself in the head in the lavatory of the City Hotel this morning shortly after nine o'clock. He will live.

Morganthaler, according to Watson, has a wife and daughter coming to join him from Switzerland, and who are now on their way. The two men came here from Hamilton Wednesday morning, where Morganthaler has an aunt at 243 East avenue north. Both men are tailors, and started to work yesterday with one of the leading establishments of the city, but did not turn up for work this morning. Watson can give no possible reason for the rash act of his friend. They came into the hotel at nine o'clock, and ordered up a glass of beer each. After chatting with the bar-tender for a couple of moments, Morganthaler went into the lavatory, leaving Watson leaning on the bar. Two minutes later they heard a shot, and, rushing in, found Morganthaler lying on his back, with a 32 calibre Smith and Wesson revolver in his hand. He was not dead, and will likely live, as the bullet did not touch a vital section on its journey through his skull.

He is 34 years of age. Both he and Watson are well dressed.

Girl from Peterboro Found Dead in Woods

Madoc, Oct. 29.—On Sunday morning last while a young man was walking through the woods in the vicinity of Mr. Willard Rupert's house, north of Eldorado, he was horrified by coming upon the body of a young girl, who had evidently been dead for some time. He at once notified Mr. Rupert, who recognized the body as that of a young orphan girl named Edith Nicholls, who had been at his place for some time. He had notified the Home authorities about two weeks previous that she was about to return her to the home. It is presumed that the young girl learning this, resented it, and wandered away from the house. Mr. Rupert thinking that the young girl had returned to the Home wired that institution to find if such was the case. While awaiting a reply the gruesome find was made. Coroner Harper was notified and went out. He examined the body and called an inquest which was held on Tuesday. The verdict given by the jury was that the young girl came to her death from exposure.

The verdict was as follows;

"That Edith Nicholls came to her death on or about the 9th day of October from cold and exposure, and that the said Edith Nicholls ran away from her home at Mr. Willard Rupert's to avoid being sent back to the Home at Peterborough."

Two men on the "Indian list" in Plotou, were fined $12.75 each for drunkenness.

Steel Rolling Mills to Locate in Cobourg

(Special to The Times.)

Cobourg, Oct 30.—There is every prospect of a steel rolling mills plant being located here at a very early date. The company which is arranging for the location is asking for an exemption from taxes and a fixed assessment on their plant for school purposes. It is the intention to erect these buildings at once and will start to work next week if their proposition is sanctioned by the town council. The largest of these structures will be 820 feet by 90 feet and the firm guarantees to employ at least 35 hands to start with.

A petition is being circulated for petitions of parties favoring the granting of the company's proposition. An option on a site has been secured.

Maine Should Get a Few Immigrants

Portland, Me., Oct. 31.— British Vice-Consul Keating, of this city, thinks Maine should get a share of the British immigrants now coming to America in great numbers. He says: "No effort is made to have them locate in this State, but it seems that there is a good chance for them here, and if we could induce them to settle in Maine it would be an excellent thing for them as well as for the state.

"The English settler is a good man. I have had many come here as the result of inquiries made through my office, and I do not know of one who has not made a success of life after he got here.

"The average Englishman does not understand America, as he calls this country. He reserves what he regards as the 'cocky' spirit of the people. For years he has looked upon this country as about the same as Great Britain. He knows that the people here have English customs, speak the language and have about the same laws and ideals. When he arrives, because he comes from the old country, it is hard for him to settle down among the people and understand them and all their ways. They also look upon him with far more suspicion than they would were he a foreigner indeed. But after a little while such men find their place and are well liked and highly respected."

Poverty of Lord and Lady Curzon

Chicago, October 31. — Revelations showing the poverty of Lord and Lady Curzon, who was Mary Leiter, after their return from India, where they had ruled over millions of subjects in regal splendour, and disclosure of the actual sum, $9,000,000, that Joe Leiter dropped in his famous plunge in the wheat pit, were made public for the first time in the suit of Hugh Crabbe against the Zeigler Coal Company for $148, on trial in Judge Eberhardt's court.

Because of Leiter's unfortunate speculation, as was shown, his allowance is now only $5,000 a year, while both his sisters are receiving more than twice this amount. Lady Curzon's poverty followed her to her grave.

When she and Lord Curzon returned to Europe they could not open their magnificent London house, but were forced to take rooms in a hotel and live inexpensively while waiting for funds to arrive from America. In a few months Lady Curzon died.

Stony Lake boats and tugs are still busy carrying and towing freight.

Mrs. Jean Blewett Heard At Mission Circle Hall

At Charlotte street Methodist church lecture room last night, the Young Ladies' Mission Circle held their second annual entertainment which was one of the most pleasant events of its kind this season.

Mrs Jean Blewett, the well known Canadian authoress and poetess, was no doubt the chief reason for the presence of such a large crowd, and those who attended were not disappointed in their expectations of a rare entertainment.

The other numbers on the program were all well received, and as a whole the following program was greatly enjoyed;

Forgive and Forget—Mrs Jean Blewett.

Vocal Solo—Mr. Jas Browne.

Native Born—Mrs. Jean Blewett.

(NOTE—This selection has been chosen by the Board of Education, Guildhall, London, England, to represent Canada, in the new literature for use in High Schools and Universities of Great Britain.)

Violin Solo—Miss Edwina Palmer.

Love's Lodging House.

The Wooing of Dugna.

—Mrs. Jean Blewett.

Vocal Solo—Miss Pearl Lundy.

The Sociable Scot.

A Morn in the Emerald Isle.

The English Hills.

—Mrs. Jean Blewett.

Vocal Solo—Mr. Maskie.

Miss Clarry acted as accompanist for the musical numbers, and Rev. H. M Manning filled the duties of chairman.

The receipts were considerably over $75, and the young ladies are to be congratulated on the successful culmination of such a high class entertainment, and under the leadership of their president, Mrs. Robt. Neill, should be able to command the same measure of success in the future as they have in the past two years. It was this society of young ladies who brought to Peterborough last year Mrs. Scott-Raff, who was also greatly appreciated.

The tea room and candy booths were well patronized.

Instrumental Duet—Misses Gumpricht

A Group of Poems on Work—

The Shepherd.

She Just Keeps House for Me.

—Mrs. Jean Blewett.

Vocal Solo—Mrs. S. Dickson Hall.

Barclay McD. Robertson Made a Hit His Scotch Numbers at Music Hall

In spite of the large number of attractions in the city last night the Conservatory Music Hall was filled with an appreciative audience to hear the Scotch concert given under the auspices of the choir of St. Andrew's church. The night was devoted wholly to Scotch songs, readings and dances, and it was one of the best of the kind ever given here. Mr. Barclay McDonald Robertson of Toronto, delighted his audience with his readings. He is especially good in Scotch dialect numbers, and his enunciation is perfect. The sword dance and the Highland fling which was done by Master Edward O'Shea and Miss Margarette Sanderson, was very pretty and the youngsters deserve great credit.

A feature of the evening was the chorus work by the choir, which had been especially trained by Mr. R. Gliddon. The lady members were gowned in white with tartan sashes and looked well. The program was as follows;

March—Conservatory Orchestra.

Highland Fling—Master Ewart O'Shea.

Chorus—O Highland Lad.

Reading—"The Christening," by Mr. Robertson.

Solo—Miss Manning.

Reading—Miss Leary.

Reading—Mr. Robertson.

Scotch Selection—Orchestra.

Solo—Mortimer Johnston.

Sword Dance—Margarette Sanderson and Ewart O'Shea.

Solo—Miss Ida Sanderson.

Quartette—Messrs. Cutting, Kerr, Wright and Gerrard.

Tenor Solo—Mr. Wright.

Reading—Mr. Robertson.

Good Night—Conservatory Orchestra.

Miss Chas McClelland was the accompanist for the evening.

Lemieux off for England to Get Reduced Cable Charges

Ottawa, Oct. 31.—Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General, leaves this afternoon for England to take part in an Imperial Conference which has been called to discuss with representatives of the various cable companies a proposition for reduced cable charges.

The conference will be attended by representatives of the various cable companies, and the Canadian Government, through Mr. Lemieux, will lend its support to the movement for reduced cable rates as an incentive to increased intercourse between the various parts of the Empire.

William Buckle of Hamilton, who claims to be a private detective, was committed for trial on three charges of blackmail.

The Weather

Northerly to north-westerly winds. Fine and cooler. Local snow flurries towards evening.

The new station and the raising of the tracks were discussed by London civic officials and officials of the G.T.R.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, forgetfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. The organs urinary become natural and manly. You feel yourself a man and know marriage could be a success. We invite all the afflicted to consult us confidentially and free of charge. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard-earned dollars.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

Peter E. Sommers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., writes his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic. I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

THEY ALL GET HEALTH —VITALITY— VIM, STRENGTH FROM FERROZONE.

Once you use the celebrated nerve vitalizer and tonic, Ferrozone — once you feel its magic powers, working through your weakened system — then you'll know for sure that health at last awaits you.

So much quicker and surer is Ferrozone to rebuild and restore that thousands use no other medicine.

"Because I am now well," writes Miss I. P. Sinclaire, from Sault Ste. Marie, "I feel it my duty to tell every young woman what benefit I got from Ferrozone. I grew very thin, and at twenty-five years old my face was hollow and wrinkled—my color was bad and I looked ten years beyond my age. I was nervous and hysterical, couldn't sleep, had no appetite, burst into tears at the least provocation. Then I worried, feared would go into decline, and was so depressed every morning that life was no longer happy.

"I was astonished at the quick and thorough action of Ferrozone. It gave me permanent strength and vitality, nervous fears disappeared, indigestion and stomach weakness were cured. Sound sleep returned. I looked better and younger, had clear color. I gained in weight, felt happy vigorous, strong.— It is a year since I first took Ferrozone. It has restored me to health I never knew before and I will continue to recommend it as the greatest tonic and strengthener on earth."

Very few girls and women are so abundant in health as to not require medicine. Nothing excels Ferrozone in supplying strength, blood and nerve power. Not a stimulant, but a nourishing tonic is Ferrozone. 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers. Try Ferrozone. Do it to-day.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus se on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted, and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

PENNY POST AND PATRIOTISM

Mr. J. Henniker-Heaton, M. P., in expressing his satisfaction at the conclusion of the penny postal agreement between Great Britain and the United States, referred to what he designated as one particular advantage which would result from the convention. The member for Canterbury called the attention to the immense impetus that may be expected to accrue to the postal and money order business in Ireland, because of the considerable migratory movement that is constantly in progress between that country and America. There is no man living who has done more in the interests of the public so far as postal facilities are concerned, than Mr. Henneker-Heaton his efforts being only second in importance to those of the immortal "Father of the Penny Post" himself, but it seems to us that in enlarging on the immediate benefits to Irish revenues that may be expected from the Anglo-American agreement, he lost sight of results that are likely to prove anything but beneficent to interests wider than those of Ireland only, the interests of the Empire.

As we have indicated, the immigration movement from Ireland to our neighbor Republic is already one of considerable proportions. There is no need to enlarge on the feeling among the masses of Irishmen towards British authority. Based as yet very largely on the restlessness ineradicable in that race, there is undoubtedly the surface current of disaffection which only requires fostering to mature into what may in time approach active disloyalty. It cannot be doubted that the element which has sought a new home in the United States has a far from salutary influence on those who have remained in their native land. The Irish nature is easily swayed by rosy fairy tales of freedom and democracy, and that there is a constant campaign on the part of the "exiles from Erin" in securing proselytes to a cause antagonistic to British constitutional traditions is obvious to all who watch the proceedings of the Irish-American societies and cabals.

The facilitation of intercourse between the disaffected sections of the Irish peasantry and the fire-brand element of the emigrants would hardly seem to be a consummation desirable in the present state of conditions in the sister isle. If it is only effective in attracting over-seas the more dissatisfied of the masses of the Irish, to the increasing discomfort of the United States authorities, but to the tranquillising of conditions at home, Government will doubtless find no cause for complaint, but we think that it will be responsible for the wider dissemination of what may almost be classed as revolutionary propagandary the very heart of sarcast.

JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES

The hearty welcome given the American fleet by the people of Japan, is a pleasing symptom of more cordial relations between two peoples who but a little while ago were eyeing each other with suspicion. Japan has recently given the best proof possible of her pacific intentions by cutting down her army and navy programme; a step she would not dare take if she were contemplating war with the United States or any other power. It would have been supreme folly for the Japanese, immediately on the heels of an exhausting struggle with Russia, to plunge into another great war with a power so rich in resources and recuperative power as the United States; and this patent fact has all along convinced any but the most prejudiced of the sincerity of Japanese professions of peace.

The European powers and the United States should not fail to recognize Japan's geographical position toward China when they are discussing their respective influence with that enormous Empire. Japan cannot help being more concerned in Chinese trade than any of the other powers. China is almost her sole market. It would be as fair for Japan to complain because the Americans have a greater share of Canadian trade or the British have more trade with the Continent of Europe. Then the Japanese and the Chinese are more nearly allied than either of them are with any other people. Moreover, they both find themselves enclosed in the ring fence raised by those who insist that Asiatic immigration shall not be allowed to find a place in their territory. Under such circumstances, to complain of Japanese activity in China is to be hardly fair to the latest of the newcomers in the world's great council.

And nothing is ever gained by fighting against the natural and just ambitions of a great people. Nature will have its way. The best thing for such powers as Britain and the United States to do is to work with Japan for the awakening of China under the right auspices, and to keep at bay all predatory powers. The Chinese market will be a great one; and this will be an admirable road to its consideration. The interests of these three powers should be fully in harmony. Neither of them want territory, and there is trade enough for them all.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

May Adopt Machine Guns

Washington, Oct. 30. — Major-General J. Franklin Bell, chief of the general staff of the army, called on President Roosevelt yesterday and handed him a report of Captain John H. Parker, on experiments for a machine gun service. Captain Parker has been at work for a year at the Presidio of Monterey, Cal., on these experiments, and has worked out the details of organization, and it is said he has recommended a machine gun company for every regiment of infantry in the army. President Roosevelt is much interested in the new service, and in his forthcoming message to Congress probably will recommend that such a service be inaugurated.

TOBACCO FOR SHEEP.

Said to Be an Excellent Remedy For Curing Various Ills.

The efficiency of tobacco in eradicating the internal parasite and thus contributing greatly to the general health of the animals that consume it is attracting wide attention among sheep raisers. Effectual in treating all internal organisms, it has proved especially desirable in eradicating the deadly bowel nodule which is a frequent source of trouble. This being destroyed, many of the ills usually attributed to other causes disappear.

It matters little what variety of tobacco is used for the purpose, writes an Ohio breeder in National Stockman and Farmer. It has been reported, however, that a certain variety has proved fatal to the animals which consumed it. It is probable that this disastrous effect was from a matter of quantity and not quality. Those wanting tobacco may procure either the whole leaf, just as it comes from the grower, or the stems or ribs of the cured leaf after the intervening tissue has been removed for other purposes. The former is preferable, as it contains much less fiber than the stems alone, and it also possesses the desired medicinal qualities in a more concentrated form. The stems, however, if finely ground should be effectual.

It should be remembered that in all instances tobacco must be pulverized and given in connection with salt, as sheep would not otherwise take it. Begin with one-fourth tobacco, by measure, and if necessary add more salt until the animals are induced to eat the mixture. Keep accessible at all times, giving no other salt. Sheep will practically refuse to eat it at first, but in time they will learn to like it. The writer, who lives in a tobacco section, has known instances in which sheep and even cattle have learned to devour tobacco ravenously and, if permitted to have it, in such quantities as to prove fatal. If fed in connection with salt, as above suggested, no such injurious results need be feared.

DUTCH BELTED CATTLE.

Picturesque Animals That Are Said to Be Good Milk Producers.

Dutch belted cattle are not numerous either in Europe or America. A few specimens were brought from Holland to the United States in 1838, and for a long time there were more to be found in the famous dairying county of Orange, N. Y., than in all other parts of the country combined. They have become more scattered during recent years, and herds of these picturesque animals can now be seen in many states.

As milk producers these belted cows seem to give good satisfaction. The claim of a leading breeder is that these cattle are "deep milkers, practical, profitable, thrifty and picturesque in the extreme, when seen as a herd at pasture." They are large dairy cattle. A number of bulls of the breed have exceeded a ton in weight, and the cows usually weigh between 1,000 and 1,200 pounds.

The animals of this breed are all jet black, with a broad band or belt of pure white encircling the body. This belt or blanket differs in width, but rarely reaches so far forward as the shoulder blade or back to the hips. On cows the fore part of the udder is usually included. No white is admissible elsewhere on the body and no black within the white zone. In general conformation the cattle are of the dairy type, although not to such a degree as some others.

Some Dairy Pointers.

Only comfort usually brings the owner satisfaction.

Do not think that two drinks of milk a day are all the calf needs. He should have clean, fresh water all the time. The milk is a food and cannot wholly replace the demand for water.

Good care and cheap hogs are as essential as proper selection and breeding.

In all deep setting souring the cream becomes necessary to develop flavor, as the oxidation is only partial.

The more succulent foods make the more watery milk and oily cream, which churns more easily.

Strain the milk as soon as drawn from the cow, so as to keep the amount of dissolved filth at the minimum.

When cows drink heartily and largely the milk is less charged with albumen, and this causes a cream to rise that is a better and easier churner.

Fattening Calves For Veal.

As a result of some London experiments it was decided that about a month is as long as it is advisable to feed calves on whole milk on a dairy farm, or until they have reached about 100 pounds live weight, or 96 pounds of veal. This weight may be attained in a month, provided the calves are fattened as quickly as possible, but one cannot expect to do it unless the calves are fed these times a day. An effort should also be made to have the calves fat at the time veal commands a high price; otherwise the returns from vealing calves on whole milk may not be at all satisfactory.

News in Brief

Brockville, Ont., Oct. 28.— Suddenly awakened from a deep sleep with the almost certain assurance that she had heard her father call her name in agonizing tones and then a few hours later to receive a telegram that he was dead was the experience of Flora Catlin, the 20-year-old daughter of Louis N. Catlin, of Cardinal. Miss Catlin was visiting many miles from Cardinal.

Deceased was employed as night-watch on the Cleveland canal work at Cardinal, and a fellow workman entering the shanty before daylight found him alone in an unconscious condition. He lingered for a few hours then passed away.

Enquiry shows that the awakening of the daughter was coincident with the death agonies of her father, and would indicate that she, in her mental repose, was undoubtedly receptive to the mental influence of her father, who realizing that death was near called audibly or mentally to his absent daughter.

New York, Oct. 26.—Still grieving over the loss of her two-year-old baby, Florence, Mrs. Louis Sosinsky, of Patchogue, L.I., was compelled to help the undertaker prepare for burial and place in the coffin her fifteen-year-old daughter, Sophie. Three days ago the Sosinsky family buried Florence, who died of spinal meningitis. Several days ago Sophie was stricken with black diphtheria. She made a valiant fight for her life, but Sunday, at 10.20, she died.

Owing to the dangerous nature of the disease the local Board of Health ordered that the child be buried immediately. They would not let her keep the body till morning. Undertaker Deacon, of Patchogue, was unable to find his assistant at that time of night, and the grief-crazed mother was forced to assist with her own hands in embalming the body.

At one o.m., the funeral procession started from the Sosinsky home. The father, the undertaker and the grave diggers were the pall bearers. With the aid of lanterns they moved down the country road through a dense fog. The grave was dug while the mourners stood by holding lanterns.

Dying of Cancer

New York, Oct. 30.—Dr. William T. Bull's chances for recovery are so remote that the physicians only seek to alleviate his suffering, and have no hope whatsoever of checking the course of the cancer with which he is afflicted. When the cancer, which is located in his neck, was first discovered, the surgeon decided the close proximity of the cancer to the main artery made it necessary to operate at once. Dr. Bull, however, preferred to resort to X-ray treatment. Apparatus was installed in the doctor's apartments, and for the last two weeks he has daily submitted to this treatment.

The Plow Woman

By ELEANOR GATES,
Author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl."

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

All at once he changed the picture. Twelve beans were rapidly counted out and laid in rows, and he mourned softly over these to show that they were slain warriors. Five kernels of corn—a line of pale faced dead—were placed beside the bean rows. This done, he covered the lantern with the grain sack and leaned back against the logs.

"Aye, aye," cried David Bond sadly, "twelve braves and five troopers perished! Seventeen souls went to their Maker to mark the greed of the white man and the yearning to harry off the red! Why do the Indians not stay in peace and quiet upon the lands set apart for them and not go abroad stealing and slaughtering? Why do my own people not give back to their brothers the country that is rightly theirs?"

Once more Squaw Charley stooped forward and, resting his weight on one hand, traced the return march of the troopers to a crossing of the Missouri, where the command had buried its dead; from there he drew the route southward to the ferry and Fort Brasnon. Here he stuck the splinters in a circle to picture the stockade below the barracks. At last, rising, he drew his blanket close about him, put the grain sack over his tangled hair and, with a parting look toward Dallas and the evangelist, went slowly out.

Perfect quiet followed the pariah's going. His recital of the conflict, dumb though it was, had powerfully stirred the little audience, for as he had proceeded with his crude mimicry the imagination of the others had filled in the scenes he could not sketch.

The section boss spoke first. Not incapable of feeling, yet disliking to show emotion because it might be counted a weakness, he hastened to clear the air. "Say, Dallas," he drawled, with a survey of the battlefield, "he ought t' had some red Mexican beans fer his Injuns." But the remark failed to appeal.

David Bond made a shakedown for himself beside Lancaster's bunk, using an armful of hay and the robes and quilts from his pung. However, the fact that he needed rest or that his couch was ready did not tempt him from the fire. Long after his host disappeared behind the swinging Navajo blankets he sat by the hearth. And Dallas stayed with him, Maryiya's sleepy head pillowed in her lap.

The elder girl felt strangely drawn to him. He returned the interest he inspired. Like Lounsbury, he marked the unusual character of this woman of the far frontier. But he saw further than had the younger man: With her father and sister she was all firmness and strength, as if she held herself to be the mainstay of the family, yet now and then unwittingly she betrayed qualities that were distinctly opposite. Like Lounsbury, too, when he touched upon the subject of her life it was to inquire if she had spent any of its years in a town. He felt certain that she had not; at the same time his belief was curiously contradicted by her bearing.

"I'll always live on the plains," she said, having told him of the mess and their migration north. "If I left 'em for awhile I'd learn things I don't know now, and when I came back maybe I wouldn't be satisfied with the shack or with dad and Maryiya."

"Child, where did you get that thought?" he asked, astonished.

"I don't know—only my mother would 'a' been happy in Texas if she'd been born there. But she wasn't, and she wanted her old home till she died."

She wanted her old home till she died—it was only a sentence, yet the quiet pathos of it bared to him the tragedy of that mother's exile.

"Never a great city, daughter," he advised. "Stay here, menaced by Indians, among rough men and women, with storms and toil besetting you, but never go to a great city. It is close and dirty and paved, and in it no man may fill his lungs with pure air or touch his feet to God's green earth."

"In cities," questioned Dallas, but in a low tone, as if she wished no one to overhear—"in cities do—do the women dress like me?" She raised herself a little, though without disturbing Maryiya, so that he might see her plain, collarless waist and straight, scant skirt.

He gave her a smile—a smile as rare and transforming as her own. She had allowed him a glimpse of her suppressed girlishness. "Would that they did, my daughter," he answered.

"I mean in cities like—like—Bismarck," she said, a trifle consciously.

"Perhaps—some—ah—let me see." He was perplexed. He saw the eager light in her face, saw that for some reason she was striving to compare herself with the women of the settled districts and to learn from him the very things she had feared might bring dissatisfaction with her life. He did not wish to teach discontent. He would not tell an untruth. So he created a diversion by taking up his ulster and searching in a capacious pocket.

"But they—they—don't plow."

David Bond brought forth a limp and battered Bible. "No," he said; "no, they—they don't plow."

"Ah!" She looked into the fire. Of a sudden two memories had returned—one of the passing musicians, with their nudging and insolent smirks; the other of a man who had leaned back in his saddle and laughed—after all, perhaps not at her name.

"I—I suppose they're more like Maryiya," she faltered.

The evangelist adjusted his silver bowed spectacles and smiled down at her. "And if they are would it worry you, daughter?"

She shook her head slowly and looked away.

He turned his back, so that both lantern and fire light could reach his pages, and, opening the book at random, began to read. The chapter done, he turned around and glanced at her again. Her face was still averted.—

He rose to retire. She put Maryiya gently aside and rose with him.

Then and not till then did Dallas think of their dilemma of the morning. The evangelist's coming and their talk together had caused her entirely to forget about the trip to the land office. However, swift on its remembrance, came a comforting certainty in David Bond's sympathy and aid. At once she told him of the necessity of her father's going.

"Shadrach and I will start with him tomorrow," was his ready response. He put out a hand to part the Navajo blankets. But an unshaped thought made him pause. "You will be alone."

"Why, we're not afraid."

"Brave girl" he said. Her confident answer drove away the moment's vague uneasiness without its having taken the form or the connection he might have given it.

"Good night," she called softly.

"Good night, daughter," he answered, and the swinging blankets met behind him.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE section boss was thoroughly surprised and not altogether delighted at being roused early the following morning with the news that he could start at once for Bismarck. As Dallas' voice penetrated the partition he returned the only reply his icebound mustache and goatee would permit—a muffled growl. She did not hear it, yet she knew how he felt. The previous day, though a casual observer might have been misled by his garrulous fretting over Ben's lameness, she was quick to note and with a pang that secretly he was relieved. But her pain at his laxity and indifference was not unmixed with pity, for to her crippled father, whose crutches in the snow hindered rather than helped him, she guessed how long and lonely and bitter cold seemed the way to the land office.

(To be continued.)

WHIMS IN WILLS.

Curious Desires Have Actuated Many Testators.

The dryness of the law is sometimes alleviated by the freaks and whims that appear in wills.

Some persons have used their wills as means of paying off old scores. In 1770 Stephan Swain of the parish of St. Olaves, London, left "John Abbott and Mary, his wife, 6 shillings each for a halter for fear the sheriff should not be provided." In 1793 Philip Thickness willed that his right hand be cut off and sent to his son "in hopes that such a sight may remind him of his duty to God after having so long neglected the duty he owed to a father who once affectionately loved him."

Lieutenant Colonel Nash got even with his wife by leaving the bell ringers of Bath abbey £50 a year on condition that they muffle the bells of said abbey on the anniversary of his marriage and ring them with "doleful accentuation from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m." and on the anniversary of his death to ring a merry peal for the same space "in memory of his happy release from domestic tyranny and wretchedness."

Jasper Mayne, who died in 1620, must have been a person of humor. He left his servant an old valise, stating that it contained something that would enable him to drink. When the valise was opened it was found to contain only a red herring.

Occasionally a testator exhibits an original idea as to the disposition of his body. Sieur Benoit, whose will was probated in Paris in 1577, ordered that he be buried in his old trunk to save the expense of a coffin. He added that he was attached to the trunk, it having gone around the world with him three times.

The tricks of the picture dealer?

They are not to be counted. Here is one that was played quite recently. A dealer ordered from an artist a tavern scene in the old Dutch style signed in the corner with a facsimile of Jan Steen's signature. When the smoky look of age had been given it the dealer eyed it with approval.

"Splendid!" he said to the needy artist. "It's a pity you shouldn't have the credit of it. Pray sign it with your own name. It may make your reputation."

The poor artist, delighted, painted over the signature of Jan Steen and set his own name there. Three weeks later the picture started for New York, consigned to a Fifth avenue merchant of paintings. But by the same boat went an anonymous letter to the custom house officials warning them that an attempt was being made to smuggle in a chef d'oeuvre of the Dutch school worth $40,000. The picture was seized. Experts were called in. They scraped off the signature of the artist and found underneath that of Jan Steen. The importer had to pay a fine of 50 per cent—that is, $20,000—and in addition $8,000 duty. Three days later, however, he sold his Jan Steen (guaranteed by the United States government) for the round sum of $50,000. Thus he made a fair profit, for the original cost of the picture was $14—70 francs paid to the poor devil of an artist.

The Season Inopportune.

"Of all the embarrassing predicaments, the one that I was in was the worst ever," said a prosperous downtown business man, addressing his partner in their office on the fifteenth floor of one of the Broadway skyscrapers.

"I got in the elevator a few moments ago," he continued, "and the draft as we shot northward caused me to sneeze. I felt it coming, and as I opened my mouth for a hearty 'achu' out popped my $150 set of false teeth. Say, when that car full of silly stenographers began to snicker I could have gone through a keyhole without touching sides, top or bottom!"

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain a congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr Shoop's Headache Tablet—evacuates blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Forces a Discharge.

"The Japanese servant has many curious traits," said the man who keeps one, "besides his constant habit of eating raw fish, but he is inordinately polite, as a rule. For instance, he never will give you notice that he wishes to leave you. Instead his work will grow steadily worse and worse till you can't stand it any longer, and so you fire him. It's always done purposely to avoid the necessity of telling you outright that he is tired of you and wants to quit."

Social Analogy.

Mrs. Subbubs—That Mrs. Newcome just moved into the Dudley's old house on Saturday, so I called today. Mr. Subbubs—Well, well, how like poker this social game is! Mrs. Subbubs—How do you mean? Mr. Subbubs—Why, in poker you also "call" when you want to see what the other person's got.

The Missing Feature.

"That meadow scene looks far from natural," declared the stage manager.

"What can all it?"

"Begosh, I believe it's the absence of advertising signs!"

Sneaky.

Magistrate—Sneaky sort of man? What do you mean, sir? Witness—Well, sorr, he's the sort of man that'll never look ye straight in the face until your back's turned."

There's no phosphorescence in sewers to speak of, but they may lighten up many a darkened spot in life.—Manchester Union.

Leonardo's "Last Supper."

At the request of many artists A. L. Wolynski, the Russian art critic, has been made an honorary citizen of Milan in recognition of his work on Leonardo da Vinci. The letter in which the "unusual honor" is mentioned in Figaro speaks also of the process by which Professor Luigi Cavenaghi hopes to arrest the disintegration of Leonardo's "Last Supper." "The whole surface of the great fresco in Santa Maria della Gratia," says the writer, "is a series of flakes which represent the painting, and every flake that falls is so much of the masterpiece. Cavenaghi is using a transparent glue with which he hopes to fasten all the loose pieces to their original places, and when that laborious task is completed the cleaning of the picture may take place. Even when restored the fresco will be only a reminiscence of the artist and will not show whether he painted the central figure with or without a beard."

Richest Family in Europe.

It is not generally known that the imperial family of Russia is the richest royal family in Europe and derives its vast wealth from three sources—the state treasury, the imperial domains (formerly church lands) and the so called "cabinet properties." A writer in Harper's Weekly gives some interesting facts. The state treasury pays out $7,000,000 per annum for the needs of the imperial house, principally for the maintenance of the palaces and the officials and servants attached to them. The reigning empress, for example, has an allowance of $360,000 per year and the dowager empress the same. Every child born to the emperor receives from birth to the age of twenty-one nearly $30,000 a year, while the heir to the throne receives annually, in addition to the maintenance of palaces, $500,000. Daughters receive a dowry of $1,000,000 unless when their means and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

HOW TO TELL

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well.

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore,—that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirit drops.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's pills.

"When I was so stooped and took weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills" writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainville, "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, dragging-down pains, sharps twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles and joints, lack of appetite and loss of sleep. Reach the cause. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands 25c at all dealers.

An emergency meeting of Peterborough Lodge, No. 155, A.F. & A.M. was held last night when R.W. Bro. A. E. C. Long, D.O.G.M., of Otonabee District, No. 20, paid his official visit. A large number of the fraternity were present.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Go to the school, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-my-tism, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. Broke His Arm

John Scales, an employe of the C.G.E. works, and a resident of Ashburnham, was the victim of a painful accident the other evening when returning from work. Noticing a train fast approaching from the west in his hurry to get off the track he fell down the embankment lighting with such force on his right hand that his arm was broken at the wrist. The accident occurred between Rogers and Cameron streets, where the bank is very steep.

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children. Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A pure glycerine (triturated with sugar) is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles used in them, viz.—pure triple-refined glycerine. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

Obituary

ELIZABETH NEWMAN

The death occurred Thursday night at the residence of her son, in Smith, of Mrs. Elizabeth Newman, after an illness of some weeks. The deceased was seventy years of age and was born in Kingston township. She was married forty-eight years ago to Joseph Newman, her maiden name being Elizabeth Love. Her husband predeceased her thirty-eight years ago. After her marriage she resided in Cavan for a number of years, afterwards removing to Manvers, where she resided until a year ago, when she went to live with her son in Smith.

One son, Joseph Newman, of Smith, is left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place today from the residence of her son lot 9, concession 5, Smith, to Mount Pleasant cemetery.

W. E. ROXBURGH

East Peterborough lost one of its oldest and most highly respected residents Thursday morning at 9.30 o'clock, when Mr. W. E. Roxburgh passed away. He was 74 years of age and had been in a declining for the past two or three years. He suffered no acute pain, but gradually grew weaker, and the end came very peacefully.

The late Mr. Roxburgh was born in Scotland, and came to this country when a young man. Nearly fifty years of his life had been spent in Norwood, where he was held in universal esteem. For years he conducted a general store very successfully, and afterwards went into the grain business. In this connection he was in partnership with Mr. Shoolbred. The business is at present carried on by Mrs. Roxburgh's son, Mr. John Roxburgh. The late Mr. Roxburgh and Mr. Reid were also engaged in the lumber business for three or four years.

Mr. Roxburgh took a prominent part in public affairs. He was chairman of the Norwood School Board for over twenty years and also clerk of the township of Asphodel. He was a Liberal in politics and contested the riding of East Peterborough against the late John Burnham for the Dominion House, but was defeated.

For many years Mr. Roxburgh was secretary-treasurer of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society and did splendid work in this connection. It is generally recognized that the marked success of the society was largely due to the efforts of Mr. Roxburgh.

In religion Mr. Roxburgh was a staunch Presbyterian and was a member of Norwood Presbyterian church. Deceased was twice married, his second wife, who was Miss Cameron of Peterborough, surviving him. One daughter and three sons also survive. One daughter is the wife of Judge Stewart, of Calgary, Alta., and the sons are Rev. Frank Roxburgh, Presbyterian minister of Smithville; Mr. John Roxburgh, of Norwood, and Mr. Gerald Roxburgh, electrical engineer of Winnipeg.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at two o'clock to Norwood cemetery. Rev. Mr. McLennan will conduct the funeral services.

New Hydrants on Patterson Streets

A meeting of the Fire, Water & Light Committee was held last night when the following members were present;—Chairman Ald. Johnson, Aldermen Butler and McIntyre.

A communication was received from the Water Commissioners asking for authority to place three hydrants on Patterson street.

One hydrant is to go just off Park street, another on about half way, and the third one near the boundary. Patterson street is built on one side all the way out to the boundary, and the other side is being rapidly built upon. It is on this side that Mr. Paquette will erect his ten houses.

A motion was passed granting the request.

A request from Mr. T. F. Matthews on behalf of the Murray street Baptist Church for an electric light on Murray street between George and Aylmer streets, and as near as possible to the entrance of the church.

The committee could not see its way clear to grant this but decided on motion that the lamp at the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets, be put out on an arm. This should furnish plenty of light.

There is a desire upon the part of the fire brigade to have a watchman put on at the fire hall to be there when the brigade was called out to a fire. When the men are all out the place is left free for anyone to go in or out and if they desired to could take away anything.

The matters was left in the hands of the chairman to inquire into and report at another meeting to be held shortly.

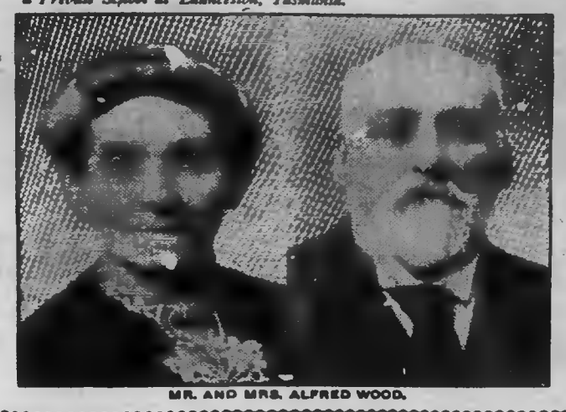
The first moose of the season was brought to Parry Sound by P. J. McAvoy.

Hamilton city regiments will parade to church next Sunday when Col. the Hon. J. M. Gibson will succeed of the 13th brigade for the last time.

PE-RU-NA PROMPTLY RELIEVES

A Case of Dreadful Suffering Which Had Continued For Months.

An Account of a Remarkable Recovery Given By Mr. Alfred Wood, Teacher of a Private School at Launceston, Tasmania.



MR. AND MRS. ALFRED WOOD.

Mr. Alfred Wood, who has a private school at 29 Frederick street, Launceston, Tasmania (Australia), has been a teacher for 27 years under the Educational Department of Tasmania. He writes, concerning his wife's case, as follows:

"My wife was suffering for months from gastro-enteritis, and was given up by her medical attendant.

"By good fortune I was induced to try Peruna in her case, and I can truthfully state that from the first dose her dreadful suffering ceased; and after taking five bottles she is permanently cured."

HOW does Peruna make such extraordinary cures as above recited?

By simply arousing the forces of Nature to throw off the diseased action.

Peruna contains no magic and does not operate in any mysterious way, but it does help Nature to combat disease, and thus many times comes to the rescue of the patient in some important crisis.

There is always a time in the course of any disease when a little help goes a great way.

Just as the scales are beginning to descend, when one ounce more would determine the fate of the patient, a little lift will turn the scales in favor of the patient.

Peruna is a handy medicine to have in the household.

It helps many diseases by imparting a natural vigor to the whole system.

As a tonic or catarrh remedy, its reputation is well established all over the world.

As a remedy for stomach and bowel disease, the fame of Peruna is undoubtedly destined to become greater than that of any other medicine in the world.

A great many cases like that above referred to have found Peruna of untold value when no other help seemed of any avail.

Pe-ru-na For Indigestion.

Mr. Donald Robb, Jr., 16 Wrights Ave., Halifax, Nova Scotia, member Independent Order of Forresters, writes:

"While on a visit to Boston, I must have eaten something that did not agree with my stomach, as a terrible case of indigestion followed.

"Peruna was recommended to me and after using three bottles I was entirely cured.

"I therefore recommend Peruna to any one suffering with stomach trouble."

Mr. Chas. Brown, Rogersville, Tenn., writes:

"A friend advised me to take Peruna for indigestion and it cured me in a short time."

Special Offer to Ladies

I will send ten days' treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weakness, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 24th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 boxes of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more boxes will produce a permanent cure. Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial boxes free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many baptisms in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Cowley in the noble work, believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1908.

Dear Friend.—Sometime ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicine had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years of terrible suffering and undergoing three operations, I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms to agents?

Gratefully yours.

RUGBY

There promises to be a good crowd at the rugby match this afternoon when the T.A.S. seniors meet the T.A.A.C. of Toronto, in an O.R.F.U. championship game. The locals have been greatly strengthened since the last game in Toronto and they fully expect to win. The visitors are coming down strong and will do their utmost to pull out a victory and thus end the fight for the senior championship.

The Toronto A.A.C. seniors will go to Peterborough tomorrow morning by C.P.R. to play a game in the senior series of the O.R.F.U. The probable line-up; Full-back, Morrison; halves, Clarke, Fleet, Jones; quarter, Campbell; scrimmage, Mask, Nasmith, Robertson; inside wings, McLennan, Holden, Crooks; middle, Austin, Clarkson, Mara, outside, Sheriff, Sale, or Hugh Clarkson.

Returns from Northern Ontario

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 30.—Miss Agnes Deans Cameron, the well-known authoress, has returned from a six months' trip through the basins of the Mackenzie and Peace Rivers, accompanied by her niece and secretary, Miss Jessie Cameron Brown.

Miss Cameron speaks highly of the kindly relations of Protestant and Catholic missionaries in the northerly wilds. She will lecture on the possibilities of these wilds, where, in many places, no white woman has been before. She says the Indians complain at not being allowed to kill beaver below the fifty-fifth parallel as they are often needed for meat, and are handy to sell as furs in hard times.

Children and Matches Cause a Sunday Fire, J. P. Francis was Burned

A good sized blaze was created by children playing with matches in Mr. J. P. Francis' barn at 328 Euclid avenue yesterday afternoon about four o'clock. The structure was a frame one and contained two loads of straw, half a bale of hay, and a pig, and once the flames got a start they made great headway. The brigade made a rapid run over to Auburnham, but the barn was over 2000 feet from the nearest hydrant, and consequently the waterworks could not be used. The barn was practically ruined before the firemen got there, so that the water would have been of little use anyway. The brigade therefore directed all its attention to preventing the flames spreading to the two houses close by, which they did with the chemicals.

Damage to the extent of $35 to contents and $100 to building, was done and there was no insurance. Mr. Francis however was successful in saving his team of horses and harness but he received some nasty burns about the face and right arm.

After the brigade had left the wind fanned the fire up again and sent sparks flying to such an extent that the neighbors were afraid of their property and notified the chief who loaded a bunch of buckets onto the old wagon and went out again. A bucket brigade was formed, and after emptying two wells and drawing a lot of water from the creek the fire was extinguished entirely.

Five Men with Twelve Dogs Started for Bottle Lake

To those not accustomed to have their men folk go to the woods very fall to camp on the trail of the deer it is of great interest to see a party pack up and get ready for a start. On Saturday afternoon not a few citizens were amused at the preparations being made by the Bottle Lake hunting party. The personnel of the party included Dr. Amys, Gus Cochrane, Mr. O'Brien, Arthur Head and J. E. A. Fitzgerald, and they started from Mr. Fitzgerald's coal and wood office on Brock street.

One of Mr. Fitzgerald's big trucks had been brought into commission and for the unexperienced to enumerate the tango of that wag on would be a hopeless task. However one could see, without appearing too inquisitive, four canoes tied to the sides while the centre was piled high with bundles which looked like tents, bags of bread, boxes of canned goods, medicine chests with cough and cold cures and preventatives, water purifiers, heat producers as well as many varieties of food, such as fat pork and lean beans, etc. There were also stowed away bedding and clothing, guns and ammunition and other articles too numerous to mention.

After a couple of hours of hard labor the load was ready and the last of the hunters arrived on the scene, but there were also twelve dogs all barking and jumping, quite as keen for the chase as their owners, so to look after. These intelligent brutes were chained in pairs, if they consented to travel that way, but fastened to the axeles of the wagon, to the sides of the box, to the ends of the canoes and to a bamboo pole which some ingenious mind had fastened to the end of the wagon. As stated above there were twelve hounds and every four seconds there were twelve howls and twelve yelps at the chains and for the last few minutes before the caravan got under way on would have thought that a deer was being chased down Brock street.

Finally the outfit was ready. The heavy team was brought out and attached to the load. The sports got into their sweaters and corduroys, pulled on their belts, while some gave the driver the word to go ahead. There were two on the load and three walked behind to watch the dogs and incidentally to keep warm. Everything was not smooth sailing, however, for no sooner had the team started than one big black hound got cold feet and pulled his collar over his head and with his tail between his legs started for home. A few yards more were covered by the team when two more dogs broke away, and as they were old hunters they were allowed to run loose, the owners knowing they would follow. So with the howling dogs the camp was started on the long journey with two sports on top and three bringing up the rest.

Peterborough Lost After Putting Up a Hard Fight Championship for Toronto

The local rugby team lost a hard game on Saturday, and one which they should have won as they played a splendid game all through, and were in the lead right up to the last five minutes. The T.A.A.C. of Toronto arrived on the noon C.P.R. train, and were in the best of condition, having put in a lot of hard work since their last game for the purpose of winning Saturday's contest. For them the O.R.F.U. championship depended on the result of that day's work, and they could afford to take no chances. They did not either. [illegible] Peterborough fifers had been strengthened both by additional players and hard hard practice. The play on Saturday certainly showed great improvement for they fought the visitors over every foot of the ground and did not let up for a minute. The locals led all the way through and slowly added to the score until it was 8—3 and only five minutes to play when Morrison for the T.A.A.C. made a splendid dodging run and crossed the line for the only touchdown of the day, giving the visitors seven points and winning the game. The locals were unable to score after that as the time was too short.

The crowd was not very large and the weather, though fine was very cold for sitting and standing around. But the rugby sports saw a splendid exhibition and general regret is expressed that Peterborough failed to pull out the game. The T.A.A.C. are now champions and they will go after other honors.

Peterborough led at the half 3—0 and at three-quarters time 3—2.

It was 6—2 before T.A.A.C. got their touchdown.

R. F. McWilliams of Peterborough, and Dr. V. McWilliams of Keene were the officials.

The teams were;

T.A.A.C.: Full back, Jones; halves, Silvas, Morrison, Clark; quarter, Campbell; scrimmage, Naismith, Mack, Robertson; wings, McLennon, Holden, Orr, Hara, Sale and Grant.

Peterborough: Full back, Clough; halves, Craig, McPherson, Quinlan; quarter, Lundy; scrimmage, O'Brien, Clark, Grady; wings, Dickson, Diamond, Davidson, Fitzpatrick, Davis and O'Connor

"All the Comforts of Home"

"All the Comforts of Home," as the title of the play suggests is about ninety per cent. of laughing gas, and to use the words of Mr. W Winter, the veteran critic of the New York Tribune, "It is a perfect antidote to melancholy." With the possible exception of "Charley's Aunt," it has been the most popular comedy of modern times and those who go to see it on the third and fourth of November will not be disappointed. Mr. Wm. Gillette, the eminent actor and playwright who is playing at the Princess in Toronto at present is the author of this delightful four-act comedy. And Barnes Mantle, the dramatic critic of the Chicago Tribune, has said "If Mr. Gillette had never written anything but "All the Comforts of Home" it would have been enough to make him famous.

Although the situations and lines are intensely humorous and the climaxes irresistibly funny there is not worst in it that would bring a blush to the most modest cheek. The scene of the piece is said to be a private drawing room of a residence in one of the residential quarters of London, England and one Pettibone, the owner of the house, has a young wife of whom he is very jealous, without cause and in the midst of his heat and fury suddenly abruptly takes the entire family away on a three months trip to Venice and other places, leaving his nephew, Alfred Hastings, a young doctor, who is always broke, to take charge of the house, during his absence. Pettibone gone, Alfred is man behind the gun and after rapturously surveying his new surroundings and looking at the keys to the wine cellar which he quickly has left him calls in a partner, Tom McDow, the funniest ever, and they both decide to turn the Pettibone mansion into a lodging house.

A crude mode of rules and regulations is drawn up by Alfred in which a condition is enacted that children and dogs must keep off the grass and Tom McDow a lark of all trades puts a sign out in front of the house announcing "Lodgings to Let," with a flaming footnote to the effect that lodgers will have "All the Comforts of Home." A lodging or boarding house in that locality is surely a new thing, and in a very brief space, the house is full of all sorts and conditions of men and women; country town folk and musicians, opera singers, English dudes and dead beats, dope fiends, men with minds and men without minds.

All sorts of complications arise and the fun at once b comes fast and furious Old Bender falls in love with the opera singer; Alfred falls in love with Bender's daughter. Tom has his troubles with the mad musician and the dope fiend upstairs. Mrs. Bender is on the war path. The officers of the law come in to arrest Langhorne and the queer entanglements that follow are just the funniest ever seen amid the glare of the footlights. Things are going from bad to worse when the Pettibones return home. What happens after that is too funny to tell. You'll have to come and see it in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on Nov. 3rd and 4th.

Following are the principals surrounding the cast; Messrs. Charles Harber, George Lynch, Irving Beers, Mort Johnston, A. C. Yokome, F. D. Craig, D. B. McKie, W. G. Ferguson, Claude Brady and C. G. Graham.

Ladies, Misses L. L. Hilliban, Nellie Hallibun, Pearl Morgan, Nell Graham, Mona O'Shea, Agnes Pentland and Mrs. J. N. Barber.

The play will be staged under the direction of Irving Beers, who put it on with marked success in all the western cities of Canada and the United States.

Port Colborne Man Shoots Wife and Self

(Special to The Times.)

Buffalo, Oct. 31.—Elbridge Vanderveer, aged 47, years, employed by the Grand Trunk Railroad as a track walker at Port Colborne, Ont., shot his wife, Frances, aged 23 years, this morning, one bullet entering her breast, and another her arm. Then he shot and killed himself instantly.

The couple had been married about three years, but about a month ago they separated, the wife coming to this city, where she was keeping house at 349 Ellicott street. About 9:30 a.m. today Vanderveer rang the bell at her address, and when she appeared at the door opened fire upon her. Believing he had killed her, he entered the parlor and shot himself through the head.

The woman is at the hospital, but is not thought to be fatally injured.

Peterboro Baptists Lead in Baptisms

Ottawa, Oct. 31.—The report on the state of religion presented by Rev. C. E. McLeod, Port Burwell, occupied the attention of the Baptist convention today.

It contained a mass of statistics showing the progress of the church during the year, and its general condition. Nineteen additions were made to the ministry, ten of whom attended McMaster University. During the year twelve new churches were organized and fourteen undertook enlargements. The year saw 2643 baptisms, the net gain amounted to 136. The present membership stands at 52,050. Peterborough church stood first in the matter of baptisms with one in every eleven members of the church.

The financial statement showed that $508,578 was expended on the work of the church at home as compared with $516,393 in 1907. The expenditure was $118,272, as compared with $106,155 in the preceding year. The local expenditure was $626,850. The contributions per member for expenditure abroad were $1 90 this year and $2.17 in 1907.

Large Attendance at the Inthon Bible Class

The Inthon's gathered in the class room yesterday afternoon to the number of forty-seven members and three visitors. Mr. F. C. Moore, the able assistant teacher took Mr. Pearson's place and covered the lesson pretty well.

The Inthon's and friends of Mr. George Rose will be sorry to learn of his illness. A bouquet was sent to him during the week by the class.

An inquiry committee are going to Toronto on Tuesday to attend the thousand men banquet to be held in the Excelsior Rink by the Toronto Sunday School Association.

A social evening is scheduled for Friday. A splendid program is being prepared. Mr. Switzer's class are invited to attend as are also the wives and lady friends of the Inthon's and any of the fellows in Peterborough who wish to come.

We wonder how Mr. R. J. Sodon is faring on his annual deer hunt. Perhap's we'll have a venison supper when he gets back.

There's lots of space in the class room yet, fellows, come on in next Sunday and help fill it up. The room is nice and cosy and it's away ahead of walking around in the cold.

Italian Killed in a Row at Orillia on Sunday

(Special to The Times.)

Ingersoll, Nov. 1.—A murder was the outcome of a dispute between two Italian navvies who were members of a C.P.R. gang occupying cars here for the past few days. The immediate cause of the fatal quarrel is not yet definitely known but it is supposed that it resulted over a difference of opinion as to a game they had been playing in a fit of rage signor M. Ponzi, a man of powerful physique, standing nearly six feet in height seized a stone weighing probably two pounds in weight and hurled it at his fellow countrymen, Pardi Constantine. The missile hit Pardi over the left temple. He lurched forward and fell, expiring in his tracks.

Intense excitement followed the crime during which Ponzi made his escape and although a search was made almost immediately his whereabouts is still a mystery. A description of the murderer was wired to many points and it is believed that his capture is only a matter of a few hours.

The tragedy occurred soon after four o'clock and the police had little time to follow the trail owing to darkness.

After Constantino received the death blow, Ponzi hurried to his car, grabbed his coat and started off in a westerly direction, supposedly along the C.P.R. towards St. Thomas. If he has any idea of the enormity of his crime it is likely he is making his escape under the cover of the wooded district.

The Italians know little English and the task of the police is made more difficult. The navvies do not seem to care about giving any information either although twin brother of the murdered man is assisting as much as he can.

Later information disclosed the fact that the two men had been playing a game similar to duck-on-the rock and for money, instead of a stone on the rock a coin was used and the one who knocked the coin out of the ring became its owner. It was over the ownership of one of the coins that the quarrel started.

The scene of the tragedy was 250 yards from the C.P.R. depot. The murdered man is about 28 years of age and was married and intended leaving next week to join his wife and family in Italy. An inquest will be opened tomorrow.

Rowdies Broke Several Hundred Plate Windows in Toronto

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Nov. 1.—The hallowe'en celebrators were successful in getting ahead of the police last night. Some 800 extra men were put on the force and they directed their attention to the students, and while thus engaged the city rowdies got busy and broke several hundred plate glass windows and did considerable other damage.

Invalid and Blind Son Seriously Burned

(Special to The Times.)

Chatham, Nov. 1.—News was received here today of the very narrow escape from death by burning at Shrewsbury, 15 miles south of here, of Mrs. Ez Field, who is an invalid and her son who is blind. The house caught fire in the middle of the night, and they were unable to get out. They were nearly overcome by smoke when rescued by neighbors. The house and contents were completely destroyed.

Hallowe'en was Quietly Celebrated

Hallowe'en was spent more or less quietly in the city Saturday night. The chief of police took the precaution to put on a number of special constables and advertised the fact several days ahead so that those bent on destruction were somewhat alarmed. It was the usual night for the small boy, however, and he was out in force with his false face, pea shooter, etc., and had a bunch of fun annoying the neighbors. A number of gates were removed and a few mats were taken from door steps. Any loose bill boards to be found were placed up against houses, and a number of small capers were realized. The police, however, had very little trouble and the station cells were plenty large enough to accommodate all who desired lodgings.

His Nerves Weak

POOR MEMORY. LACKED VIGOR. LOST EMPLOYMENT

Another Case Proving How Quickly Ferrozone Gives Brain Health from Ferrozone.

There's a real reason why Ferrozone cures.

It's a true nerve tonic—not a stimulant—it feeds the nerves with nourishment—gives them vital actual activity.

No other tonic in the world like Ferrozone, nothing else is so quick and lasting in its effects on a run-down, nervous system. "I used enough medicine to appreciate an honest one," writes J. B. Beattie, from his home in Newcastle. "From babyhood I was not overly strong and was always nervous. I smoked a good deal, but one the whole my habits were good. My trouble first began with a shortening of the hours of sleep I would awaken too early, my appetite was poor, and to whip it up I used highly spiced and sweet foods. First thing I knew I had palpitation on doing a little extra work, and then an awful tiredness came upon me, and a strange feeling of dread—almost of fear — made me think I was losing grip of myself. My power of memory weakened and I lost my position. Then I read about Ferrozone. Say, it's awfully good to get a medicine that helps you right off. I don't mind telling you I was badly scared, and every dose was almost like sunshine. At once I began to feel better, and permanently better I really was, for less than a dozen boxes made me a well man. Now I can do my work with any man and I am grateful to Ferrozone."

Ferrozone corrects all enfeebled conditions of the system, builds up and gives the body great resistive power against disease. To use Ferrozone assures lasting robust health. 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers. Try Ferrozone, do it to-day.

American Immigration

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 2. — During the first nine months of this year, the Immigration department deported 1,311 immigrants as being undesirable citizens. During the same period, entry to the United States was refused to 1,206 persons. These figures indicate the close supervision now being exercised by the department over the new arrivals in the country, and it is said no country has ever received a better class of immigrants than the 139,000 who have settled in Canada this year. Immigration for the year has now practically stopped.

Mysterious Michael, White Slave Dealer, Arrested

(Times Special).

Chicago, Nov. 1.—The arrest of Joseph Michael, alias the Mysterious Michael, in connection with the government's crusade against the white slave traffic, promises to prove one of the most important in the whole batch of prosecutions brought by U. S. District Attorney Sims. Ever since the crusade began the government has endeavored to obtain evidence against the defendant. The prisoner was arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Mark Foot yesterday, and in default of $25,000 bail he was sent to jail to await his preliminary hearing next Friday.

Michael's wife, Mariette Michael was arrested some time ago, and is held by the Grand Jury under a $5,000 bond. She waived the preliminary hearing and prevented her husband's arrest sooner by declaring that she was the sole owner of the two houses and that her husband was only the her tenant.

French Canadians Went Solid for Sir Wilfrid, Opinion of La National

(Special to The Times.)

Montreal, Nov. 1.—Le Nationaliste, the Bourassa organ, states that Sir Wilfrid Laurier carried the country on Monday last simply because he was a French-Canadian. There are in Ontario and the Lower Provinces several hundred thousand of our compatriots. The greater number of these vote for Sir James J. Whitney in the Ontario election, and for Mr. Hazen in New Brunswick. When the Federal contest came on, however, these same people voted to a man for Sir Wilfrid.

Le National gives a table showing that out of twelve counties in Ontario where the French-Canadian vote is heavy, not a single one went Conservative. The names of these being; —Prescott, Ottawa, Russell, Nipissing, North Essex, Glengarry, Cornwall, Stormont, Algoma, East Simcoe, Kent, South Essex, South Renfrew.

In the 12 counties in the Maritime Provinces where the French-Canadian vote is large an identical state of things exist. These are Gloucester, Kent, West Moreland, Victoria, Northumberland, Restigouche, Yarmouth, Digby, Richmond, Inverness and Antagonish in Nova Scotia, and Prince in P.E.I. One county only, viz., Digby, elected a Borden candidate.

In a word, out of 24 counties in these English speaking provinces, where the French-Canadian vote is numerous, Sir Wilfrid carried 23. We have therefore very little difficulty in explaining the result when we see 1500 or 1000 ballots fall into one ballot box for one candidate. Take away this influence and suppose the vote is evenly divided in the French-Canadian communities the defeat of the government is assured. These are brutal facts which all the speeches in the world could not alter.

Heavy Betting on Result of American Elections

The Americans will soon be done with politics for a while, but during the last few days they are making the most of the presidential campaign. Those possessed of a speculative nature are especially busy just now and a number of big wagers have put up as the following despatches will show;

(Special to The Times.)

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 1.—Two big bets were made here last night on the presidential election which aggregate $18,000 a side. A New York race track man wagered $15,000 with a local sport than Chanler would beat Hughes, and shortly afterward another Maryland horseman took $3000 more on the same conditions. The money it is said is being put up by a syndicate. The bets were made at Leach's saloon, the rendezvous for the sporting fraternity.

At the Merchants' Club, the home of stock brokers and leading business men $11,000 of Taft money at 4 to 1, was bet on the general results, and even money was bet on the State of Maryland results. One bet of $1000 to $800 on Maryland was made, and a Bryan man took the short end, and another of $4000 to $1000 on Taft in the general results was made today. There is now very little Bryan money in sight here.

MISSOURI FOR TAFT.

(Special to The Times.)

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 1.—Only about $75,000 has been bet here on the general results of Tuesday's polling. The reason given for this apathy is the belief that Taft will win. Odds on Bryan's success here are 5 to 4 and 2 to 1 that Missouri's plurality will exceed 15,000. Only $10,000 is up so far on Missouri's U.S. senatorship. Odds are now 3 to 2 on Folks for governor, Stark dropped from favorite. $1000 even was bet that the St. Louis Republican wins. St. Louis has gone Republican every presidential year for the last 25 years.

ODDS IN CHICAGO.

(Special to The Times.)

Chicago, Nov. 1.—The following odds are given by O'Leary.

On Bryan—7 to 2.
On Dineen—1 to 2.
On Taft—1 to 5.
On Stevenson—3 to 2.
50,000 to 1,000 on Hagen.
50,000 to 1,000 on Cheain.
50,000 to 1,000 on Debs, socialist.

TRENTON IN DOUBT.

(Special to The Times.)

Trenton, N.J., Nov. 1.—The campaign is practically over here. The Republicans claim a plurality of 40,000, while the Democrats give Bryan 17,000. The cause of this difference is that the labor vote is an unknown quantity.

Hamilton of Hamilton Died in Restaurant

(Times Special).

Hamilton, Nov. 1.—S. A. Hamilton of 276 West Charlton avenue, manager of the local branch of Smith, Hanson Co., of Toronto, was found dead tonight about 9:20 o'clock in Lee Sang's restaurant. The deceased entered the restaurant with Micky Low of 109 James street south, and they ate some oysters and went out. Later they returned and ate some more oysters when Hamilton flopped back in his chair. His companion thought he was asleep but a little later the body slipped to the floor. Low stood around talking to the people in the kitchen and it was one of the waitresses who discovered Hamilton was dead. Constable Bartlett and a detective were called, and Coroner Anderson was notified. He has ordered an inquest.

Plague Makes Awful Ravages Among Coolies

Victoria, B. C., October 31.—News of the arrival of a plague ship at Yokohama a few days before sailing with 40 dying and 21 dead, was brought here by the steamer Monteagle. The German steamer Landes Hadolf, which had taken 415 Chinese coolies from Hong Kong for Salina Cruz, Mexico, had failed to secure permission to land her passengers, and beri beri had broken out on the return voyage. The Mexican officials held that the Chinese were suffering from eye diseases, and landing was refused on this ground. Protests were unavailing, and the steamer remained some time at anchor at Salina Cruz while the question was being disputed. Finally she left, bound back to Hong Kong, and put into Yokohama with a terrible condition prevailing on board. Beri beri had broken out soon after leaving Mexico, and 42 of the Chinese succumbed. Despite protests on the part of the survivors, these were buried at sea. When the steamer arrived fifty more were lying in a precarious condition.

All He Took

An old darky was taken ill and called in a physician of his own race.

After a time, as there were no signs of improvement, he asked for a white doctor. Soon after arriving Dr. —— felt the old man's pulse and examined his tongue.

"Did your other doctor take your temperature?" he asked.

"I don't know, boss," replied the sick negro. "I hain't missed nuffin but nah watch."

Physician Recommends Smoking for Women

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 1 — Dr. Rachel M. Skidelsky, one of the best known women medical practitioners in this city, after startling the Women's Club by advocating smokin for men, startled them still more by advocating smoking among women.

Men had for ages, she said, found relief from petty worries, rest for worn nerves and general physical benefit in good cigars and cigarettes when used in moderation. Carefully qualifying her statement, she said there probably would be less of the loudly proclaimed nervousness of American women were they to devote five minutes three times a day to a cigarette or two, preferably after meals.

Proof Positive

One night at the theatre some scenery took fire, and a very perceptible odor of burning alarmed the spectators. A panic seemed to be imminent, when an actor appeared on the stage.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "compose yourselves. There is no danger."

The audience did not seem reassured.

"Ladies and gentlemen," continued the comedian, rising to the necessity of the occasion, "confound it all; do you think if there was any danger I'd be here?"

The panic collapsed.

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted, and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

THE SAFETY-VALVE

The first thought of the appreciative reader of the interview with Emperor William which "The London Daily Telegraph" has published will be tinctured with envy of the unnamed gentleman who was privileged at first hand to hear that remarkable outpouring of the imperial mind. The second will probably be a recognition of the indubitable authenticity of the report. It would surpass, we should say, the ability of the most ingenious counterfeiter to concoct an interview so accurately embodying the peculiar characteristics of the Emperor, and we must congratulate the unknown reporter upon the skill with which he retained in memory and has now recalled and repeated those nervous and virile utterances.

The most important thought, however, is that concerning the essential traits of the Emperor's statements. We mean, of course, his citation of historic facts and his profession of friendly regard for Great Britain. His unconventional exclamation that the English are as mad as March hares may be bracketed, as a figurative extravaganza, by the side of other hot expressions from both German and British sources. Nor it will be observed, does he claim for himself invariably irreproachable impeccability in his attitude toward Great Britain. We have always supposed that he himself classed his famous dispatch to "Oom Paul" as one of those things—in Mr. Punch's phrase—which one would rather have left unsaid, or at any rate would rather have said differently. But as we have hitherto suggested, that abrupt ebullition was handsomely atoned for by the later conduct of the Emperor toward Mr. Kruger and the Boer envoys which is referred to in this interview.

It must, of course, be borne in mind that Germany is one of the greatest empires in the world, that it is rapidly growing in commercial and other interests, and that it is simply impossible for such an empire thus to grow without coming into contact, and perhaps now and then coming into friction with its neighbors. And, of course, too, such an empire of its sovereign and government must have regard first of all for its own welfare. Moreover, there is a familiar and truthful saying about the difficulty of agreement between two of a trade, and in several highly important particulars Great Britain and Germany are two of a trade. A certain degree of friction between them is probably inevitable, but there really would seem to be no excuse for its exaggeration into anything like unfriendliness. The trouble appears to be that some ill-considered incidents and some ill-devised conditions have "got on the nerves" of over-susceptible persons on both sides, so that there have arisen in both countries a suspicion and an animosity for which there is no just ground.

The two great nations of Europe which stand conspicuous for the fact that they never yet have been at war with each other are Great Britain and Germany. There are peculiarly strong reasons why they, of all nations there, should never be at war with each other; but there would be no good in trying to conceal or to ignore the obvious fact that for some years there has been more talk of war between them than between any other two nations. The Emperor's plain utterance should go far toward revealing the hollowness and the groundlessness of that talk, and we should hope that it would also go far toward putting an end to it.

THE KAISER'S PLAIN TALK

In the Balkans the word of wisdom from the great chancelleries of Europe is now as always:—"Sit on the safety-valve. Every great nation is bent upon suppression. War is possible only as the result of some burst of passion in one of the smaller states cheated of its rights.

What the bubbling pressure under the weighted safety-valve may mean we get daily hints. The other day it was a riot of the Young Czechs in Prague in sympathy with their "Servian brothers" in Bosnia; for the Slavic element which Austria-Hungary is trying to assimilate is found in the north as well as in the northeast, east and south and on the coast. The trouble will presumably "blow over." Servia and Montenegro may or not be placated by trifling concessions. Murder as a means of electioneering for the rival nationalities may presently be resumed in Macedonia. The "promised constitutional government" for Bosnia-Herzegovina will be something after the fashion of the coming Hungarian Franchise Reform bill foreshadowed by the London Times's Vienna correspondent — one vote for every ten men who cannot read or write; two votes for every man who has passed four standards of secondary school and pays $4 in direct taxes, and so on. Power will remain with the Mohammedan landowners and the town carpet-baggers.

The only ray of light in the situation seems to come not from any of the great Christian powers of educated and prosperous Western Europe. It apparently shines on the standard of freedom raised in decrepit Turkey itself. The hope of the Balkan reform evidently rests upon reform in Constantinople.

BEAUTY'S BACKGROUND.

Lady Auckland Has a New Notion About House Furnishings.

Lady Auckland, who has opened an antique furniture shop in London, has a theory that a woman's beauty depends no more on her skin, hair, bearing or even dress than it does on her background, her surroundings. She must have her house furnished to match her complexion.

"The paintings of the old masters are the best guide to artistic furnishing," says Lady Auckland. "They never made the mistake of picturing a woman with a background that didn't suit her coloring. Most modern portrait painters are wise enough to consider the sitter's type when devising the background. In a portrait of a woman I know all the settings are of soft brown velvets and tawny furs, just lighted by the gleam of the gold chair she sits in and of a tall copper vase at her side. It brought out and yet harmonized with her eyes and hair. Yet that woman has the ill taste to have her drawing rooms furnished in blue. They don't exactly quarrel with her coloring, but they make her just commonplace. In the picture she is distinguished simply because of those tawny browns about her.

"The woman who has Titian red hair must have a Titianesque background of soft ruby and gold velvets. The pastel girl, with her pale golden hair and light blue eyes, would be extinguished in a room of warm colors. Settings of pastel blues, pinks or greens, on the contrary, bring her out and make her lovely and alluring. It is perfectly marvelous that women don't consider their coloring more in furnishing their homes. That's why they need beauty specialists to do it for them."

"But what are people to do," asked a listener, "when there are daughters who differ in their complexions? Shall papa furnish the drawing rooms to suit the pastel daughter or the Titian daughter? Shall he buy draperies to 'go with' the blond or the brunette?"

"That would be a problem," replied the beauty specialist.

DESIGN FOR DOOR PANEL.

Made of Lace Braid on Net in Marie Antoinette Effect.

Door panels or curtains of lace add much to the attractive appearance of entrance doors, and, though the initial cost of the lace panels may be somewhat more than silk curtains of similar size, the purchase is justified by the fact that the lace will long outwear the cheaper material and, with ordinary care, will look well to the end of its existence.

This large oblong panel is easily made by a woman fond of fancy work.

AN OBLONG PANEL.

It measures twenty-six inches in length and is just half a yard wide, but both length and width can be considerably increased by letting the net extend far from six to eight or even ten inches all around beyond the outside row of braid. The little lace roses and sprays of flowers and leaves may be made in the hand before being basted on the pattern, right side down. After all the braid is carefully basted in place the net is basted smoothly over the pattern and sewed down to the braid just as in the well known Marie Antoinette work.—Delineator.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

A bilious attack may soon be overcome by taking the juice of one or two lemons in a goblet before retiring and in the morning before rising.

Some people wash their hair with tar soap after an egg shampoo, but the plain egg is very cleansing and leaves the hair much softer than if soap is used with it.

The white of an egg when beaten with milk and drunk night and morning is of service in mild cases of jaundice. When beaten with sugar and a very little water, it will make the voice stronger and clearer.

To all suffering from ringworm rub the part with vinegar that onions have been pickled in. It has never failed to cure the worst cases, but must be rubbed with it several times a day. The flavor of the onion kills the germ.

The particular woman never uses a sachet of one odor, a soap of another, a powder of a third, and so on. She either buys her soaps and powders unscented or else has them of the same scent as her sachets and perfumes. There must be no conflicting of odors.

Enlarged pores very often need internal treatment, as well as external, as they are principally caused by indigestion and constipation. Sip a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and drink plenty of cold water between meals, a little at a time. For external treatment apply this lotion with a piece of old linen or a bit of absorbent cotton: One dram of boric acid, four ounces of distilled witch hazel.

Will Cover the Temple of Isis

London, Oct. 31. — It has been decided by the government of Egypt to raise the great dam at Assuan seven meters above its present level. This means that the country above the dam will be inundated far beyond the limits of the present lake, already as large as that of Geneva in Switzerland. While the results may be very gratifying in the economic development of the Nile valley below Assuan, such results are not likely to compensate the archaeologists and the cultivated public interested in the monuments and remains of early civilization to be buried thus under many feet of water. The government has foreseen this dissatisfaction and has appropriated several hundred thousand dollars for the investigation and conservation of the ancient remains to be endangered or destroyed, particularly the early cemeteries which will be flooded.

The beautiful temple of Isis on the Island of Philae, already sadly injured by the invading waters, which at present rise almost to the capitals of the columns, will, after the raising of the dam, be completely submerged, with the possible exception of the very summits of the tall pylon towers. Each submerged year by year must, of course, result in the slow disintegration of the stone, and the ultimate complete destruction of what has been the loveliest building in Egypt. The loss to the modern visitor is but the beginning; for the numerous records and inscriptions on the walls have never been properly copied and published. The same is true of the other Ptolemaic temples, forming a group extending along the river for 40 miles above the Assuan dam.

The Colonel's Applejack

A story is told of a colonel in Gen. Lee's division in the late civil war who sometimes indulged in more applejack than was good for him. Passing him one evening leaning against a tree, the general said:—

"Good evening, Colonel. Come over to my tent for a moment, please."

"S-s-cuse me. G-g-en'ral, s-scuse me," replied the colonel, "it's about all I can do to stay where I am."

Patrick Fagan's barns in Oneida were burned and incendiarism is suspected.

Smallpox in Kingston

Trouble Over Order for General Vaccination

Kingston, Oct. 31.—The smallpox scare is not dying out by any means. The Queen's student who is one of the victims is not seriously ill, but the danger is that the disease may develop a more virulent form. There is trouble over the anti-vaccination-ists being excited over the medical health officer's action and demanding the vaccination of all pupils in the Collegiate Institute, notwithstanding the resolution of the Board of Education controlling the Institute only advising but not compelling pupils to be vaccinated.

The medical health officer says his powers are superior to the board as to the Institute, but not as to the Public Schools, where the Board of Education's action is supreme.

The City Council has not yet approved compulsory vaccination, so that any enforcement is on the part of the Board of Health.

Some parents are objecting to compulsion, and will withdraw pupils from the Institute.

Yet it was something more than these aspects of the journey that caused Lancaster to view it unfavorably. He knew that in another thirty-six hours, when the original applicant's half year was up, he and not the other would have the clearer right to the quarter section. Therefore he regarded the proposed declaration of abandonment, the canceling of the old entry and the filing of a new as forms which need not be gone through with hurriedly, since the first claimant had undoubtedly disappeared for good and all, but which might be attended to quite as well the coming spring, when the roads would be open and the days warm. Confident of his perfect security on the peninsula and possessed by a sneaking but denied abhorrence for rush and discomfort, he rejoiced at delay. So having left his snug bed to fumble about in the dark for his clothes and, these donned, having loosed his speech before the grateful blaze in the fireplace, he did not argue fatigue or freezing as an excuse for procrastination. He passed over these rather too briefly and enlarged upon his safe status as a settler

"All bosh," he asserted as he watched Dallas and Marylyn busy with preparations for breakfast. "A full regiment of soldiers couldn' put us offen this lan', t' say nothin' of a man that ain't done a thing on it sence he took it up. Ah might jus' as well stay home."

But he found that Dallas was firm on the question of his going—"bald-strong," he termed it—and would not even pause for a discussion. She had risen early to feed the occupants of the lean-to, Shadrach in particular. Next, with a promise of rest later on, she had awaked Marylyn. Formerly the younger girl would have persisted in questioning her about the proposed journey and in knowing its purpose. Now, however, her interest in it, like that in most things, was so small that she appeared totally indifferent and went about her work silently. Despite the fact that this somewhat revived Dallas' anxiety over her sister, the elder girl felt freshly strengthened in spirit. In all her twenty years of life no other morning had like this one promised her so much happiness.

When the evangelist emerged and, after a sojourn in front of the hearth, joined the family at table Lancaster pined to ask him what he thought of their braving the elements festively. Not that the section boss esteemed his aged guest. On the contrary, Dallas' evident interest in the stranger had stirred the unnatural jealousy in her father's wimsa brain. Already he hated David Bond and had him set down for a crank. But Dallas needed a lesson. It was all very well for her to do the outside duties as if she were a man. That did not privilege her to ride roughshod over his opinions or to rule affairs in general with a heavy hand. However, he found no opportunity for questions. She, reading impatience and mutiny in her father's every glance, kept up throughout the meal an unwonted flow of talk.

"Dad," she said, covering his plate with a crisp, hot cake for the seventh time, "I haven't told Mr. Bond all about the claim—all the reasons why we want him to take you to Bismarck"—the section boss grunted at the "we"—"so you please tell him as you're going along. And don't let your coat get unbuttoned or your ears frost. I heated some big rocks for the bottom of the sleigh and some little ones for your pockets. You'll both weigh so much that Shadrach can't run away if he wants to, and you can't fall out into a drift."

Not a word from the others checked her cheery stream of comment. However, breakfast past and Dallas in the lean-to, David Bond managed to make a declaration. It was when he saw Lancaster take down the Sharps from its pegs by the mantel. "That should stay behind," he said, touching the rifle. "We are leaving your helpless girls alone. At least they should have something for defense."

Lancaster instantly agreed, observing to himself that the evangelist after all had some common sense. "There," he replied. "Ah'll put th' gun back an' we'll take yourn."

But he was corrected with severity. "I carry no weapons, sir," said David Bond. "I stand for peace."

"Then th' gun goes," declared the section boss. "Th' gals was alone before 'thout it. They was no snow on th' ground then an' a heap more chance of some one comin'. They ain't no danger. An' of Ah take th' gun mebbe Ah c'n git a deer on th' way back. We need th' meat."

The evangelist considered a moment. "Very well," he said, "but I would advise differently."

"Ah, shucks!" retorted the other, struggling with his coat.

A moment later his irritation was increased. At the same time the visitor unknowingly covered himself forever with suspicion. Through the frosty air and the darkness rang out the first trumpet blast from Brannon, and, as if totally unconscious of the action, David Bond reached up and bared his head.

"I love that summons," he said. "It bids our good lads wake and do their duty."

Lancaster was not unmindful of the courtesy due a guest. But any reference to patriotism was offensive, and he had been particularly provoked. So behind the bared shoulders of the other he disdainfully turned up his nose.

They were off at last, with Marylyn watching them from a window and Dallas walking alongside for a few rods to say goodby and to pat Shadrach's bony white flanks encouragingly. Morning was stealing up the dun east, yet overhead the stars were shining. And their near radiance, reflected upon the snow, combined with the faint light of the slowly growing dawn, made it possible for the girls to follow the travelers' straight course for miles. But long after Marylyn left the window the older girl remained outside. The dun of the east was painted out with sprushing waves of pink. The stars sank back into the heavens, grew smaller and dimmer and, one by one, disappeared. Finally a yellow rind haloed in mist was thrust above the level of the prairie. As Dallas greeted it the distant ridge of a snowdrift, rose tinged like the sky, hid the crawling speck that was the pung.

On his arrival behind David Bond Nick Matthews had found that full pockets were plentiful among the soldiery and had promptly gone about emptying them. Soon after entering the Trooper's Delight he sat down to a chip piled table. His quarry surrounded him. And there he stayed throughout the long night, wide awake, sharp witted, unwearied, adding to his heap of colored disks, honestly and otherwise. Not until reveille, a clarion warning, sent his fellow players scurrying back across the river did he put his cards one side and threw himself down, for, though a confirmed night hawk, he needed a short nap to prepare for some business that lay before him.

"Baba," a direct contrast to his brother, being thick packed, stumpy and dark, had not failed to garner his share of the rich harvest. From his station behind the long counter, which was made of four heavy planks supported on barrels at either end, he had poured strange mixtures into beer mugs and exchanged them for good government coin. When he was not performing his part as bartender he was scraping jilly timed tunes upon a fiddle.

It was he who was left in charge when shortly after noon his brother awoke, swallowed some whisky and armed himself with a brace of pistols

THE PRETZEL.

Its Simple Figure Scheme and Infinite Possibilities of Variety.

The pretzel is one of the most remarkable creations of the human mind and hand. It stands almost alone as an artificial product displaying the countless varieties of form produced by nature in the leaves of trees and blades of grasses. Of the millions upon millions turned out by the pretzel bakeries since the inception of the industry it is not probable that any two were exactly alike.

The general figure scheme of the pretzel must have been an inspiration. It would have been impossible for the human mind to conceive a scheme so simple and yet permitting such approach to infinite variation. Because of the peculiar shape of the pretzel its construction is most easily described by employing sailor men's terms. A bight is taken in a roll of dough, and the ends are given a half twist and brought back upon opposite sides of the bight. This makes the article somewhat heart shaped. There can have been no sentimental reason for this shape, for there is no product of art or nature further removed from the realm of sentiment than is the pretzel. The finished article looks as if it had been varnished and exposed to a sandstorm before the varnish dried.

The pretzel is unique as an article of internal use. It cannot be classed as food or drink. It is not a dessert, nor is it a medicine. Perhaps it should be classed as an appetizer—an appetizer not for food, but for drink, and therein lies its uniqueness. It is the great thirst producer. It is the third of a Sahara doze up in a twist of dough. If any one could invent something that would quench thirst as effectively as the pretzel can produce it his fortune would be made.

The home of the pretzel is Germany, where it is called bretzel or pretzel, according to whether it is in north Germany or south Germany, but in America it is pretzel all the time, whether in North America or South America. The name is commonly regarded as being derived from words in the Latin language meaning bracelet. But Germans are not fond of taking words from the Latin tongues. Perhaps the pretzel owes its name to the fact that it is baked on a flat, boardlike surface. The German word for board is brett.

READING THE STARS.

An Author's Mastery of the Science of Navigation.

"By the end of the week, teaching myself," writes Jack London in Harper's Weekly of his mastery of the science of navigation, "I was able to do divers things. For instance, I shot the North star, at night, of course—got its altitude, corrected for index error, dip, etc., and found our latitude. And this latitude agreed with the latitude of the previous noon corrected by dead reckoning up to that moment. Proud? Well, I was even prouder with my next miracle. I was going to turn in at 9 o'clock. I worked out the problem self instructed and learned what star of the first magnitude would be passing the meridian around half past 8. This star proved to be Alpha Crucis. I had never heard of the star before. I looked it up on the star map. It was one of the stars of the Southern Cross. What, thought I! Have we been sailing with the Southern Cross in the sky of night and never known it? Delta that we are! Gudgeons and meteors! I couldn't believe it. I went over the problem again and verified it. Charmian had the wheel from 6 till 10 that evening. I told her to keep her eyes open and look due south for the Southern Cross, and when the stars came out there shone the Southern Cross low on the horizon. Proud? No medicine man nor high priest was ever prouder. Furthermore, with the prayer wheel I spun Alpha Crucis and from its altitude worked out our latitude, and still furthermore I shot the North star, too, and it agreed with what had been told me by the Southern Cross. Proud? Why, the language of the stars was mine, and I listened and heard them telling me my way over the deep."

Weight of a Lion.

What does a lion weigh? Those who know the look of the king of beasts best and how small his little body really is will probably come farthest from the truth. About 300 to 350 pounds is a usual estimate, but a full grown lion will tip the scales at no less than 500 pounds. Five hundred and forty pounds is the record for an African lion. His bone is solid and heavy as ivory. The tiger runs the lion very close. A Bengal tiger killed by an English officer scaled 520 pounds. A tiger this size has, however, considerably more muscular strength than the biggest lion.

One Point Gained.

"Has that girl next door to you still got her parlor melodeon?"

"No; she exchanged it for a cornet, I'm glad to say."

"But, gracious, if she plays the cornet, that's worse, isn't it?"

"Not at all. It's only half as bad. She can't sing while she's playing the cornet."

The Two Women.

An old offender was introduced to a new county justice as John Timmins, alias Jones, alias Smith.

"I'll try the two women first," said the justice. "Bring in Alice Jones."

The Wiles of Women.

There are only two possible things that a woman can do if a man proposes to her, but there are more than 2,000,000 she can do if he doesn't.—Golden Penny.

Penguin Battles.

The penguin, a notable diver among sea birds, wins his mate by right of conquest. The male birds fight for the possession of the females. These curious birds have regular duel grounds, where relics of innumerable combats in the shape of feathers lie scattered about. In the center is the fighting arena, clear of all debris. The penguins' feathers and blubber form an efficient shield against their opponents' beaks, so the weapon used is the short flipper, the only wings the birds possess. The fight begins with the two combatants walking round each other waiting for an opportunity to grip. Once this is done the flippers come into play. The fighters shower blow after blow upon each other. There is no record as to how these fights end, but it is a safe supposition to say that they are seldom fatal. The force of the blow from a penguin's flipper is such that three or four of them will draw blood from the human hand.

How Models Make Pictures.

The artist gazed in rapture on "The Kiss," his latest picture.

"Do you grasp," he said, "the passionate grace of the girl's attitude, the warmth and the power wherewith her brawn white arms draw the young man closer, ever closer? Well, I got that idea from my model, a shopgirl.

"But for my model's suggestion I'd have put the girl in a stiff, cold pose, and the picture would never have been the masterpiece it is. But my model pointed out to me the abandon wherewith a girl, whether of high or low station, gives herself up to a kiss' charm. She illustrated the thing, aided by a male model, a young medical student. Yes, she made my picture.

"The fact is, models make, with their valuable hints and suggestions, lots of pictures. There's many a masterpiece whose merit is due to the splendid pose that the model originated for the accidental figure."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you suffer—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a cough-fying poison. It's strange how many things usually come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little sleuthing through—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it should be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Yet it was something more than these aspects of the journey that caused Lancaster to view it unfavorably. He knew that in another thirty-six hours, when the original applicant's half year was up, he and not the other would have the clearer right to the quarter section. Therefore he regarded the proposed declaration of abandonment, the canceling of the old entry and the filing of a new as forms which need not be gone through with hurriedly, since the first claimant had undoubtedly disappeared for good and all, but which might be attended to quite as well the coming spring, when the roads would be open and the days warm. Confident of his perfect security on the peninsula and possessed by a sneaking but denied abhorrence for rush and discomfort, he rejoiced at delay. So having left his snug bed to fumble about in the dark for his clothes and, these donned, having loosed his speech before the grateful blaze in the fireplace, he did not argue fatigue or freezing as an excuse for procrastination. He passed over these rather too briefly and enlarged upon his safe status as a settler.

"All bosh," he asserted as he watched Dallas and Maryiya busy with preparations for breakfast. "A full regiment of soldiers couldn' put us offen this lan', t' say nothin' of a man that ain't done a thing on it seace he took it up. Ah might jes' as well stay home."

But he found that Dallas was firm on the question of his going—"bald-strong," he termed it—and would not even pause for a discussion. She had risen early to feed the occupants of the lean-to, Shadrach in particular. Next, with a promise of rest later on, she had awaked Maryiya. Formerly the younger girl would have persisted in questioning her about the proposed journey and in knowing its purpose. Now, however, her interest in it, like that in most things, was so small that she appeared totally indifferent and went about her work silently. Despite the fact that this somewhat revived Dallas' anxiety over her sister, the elder girl felt freshly strengthened in spirit. In all her twenty years of life no other morning had like this one promised her so much happiness.

When the evangelist emerged and, after a sojourn in front of the hearth, joined the family at table Lancaster pined to ask him what he thought of their braving the elements foolishly. Not that the section boss esteemed his aged guest. On the contrary, Dallas' evident interest in the stranger had stirred the unnatural jealousy in her father's wiser brain. Already he hated David Bond and had him set down for a crank. But Dallas needed a lesson. It was all very well for her to do the outside duties as if she were a man. That did not privilege her to ride roughshod over his opinions or to rule affairs in general with a heavy hand. However, he found no opportunity for questions. She, reading impatience and mutiny in her father's every glance, kept up throughout the meal an unwonted flow of talk.

"Dad," she said, covering his plate with a crisp, hot cake for the seventh time, "I haven't told Mr. Bond all about the claim—all the reasons why we want him to take you to Bismarck"—the section boss grunted at the "we"—"so you please tell him as you're going along. And don't let your coat get unbuttoned or your ears freeze. I heated some big rocks for the bottom of the sleigh and some little ones for your pockets. You'll both weigh so much that Shadrach can't run away if he wants to, and you can't fall out into a drift."

Not a word from the others checked her cheery stream of comment. However, breakfast past and Dallas in the lean-to, David Bond managed to make a declaration. It was when he saw Lancaster take down the Sharps from its pegs by the mantel. "That should stay behind," he said, touching the rifle. "We are leaving your helpless girls alone. At least they should have something for defense."

Lancaster instantly agreed, observing to himself that the evangelist after all had some common sense. "There," he replied. "Ah'll put th' gun back an' we'll take yourn."

But he was corrected with severity. "I carry no weapons, sir," said David Bond. "I stand for peace."

"Then th' gun goes," declared the section boss. "Th' gals was alone before 'thout it. They was no snow on th' ground then an' a heap more chance of some one comin'. They ain't no danger. An' of Ah take th' gun maybe Ah c'n git a deer on th' way back. We need th' meat."

The evangelist considered a moment. "Very well," he said, "but I would advise differently."

"Ah, shucks!" retorted the other, struggling with his coat.

A moment later his irritation was increased. At the same time the visitor unknowingly covered himself forever with suspicion. Through the frosty air and the darkness rang out the first trumpet blast from Brannon, and, as if totally unconscious of the action, David Bond reached up and bared his head.

"I love that summons," he said. "It bids our good lads wake and do their duty."

Lancaster was not unmindful of the courtesy due a guest. But any reference to patriotism was offensive, and he had been particularly provoked. So behind the broad shoulders of the other he disdainfully pursed up his nose.

They were off at last, with Maryiya watching them from a window and Dallas walking alongside for a few rods to say goodby and to pat Shadrach's bony white flanks encouragingly. Weight of a Lion.

What does a lion weigh? Those who know the look of the king of beasts best and how small his little body really is will probably come farthest from the truth. About 300 to 350 pounds is a usual estimate, but a full grown lion will tip the scales at no less than 500 pounds. Five hundred and forty pounds is the record for an African lion. His bone is solid and heavy as ivory. The tiger runs the lion very close. A Bengal tiger killed by an English officer scaled 520 pounds. A tiger this size has, however, considerably more muscular strength than the biggest lion.

One Point Gained.

"Has that girl next door to you still got her parlor melodeon?"

"No; she exchanged it for a cornet, I'm glad to say."

"But, gracious, if she plays the cornet, that's worse, isn't it?"

"Not at all. It's only half as bad. She can't sing while she's playing the cornet."

The Two Women.

An old offender was introduced to a new county justice as John Timmins, alias Jones, alias Smith.

"I'll try the two women first," said the justice. "Bring in Alice Jones."

The Wiles of Women.

There are only two possible things that a woman can do if a man proposes to her, but there are more than 2,000,000 she can do if he doesn't.—Golden Penny.

Penguin Battles.

The penguin, a notable diver among sea birds, wins his mate by right of conquest. The male birds fight for the possession of the females. These curious birds have regular duel grounds, where relics of innumerable combats in the shape of feathers lie scattered about. In the center is the fighting arena, clear of all debris. The penguins' feathers and blubber form an efficient shield against their opponents' beaks, so the weapon used is the short flipper, the only wings the birds possess. The fight begins with the two combatants walking round each other waiting for an opportunity to grip. Once this is done the flippers come into play. The fighters shower blow after blow upon each other. There is no record as to how these fights end, but it is a safe supposition to say that they are seldom fatal. The force of the blow from a penguin's flipper is such that three or four of them will draw blood from the human hand.

How Models Make Pictures.

The artist gazed in rapture on "The Kiss," his latest picture.

"Do you grasp," he said, "the passionate grace of the girl's attitude, the warmth and the power wherewith her tense white arms draw the young man closer, ever closer? Well, I got that idea from my model, a shopgirl.

"But for my model's suggestion I'd have put the girl in a stiff, cold pose, and the picture would never have been the masterpiece it is. But my model pointed out to me the abandon wherewith a girl, whether of high or low station, gives herself up to a kiss' charm. She illustrated the thing, aided by a male model, a young medical student. Yes, she made my picture.

"The fact is, models make, with their valuable hints and suggestions, lots of pictures. There's many a masterpiece whose merit is due to the splendid pose that the model originated for the principal figure."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half-miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Appetite Gone--Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—was—ar easily tried her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Watmers, P.Q., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headaches. could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me., and for the past eight months my health was these perfect. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring, vigor, tone, health and spirits —are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old, and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength in every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Mayoralty Contest

As yet there has been very little talk of a mayoralty contest in January. His Worship Mayor Rush is entitled to a second term and if he desires to take it it is doubtful if another candidate will be brought out, although one of the aldermen who has been in the council for a number of years has aspirations for the elevated chair.

Obituary

MRS. FRANK J. ARTHUR

At the Nicholls Hospital Saturday morning at 1.30 o'clock there passed away the wife of Mr. Frank J. Arthur, corner of Park and Elm sts. to Her death occurred from pneumonia. She was only 29 years of age and besides her husband, two children survive her. Mrs. Arthur's maiden name was Ellen Jane Braithwaite. She being a daughter of Mr. Wm. Braithwaite of Gore's Landing.

The funeral will be held this morning to the cemetery at Gore's Landing, service being held last night at the residence of the deceased.

J. R. McNEIL.

Speaking of the death of Mr. J. R. McNeill at Ottawa the Citizen says,

J. R. McNeil, for many years well known as one of Ottawa's leading merchants, died rather suddenly yesterday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. Mr. McNeil had apparently been in good health until a few days ago, when he began to complain of indisposition. This developed until medical assistance was called in and the illness pronounced to be cerebral hemorrhage. He sank very rapidly until the end. A couple of years ago he had met with a serious accident, falling down the cellar stairs at his shop and sustaining a fracture of the base of the skull. Although the injury was one from which few recoveries are ever made, Mr. McNeill seemed to have regained perfect health and was apparently free from any after effects. It was this blow, however, which finally caused his death.

The deceased was born in Preston, England, on December 12th, 1836, and came to Canada in 1865 having originally followed the trade of cutler. After spending a few months in Peterborough he moved to Ottawa and was employed as manager in the firm of Donaldson and Thompson, who then did a big business here, with a large store on Sparks street, and a branch on Wellington. The year 1889 saw him start in business for himself, and from that time it rapidly progressed until at the time of his death the tailoring firm of J. R. McNeill was one of the foremost in the capital, while in real estate too, the deceased had large holdings. Nor was he prominent only as a business man, for among those who knew him he was marked by a simple and unostentatious, though not the less tangible, charity that was extended to all, irrespective of creed. He had always taken a particular interest in St. Luke's Hospital, which at the time of its founding and later had been the object of its benefaction. The youthful sporting element in the Capital, too, was indebted to him for the interest he took in them. A self-made man, he had grown with the commercial life of the city.

The county to which he belonged is looking after the funeral arrangements. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock from S. Rogers and Son's undertaking parlors on Rideau street.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Making Good.

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good," and Doctor Pierce's medicines well exemplify this, and their friends, after more than two decades of popularity, are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good" and they have not made drunkards.

A good, honest, square-deal medicine of known composition is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It still enjoys an immense sale, while most of the preparations that have come into prominence in the earlier period of its popularity have "gone by the board" and are never more heard of. There must be some reason for this long-time popularity and that is to be found in its superior merits. When once given a fair trial for weak stomach, or for liver and blood affections, its superior curative qualities are soon manifest; hence it has survived and grown in popular favor, while scores of less meritorious articles have suddenly flashed into favor for a brief period and then been as soon forgotten.

For a torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, perhaps dizziness, foul breath, nasty coated tongue, with bitter taste, loss of appetite, with distress after eating, nervousness and debility, nothing is so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's an honest, square-deal medicine with all its ingredients printed on bottle-wrapper—no secret, no hocus-pocus humbug, therefore don't accept a substitute that the dealer may possibly make a little bigger profit. Insist on your right to have what you call for.

Don't buy Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription expecting it to prove a "cure-all." It is only advised for woman's special ailments. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Less advertised than some preparations sold for like purposes, its sterling curative virtues still maintain its position in the front ranks, where it stood over two decades ago. As an invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine it is unequaled. It won't satisfy those who want "booze," for there is not a drop of alcohol in it.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the original Little Liver Pills, although the first pill of their kind in the market, still lead, and when once tried are ever afterwards in favor. Easy to take as candy—one to three a dose. Much smaller but never equaled.

MAY FIND MISSING SON.

Queen's Ride on Scenic Railway May Unite Parted Family.

Queen Alexandra's ride on the scenic railway at the White City, London, a short time ago may possibly lead to a millionaire, Thomas Fletcher, a flour merchant, of Cleveland, Ohio, finding his lost son, a young man of 30.

Ten years ago Mr. Fletcher, Jr., married against his father's wish, and was promptly turned out of doors. Since then the young couple have never been heard of, though it is the father's belief that they are in England.

Mr. Fletcher is a friend of Mr. Bostock, who is running the Empress Hall at Earl's Court. The other week Mr. Fletcher came to the Animal King in a most excited state, showed him a photograph which had been taken of the Queen at the White City, and declared that one of the young men sitting on one of the rear seats of the car was his lost son. Mr. Bostock, who had met the youth, had to admit that it was certainly very much like him.

To discover him an advertisement was inserted in the agony columns of the newspapers, asking if those who had the honor of riding with the Queen on the scenic railway would kindly communicate with Mr. Bostock at Earl's Court. Nineteen replies were received, though in all there must have been twenty-five persons on the car. These nineteen were asked to come to Earl's Court and make themselves known to H. Hilliard at the Empress Hall.

Fourteen turned up, evidently anxious to know the meaning of the letter they had received. When it was explained to them they expressed sorrow for Mr. Fletcher, though one or two of the gentlemen declared that as Mr. Fletcher was reported to be a millionaire they were open to be adopted. It was clear that the lost son was not among those who turned up.

"We have not given up hopes," declared Mr. Bostock, "for we have only met some fourteen out of the twenty-five, and it is possible that young Mr. Fletcher might be among the remainder. It is his father's belief, as a result of inquiries he has made through Pinkerton's Detective Agency, that the couple are in England. Unfortunately, Mr. Fletcher had to sail for America a few days later, owing to the receipt of an important cable from his business house there. I expect him back, however, in two months.

"My instructions are to do my best to find the young man, and then to cable his whereabouts to his father. I can assure him he will receive the heartiest of welcomes, and all will be forgiven."

Punched the King's Head.

It is curious to note that there are two men living who have punched the King's head. One, named Attrill, who is now 70, was employed fifty years ago at the building of Osborne Cottage. The Prince of Wales used to go down to watch the building, and one day, in a fit of mischief, he struck Attrill with his stick. Attrill immediately gave the prince several blows. Attrill was summoned before Queen Victoria, who rebuked the prince severely. The Queen then gave Attrill the post that he has held ever since. The other is Sergt. John Paten, V.C., a Mutiny veteran, who for forty-five years has been warder in the penal department of New South Wales. "I was at Chobham Camp, in Surrey," he says, "busy cleaning my accoutrements, when a young slip of a boy came towards me, kicking things out of his way. 'Clear out!' I roared, but he came smilingly on, so I went towards him and 'clipped' him under the ear: 'Do you know what you've done?' a fellow-soldier asked, with an awestruck face. 'Yes,' I replied; 'taught a young cub manners!' 'Good heavens, it's the Prince of Wales!' Well, well—he's now King, and I'm an old man."

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak Stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the Stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out his error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve". When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all druggists.

ROUTINE BUSINESS WAS PUT THROUGH THE CITY COUNCIL

The City Council held a short session last night, nothing but routine business being put through. Ald. Morgan had several kicks to make and that took up a lot of time.

Those present were, Mayor Rush, Aldermen Phalen, Morrow, McIntyre, Gillespie, Morgan, Bradburn, Butler and Elliott.

The clerk read the minutes of the last meeting which were confirmed.

PERMANENT GROUNDS.

President R H Leary of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was present in connection with his proposal to secure permanent grounds and buildings for the exhibition. The fair this year was a success, and the association will have a surplus of about $400 The present grounds are under lease, and that expires in two years. The association has reached the point when they must have new buildings or drop the proposition. The citizens are in sympathy with the city buying the present grounds and keeping them within their control except for the short time that the exhibition is in progress. Mr. Leary read a petition signed by 400 ratepayers who favored the purchase of those grounds. He asked the council to submit a bylaw on the first of January.

Mr. Garbutt, another member of the exhibition delegation, stated that it was most desirable that the city purchase the grounds for park and exhibition purposes. He stated that the directors were unable to purchase the grounds, but if the city did so the society would go ahead and put up first class buildings and do so at once.

The mayor stated that the matter had been pretty well threshed out, and they were generally in favor of the proposal.

Ald. Phalen and Ald. Morrow moved that this matter be referred to a Committee of the Whole Council.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

Reports of committees were read as follows;—

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Butler, that the Fire, Water and Light Committee be authorized to purchase a team of horses for the fire hall, and that the treasurer be authorized to issue his cheque to pay for the same. Also that one team of horses now in the hall be sold.

Ald. Morrow thought that the matter should be held over until next year as the Fire, Water and Light Committee had already spent a large sum this year.

It was pointed out that it takes some time to hunt up a good team of horses.

The matter was referred back to the committee.

It was moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Butler, that the chief of the fire brigade be authorized to appoint a call man to look after the fire hall when the brigade is called out to a fire.—Carried.

BYLAWS READ

The following bylaws were read;—To conform the the registration of the plant of Ida. To construct sewers and to raise funds to pay for same. To construct a sewer on Wilson street, on sanitary grounds, authorizing the City Trust Commissioners to grant leases.

ALD MORGAN KICKS.

Ald. Morgan created a disturbance by first moving by reverting to several matters which he had not favored in committee, but which the majority of the committee did favor. Among these matters were the sidewalk on Roger street, in front of the St. Joseph Hospital, which the Board of Works did not see fit to order constructed, as the petition came in too late, and anyway the people did not really want it. Ald Morgan used some rather strong strong language in referring to Ald. Phelan and Ald. Butler, but when these two gentlemen explained their stand the council stood by them.

Ald. Morgan also criticised the action of the Fire, Water & Light Committee, but he made no headway as the council upheld the committee.

It was moved by Ald. Johnston and Ald. Phelan, that this council expresses its sincere appreciation of Mr. Richard Hall's acquiescence to the arrangements of the council in reference to a new public library, and the monument to the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls. — Carried unanimously.

AYLMER STREET.

Mr. Carton was present and stated that he had a bonus on what will be Aylmer and Prince streets, when these are opened up. At present he has no way of getting out except over private property or away around by Lansdowne on Park Sts. so far he has not been able to rent the house. He asked that Aylmer and Princess street both be opened up.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were received,

From the Pearson Cut and Coach Co., of Preston, submitting blue prints of a new style of snow plough asking the council to consider its acceptability of its use in Peterborough.

From A H Mann, asking for the approval of an improved plan, No. 128, Property on George street and Dublin streets. Building operations are ready to be commenced at once by the man who desires to purchase the lot.

From T F. Matthews, asking to have a footaway hydrant placed in front of their premises on George street, which is required by the Ontario Fire Underwriters as a result of a recent examination.

From the C P R, superintendent at Havelock asking to have additional fire protection provided by having a hydrant south of their tracks and on the west side of Hedge street.

From the Baltimore Engraving Co. of New York, asking for contract to provide enamel name sign for street corners.

From A McCarthy, asking for $4 by reason of having been delayed Tues by the street overseer. Mr. Evans in moving a house on Water street.

From T Kinnear & Co., asking for effect drainage, and advising a claim for damage from any loss resulting from the present lack of drainage facilities.

City Engineer Hay sent a communication in reference to the above stating that in his opinion considerable water soaked through the south wall of the building.

From the Board of Health recommending the construction of a sewer on Dublin street from Water to a point 120 feet east of Water.

Several residents at Smith and George streets, asked for a lamp at the corner of these streets.

Does Your Heart Flutter?

Short Breath, Easily Fatigued, Rush of Blood.

IT'S IN THIS CONDITION THAT SUDDEN AND UNEXPECTED COMES.

The heart is an unfailing index of strength. Bodily vigor and a strong heart go hand in hand.

A slight fluttering and shortness of breath is a sign of failing strength, arising from weakened digestive power, or from weakness of the nervous system.

The organic and dangerous affections of the heart seldom manifest themselves until the climax is reached, when death usually supervenes.

Even a small variation in strength renders the heart susceptible on the emotional side, and a little fright, anxiety or haste will set it going at a frightful rate.

You ought to know that when your heart flutters easily, when your breath comes in gasps, when you tire quickly upon exertion, and rest does not recuperate, you have allowed yourself to run down.

It is under these conditions that Ferrozone acts like magic in its strength-giving power. Tens of thousands of Canadians can testify to the marvelous curative power of Ferrozone.

When it's remembered that Ferrozone has the power of making rich, red blood, of giving tone to the system, of vitalizing all the functional powers of the body, it will be easily seen in cases such as yours, in which these fluttering sensations are present. Ferrozone will speedily restore you to health.

Ferrozone makes you strong because it enables you to digest your food, because it makes rich, red blood—because it tones, strengthens, reinforces the whole system.

"I was so overcome with heart flutterings and acute indigestion I could scarcely walk upstairs without panting and catching for my breath," writes E. K. Young, a well known merchant in Augusta. "After using one box of Ferrozone I improved, and after two months I was cured and am sound and healthy as ever to-day."

The best proof of Ferrozone's merit is the enormous good it will do you, in your own case; try it, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Peterboro Will Have a Carnegie Library and Monument to Late Mrs. Nicholls

Before the council meeting last night a session of the committee of the Whole was held for the purpose of considering the public library building. Ald. Bradburn representing the council, and Mr. Richard Hall, representing the Nicholls estate, made a trip last week to Toronto, Brantford, Galt, St Catharines, and several other places where they have erected a new library the past few years. The object was to secure information in regards to the building.

In the case of Peterborough the Nicholls estate has donated a building and an endowment fund amounting in all to about $28,000. It is also proposed to secure $25000 from Mr. Andrew Carnegie. The difficulty that faced the aldermen was whether to call it the Carnegie library or Nicholl's library, or whether to place a tablet on each side of the entrance, one with Carnegie on, and the other with Mrs. Nicholls on.

Mr. Richard Hall stated that he would prefer to see a good building with the words Nicholl's Library on the top. He had no objection to placing a Carnegie tablet inside the building in some place.

The aldermen and the mayor, however, were in favor of erecting a monument to Mrs. Nicholls in Central Park.

The general view of the council was that the present building which the estate donated on Simcoe street, be disposed of for say $18000 There is now an endowment of $10,000 with the old library. Then secure $25,000 or $30,000 from Mr. Carnegie. A new property could then be purchased, and a handsome library building put up.

It was moved by Ald. Johnston and Ald. Elliott, that Mr Richard Hall acquesing to the arrangement that the building on Simcoe street, donated by the executors of the Nicholls estate be sold and the funds secured be used in equipping and adding to the endowment fund, and that $25,000 be gotten from Mr. Carnegie for the erection of a new library, and that a monument be erected to the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls on any spot that Mr Hall may choose.—Carried.

Peterborough's Water Works System Tested

Inspector Howe representing the Canadian Underwriters' Association, arrived in the city yesterday morning and made things a little lively for the firemen for a couple of hours. The inspector is here upon instruction from the City Council, for the purpose of inspecting the local fire fighting apparatus.

After dinner Mr. Howe met the mayor and together they sent in an alarm from box 22, and when the brigade arrived they attached a line of hose to the hydrant at the corner of Queen and Simcoe streets. After this was tested the inspector stated that he wanted eleven lines of hose put on, but the brigade only had nine nozzles. In hose was attached to hydrants south of Simcoe street and south of Simcoe street, and two on Water street north of Simcoe. The water pressure was good, and a fair sized stream was thrown when all the line were in use.

Mr. Howe will be here until tomorrow night, and his report will be forwarded to the city clerk at a later date.

The Early Grocer is now Ready for Business

Mr. T C. Monge has opened up a first class stock of groceries at the corner of Water and McDonnel streets, and will be glad to have all the residents in that district call upon him He is a grocer of years of experience and is quite capable to supply the wants of all. A feature of the new store is that it will be opened early in the morning for the accommodation of those who wish to leave orders while on their way to work. Mr. Monge will also be found ever ready and obliging, and his delivery system will be prompt. He should receive a large share of patronage from the Peterborough people.

Army Officers Say Farewell Next Sunday

Staff-Captain Goodwin and Capt Maisey, the officers in charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army, will say farewell to the soldiers next Sunday and on the following Monday a tea will be held. The officers are leaving for Montreal, where they will be identified with the work of the Army in their new building, which is being erected in that city, and which is about completed.

Their successors here will be Staff Capt. and Mrs Walton of Toronto. It will be remembered that Staff-Capt. Walton was here last Easter in charge of the Temple Band. At that time he made a lasting impression as a man who will be pleased to know that he is coming here to reside. It is expected that he will commence his duties on Nov. 12th.

The work of Staff-Capt. Goodwin and Capt. Maisey during the past year has been very successful, and the best wishes of a host of friends and acquaintances will follow them in their new field of labor.

On and Off Chat About Fat

The society reporter picked up the following gem at Madam Brewster's not twenty-four hours ago. One of her millionaire customers struggling into a new gown asked the famous costumer how she kept her figure in such superb shape. "You habitually eat and drink heartily and (even thoughtlessly, not to say flotsomy at times," she complained, "whereas I live like a hermit. Yet I can't keep slim and, apparently, you can't get fat." "Quinty," replied the fashion czarina. "I admit I don't fatten up nor do I thin down, but it is because I have the power, my dear Mrs. —— (the name almost slipped out), to say to my fat, 'Thus far and no farther.' I don't exercise nor diet nor run any danger of wrinkles or stomach trouble either. Here is the secret." She wrote a few words on a slip of paper and handed it to her customer. "Get that filled at the druggist's," she concluded, "take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime and you will never get any fatter than you want to be. You can take off a pound a day with this recipe, if you want to."

Being fat herself and fully alive to the tremendous value of these statements to fat folks everywhere, the society reporter committed an unpardonable social sin; she peeped over her lady's shoulder — and this is what she saw: For fifteen fat, simple, safest, cheapest, most helpful receipts of any: One-half ounce Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, 1 3-4 ounces Peppermint Water.

London, October 30.—King Edward is taking practical steps to settle the unemployed question in so far as lies within his power by arranging extensive improvements, necessitating that the employment of a considerable number of men be taken in hand at Balmoral.

One change already effected by the King on his Scotch estate was the removal of the statue of John Brown from the conspicuous place where Victoria set it up in the grounds to a more retired position.

Read the pain formula on a box of Pink Pain Tablets. Then ask your Doctor if there is a better one. Pain means congestion — blood pressure somewhere. Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets check head pains, womanly pains, 20 for 25c. Sold by all druggists.

Taft and Bryan Wind Up the Great Campaign

DEMOCRATIC

Bryan	278
Taft	295

REPUBLICAN

Bryan	168
Taft	325

New York, Nov. 2.—The last turn was given today to the political wheel of 1908. With the opening of the polls less than twenty-four hours away, the leaders of the two great parties are giving their attention to the last details of what has been one of the most interesting campaigns in many years. Mr. Taft speaks this afternoon in Cleveland, and tonight winds up his fight for the Presidency at Youngstown, going thence to Cincinnati to vote tomorrow, and to hear the results of the balloting. Mr. Bryan is touring Northwestern Kansas, and expects to reach his home in Lincoln tonight. He will get the returns over a special wire which has been run into his farm at Fairview.

BOTH FORECAST VICTORY.

There was no change today in the announced estimates of the opposing national chairmen. Mr. Hitchcock, of the Republican National Committee, holding steadfastly to his forecast of 325 votes for Mr. Taft and Mr. Mack, of the Democratic committee, announced himself as equally certain that Mr. Bryan will receive 273 of the 483 votes in the electoral college.

The last day of the campaign found Mr. Hitchcock early at his office in the Metropolitan tower, and he will remain there until twelve o'clock tonight, when he leaves for West Newton, Mass., to cast his vote. He will return Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Hitchcock sent out late last night for delivery early today a series of telegrams to National Committeemen and to State chairmen, giving them their last instructions. Not a single State was omitted. Today the Republican chairman is in telegraphic and telephonic communication with leaders of the party in all sections of the country. He advised them that ought to deal at liberty to consult with him either by wire or over the long-distance telephone as to local conditions, on details needing his attention. The Republican campaign accordingly, entered the telegraphic stage today, and visitors to headquarters made their calls brief. Excepting a few callers at hotels, however, as practically all of the leaders who have been here in consultation with the national chairman returned to their respective homes last night.

National Chairman Mack, of the Democratic party, also sent out the final instructions to State chairmen last night, and at Democratic headquarters in the Hoffman House today the same rule as to telegraphic and telephonic communication prevailed.

HUGHES' FINAL BID.

The Republican organization of New York state is making its final bid for votes "below the Mason" today. Governor Hughes is expected to deliver ten speeches in the city before midnight. The local Republican leaders have received their instructions from State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff and from County Chairman Herbert Parsons. They are working upon the belief that they will hold the Bryan majority in Greater New York to the neighborhood of 80,000, and that Mr. Taft will come down to the Bronx with a plurality from the up-State counties sufficient to overcome the Democratic vote in the city, and leave a margin of 100,000 in his favor.

The Tammany district leaders in New York county and the leaders in Brooklyn (King's); Long Island City (Queen's), and Staten Island (Richmond) have also had their last instructions from headquarters. The Democrats claim that Mr. Bryan will have a sufficient majority in Greater New York to more than offset even an unusually heavy Republican vote from up-State. They claim that party unity prevails in every section of the State for the first time in a decade, and are depending upon the labor vote, they declare, to turn the tide in their direction.

The Electric Lights Went Out

Owing to the electric lights having gone out at one o'clock last night The Times was compelled to cut short much of the local news and most of the foreign dispatches. Enquiry at the power house of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., brought out the fact that the river was almost dry and they were unable to supply the necessary light.

The American Politicians Fire Their Last Shots

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, Nov. 2.—The computers of probable election results all concede that there is no possible chance of a Democratic Senate, but there is more room for speculation in the House of Representatives. In 1906 the Democrats captured 28 districts held by Republicans, which only 82 reversals this time would be necessary to give the Democrats the House. The Republicans realize this and are straining every effort in the close districts.

The Democratic management make no secret of the fact that they are giving special attention to the close districts and there are many of these which give Republican majorities of 2,000 and less in the Mississippi Valley States. At the same time, however, they are not slighting the labor districts in the Eastern States, and contend that prospects are good.

BRYAN'S LAST SPEECH

(Special to The Times.)

Morryville, Ks., Nov. 2.—W. J. Bryant concluded his campaign in Kansas and the United States, before an enthusiastic gathering here tonight. It was a last political speech and was non-partisan. He realized that it was the concluding speech of the campaign, and it was delivered with more than ordinary feeling and with all the earnestness at his command. He was tumultuously applauded. Referring to Mr. Roosevelt's denial of the Standard Oil Company's support, he asked, "Did Roosevelt's administration give the Standard Oil Co. a monopoly on a pipe line across the Isthmus of Panama in spite of Mr. Bunau's protest?

"Did not the administration deposit through money in Rockefeller's National City Bank without interest, if the interest on which were collected after it had been loaned out would amount to more than enough to finance the campaign. That bank made enough on the loans from the government's deposits which it had without interest to make a sum greater than the entire campaign fund."

TAFT'S FAREWELL.

(Times Special).

Youngstown, O., Nov. 2.—The last word of the campaign was spoken by Mr. Wm. H. Taft here at a vast gathering here tonight, and he is now on his way to Cincinnati to cast his vote. His last message was; —"Vote for the Republican ticket and preserve the prosperity, protection to American industry, and the laboring man's rights."

Steamer Telegram was Burned to Water's Edge

(Special to The Times.)

Owen Sound, Nov. 2.—The steamer Telegram, owned by the Dominion Navigation Co., and engaged in the fishing industry on the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron, was burned to the water's edge today one mile off Rattlesnake Harbor. The crew of 12, and one passenger, took to the boats and were landed safely near Rattlesnake Point. The boat was insured for $19,000, although no mention of the insurance was carried. She was 125 feet beam, and was on her way to Manitoulin Island.

Conservative was Elected in Nippissing

(Times Special)

The Nippissing recount gave Gordon the Conservative candidate elected by a majority of 21 over McCool, who had been declared elected. The Liberals had prepared an excursion to North Bay with a banquet there, but this celebration has been indefinitely postponed.

McGuire was Arrested in Brantford

(Times Special).

Brantford, Nov. 2.—Jos. McGuire, the Grand Trunk yard man, was arrested here today prior to the inquest in connection with the Mount Vernon wreck. He was charged with manslaughter. Later he was released on $2,000 bail. He gave his evidence before the coroner's jury. That body returned a verdict placing the blame of the accident on the railway company.

Obituary

JOHN McLEAN ARMOUR.

Mr. John McLean Armour, one of the oldest residents of the city passed away on Saturday night at his home, 61 Dunlop street. Death was due to the infirmities of old age.

The late Mr. Armour was born in Scotland, and came to Peterborough from Glasgow in 1851, and had resided here ever since. He is survived by his wife, five sons and four daughters. The sons are Andrew, of Utica, N.Y., William, of Santa Cruz, Cal.; John, of New York City, and George and Alexander of Peterborough. The daughters are Mrs. W. Lyons and Mrs. T. Kemp of Peterborough, Mrs. R. Hart and Miss Isabella, of New York.

Mr. Armour was well known in the city and his death will be heard of with much regret.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from his late residence to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Robt. Pogue will conduct the service.

A man who had been convicted of stealing was brought before a certain "down East" judge, well known for his tender heartedness, to be sentenced.

"Have you ever been sentenced to imprisonment?" asked the judge, sadly unkindly.

"Never!" exclaimed the prisoner, suddenly bursting into tears.

"Well, well, don't cry, my man," said his honor, consolingly; "you're going to be now."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Water the Lowest for Over 14 Years

Mr. Wm. Collins of the locks stated yesterday that the water below the locks is one foot lower than at any time during the 14 years that he has been around the river.

Owing to the water being so low in the river, there has not been sufficient power now for several nights to run the Central Mill or the Quaker Oats Co. mill. Mr. H. A. Mulhern, manager of the Central Milling Co., stated yesterday that if rains did not come soon the mills would have to be closed down during the day, as well as at night. Not for many years, he said, has this condition of affairs been known to exist.

As a result of having to run only half time the output of flour from these mills will consequently be much less and will cause a decrease in the amount of business. Several homes were also without electric lights last night.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of "American Dispensatory;" Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of "Specific Medicine;" Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., Author of "Materia Medica and Prof. in Rennet Medical College, Chicago. Send name and address on Postal Card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive free booklet giving extracts from writings of all the above medical authors and many others endorsing, in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient of which "Golden Medical Discovery" is composed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They may be used in conjunction with "Golden Medical Discovery" if bowels are much constipated. They're tiny sugar-coated.

A MAGISTRATE'S EVIDENCE IN FAVOR OF ZAM-BUK

MR. PERRY JP

Zam-Buk wins favor wherever tried! The Magistrate whose words are quoted below tried it thoroughly and now tells the result. If you suffer from any skin disease or injury mark well his words!

The Pavilion, Gold Fields, B.C.

After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. It cured me of a skin rash of five years standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for. I do certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in their homes. It truly does more than you claim for it. Yours very truly,

ROGER F. PERRY, Justice of Peace for B.C.

Chronic Sore Quite Healed.

Mrs. M. A. Harris of 69 Chestnut St., St. Thomas, Ont., says:—"My husband had a running sore on his ankle for about two months. Zam-Buk showed satisfactory results from the first application (although other salves had failed), cleaning and healing the open wound. We have also found Zam-Buk unequalled for Cuts, Burns, Sores, etc., and have great confidence in recommending it to others."

ZAM-BUK CURES eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, ulcers, chronic sores or open wounds, barber's rash, blood-poisoning, cold-sores, cracked hands, cuts, scalds, salt rheum and all skin injuries and diseases. It is also a sure cure for piles.

Canada Cuba Land & Fruit Company

(LIMITED)

OCTOBER TO MARCH is the time to plant orange lemon and grape-fruit trees in Cuba.

OUR COLONY is no venture, but a practical success, producing fruit of a most lucious quality. The groves planted on our estate have more than come up to our expectations.

TEN ACRES planted in oranges and grape fruit will produce when in bearing, an income of $2,700.00 to $5,00.00 per annum, thus rendering the owner independent for life.

NO INVESTMENT, with so small an outlay, will produce the same income as will such a grove of oranges, grape-fruit and pineapples. There is a ready market for all that can be produced, with shipping facilities direct from the Company's dock and excellent railway accommodation.

CUBAN FRUITS can be gathered and shipped when fully ripened, whilst Florida fruits are usually shipped green, the result being that the first are most lucious and wholesome and more eagerly sought by the buyers. No frost or snow, no extreme heat, and one of the healthiest climates in the world.

CALL AND SEE recent photographs of results. Prospectus on appliaation. Every information freely given

THIS COMPANY owns over 100 tobacco plantations, producing some of the finest grades known to the trade.

MORE THAN 70,000 citrus fruit trees (orange, grape-fruit and lemon) have already been planted. and more are being continually added.

NOW IS THE TIME to purchase. Under existing circumstances it will be but a short time before these fruit lands will bring many times their selling price.

A NEW AND BETTER WAY

A new way of dealing with persons who offend against the rights of property, whether out of viciousness, revenge, or mere shiftless carelessness, has been provided by law against, has been provided by law in the states of New York and Massachusetts. It has been found productive of much better results than the old system of punishing by fines and imprisonment. It is called the Elmira Refractory Method. It abolishes corporal punishment, striped uniforms, the lock-step and the shaving of heads in prison, substituting therefor a system of probation and reformation under the control of a State Probation Commission. Both adults and children are amenable to it. This system is founded on the principle that human nature is usually susceptible to sympathetic and constructive influences, provided the approach is made at the right time and in the proper manner. It is based on the fact that an interested, sensible friend can do more to reform a neglected boy or a weak man than can bars and lashes. The New York law permits a judge to appoint probation officers, as either salaried or volunteer officials, to look after persons who need correction, but who, on account of youth, or other mitigating circumstances, are entitled to clemency, and ought to be spared the stigma of imprisonment. Persons released by a court on probation, are ordered to go to school, or keep at work, according as their individual circumstances require, and to keep in close touch with their probation officer. But if, while under the supervision, they again do wrong and show that further efforts on behalf of the probation officer will be futile, they may be returned to court for some may be returned to court for more severe sentence. Instances of the working of the probation system occurred recently. A man in Buffalo who smashed a window was released under supervision of a probation officer on the condition that he would through that official pay the owner of the windows its full value in weekly instalments. He went to work and paid as ordered. Another case was that of four young men who set fire to a barn, causing damage to the extent of one thousand dollars. Each of the guilty men were ordered to pay $250 from weekly wages. Three of them paid the instalments in full, and the fourth is paying as fast as his earnings permit. Thus the offenders have been taught a valuable lesson without degrading them by prison life, and at the same time compensating the owner of the barn for his loss. The probation system is also used to collect fines. The system is also used to collect fines in weekly instalments while the guilty persons are on probation. This prevents the necessity of committing them to jail if they are unable to pay the fines at the time of trial. Local authorities regard this method as having the advantage not only of bringing more money in the shape of fines into the city treasury and of decreasing the expense of maintaining the offenders in jail, but more especially of benefitting the probationers morally through the oversight and guidance which the probation officer exercises over them through a period of weeks or months. The custom of considering wrongdoers as deserving only of retributive punishment is giving way to the practice of trying to better the character of offenders while at the same time protecting society. This is the underlying principle of the probation system, and the success which so far has attended its operation amply justifies the reform.

FOOLISH TALK ABOUT PROTESTS

While it is quite natural that the decisive vote of Monday last should leave the defeated candidate in no pleasant humor as the perversity of a generation who did not take him at his worth, those who are close to him should bear in mind that nothing will better tend to lift up a man in the esteem of his neighbors than a dignified acceptance of defeat, and a graceful recognition of the fact that, perhaps, the wisdom of the multitude is greater than that of the few.

Of course, the first thing that occurs to a defeated candidate in these times, as the only perceptible consolation, is to "protest", and it is to our mind unfortunate that the grounds upon which an election can be voided are so wide and varied that probably, if the literal letter of the law were to be strictly applied, there would be very few of the couple of hundred of gentlemen who were chosen on Monday to constitute the next House of Commons who might not be called upon to "do it over again."

The first concern of the ungrudged citizen, who is not blinded and led away by partizan rancor, is the reputation of the community in which he is an integer. We believe that it is quite possible that in the zeal and excitement of the election the strict limits of the law may have been overstepped, and that equally by the supporters of Mr. Burnham as by the friends of Mr. Stratton. But it is another thing to proclaim to the world that a constituency like West Peterborough is a mere marketable consideration, and that the political sentiments of a majority may be influenced by questionable means.

The very suggestion of such a possibility is degrading, and no man loyal to our best interests, will take part in putting this reproach upon the constituency.

There can be no question whatever of the absolute authority of the voice of the electors, as expressed through the ballot boxes on Monday, and certainly no man in all this wide Dominion is better emitled to regard his great majority as a free will offering than our member elect, Mr. Stratton.

As an independent onlooker, having taken no side in the campaign while it was in progress, and retaining after it is over, the most friendly feeling toward them both, we venture to proffer to a few ill-advised people, who are setting out to find legal quibbles upon which to set aside the deliberate verdict of so great a majority of the electors of West Peterborough as asserted itself in favor of Mr. Stratton on Monday last, the advice which Punch many years ago gave to people who contemplated matrimony—"Don't."

With a Liberal government in power for the next five years at least, West Peterborough has many interests that can be advanced by a keen, active, influential business representative. Mr. Hall, during his term made a splendid record of which the riding has the substantial proofs, and no one could possibly be found better qualified by ability, public experience and loyal devotion to the welfare of this riding, to carry on the good work, than is Hon. J. B. Stratton.

We hope the foolish talk of a "protest" will be allowed to pass for what it is really worth, and that it will receive no serious encouragement. In fact, we may even venture to remind our old friend Mr. Moore, who has been pointed out as the instrument of coming trouble, that "Rule 37" of the common council of Peterborough is still in force.

Ezekiel Hall, Alta Station, was sentenced at Stratford to 10 years for assaulting Mrs. Levi General, an Indian woman.

INDEPENDENT AMERICAN JOURNALISM

The number of newspapers in the United States which have refused their whole-hearted support during the present campaign to either candidate, is a striking sign of the times. There have been no issues to the front which would justify an independent journal in casting in its lot enthusiastically with either party; and the happy consequence is that we have had a frank and open discussion of the various points raised during the struggle by a number of leading papers whose were not afraid to say what they thought, no matter which party might suffer. Some of these independent papers have a declined preference for one or other candidate; but that does not blind them, even temporarily, to any mistakes he may make or bad associates he may tolerate.

Thus we have the New York Sun supporting Taft and ye critikins his speeches. The Sun is opposed to the Roosevelt inspiration and attacks it wherever it appears. The New York Post is in the same position. The New York World and Herald are supporting neither candidate, and are telling the truth—as they see it—about both parties. The New York American is opposing both of the old parties and is supporting Mr. Hearst's own candidate, Hisgen. The New York Times is for Taft, but is not blindfolded to the faults of his party for that reason. And so it goes. In other cities, the number of independent papers is not so large; but there are representatives of this spirit throughout the Union. The "thick-and-thin" partisan is being edged out of the newspaper offices.

This attitude of the press reflects the feeling of the people. There were never so many "doubtful" States before in the history of American politics. The independent vote will settle the election, neither party having anything like enough followers to constitute a majority. It is to this independent vote that the party leaders are appealing.

No wise man ever chases a street car after he catches it. The high-bound partisan is the "bum" of modern politics. He has neither influence nor respect. He is a joke to his neighbors and a chattel in the eyes of his beloved leaders. His opinions are not considered. He is permitted to squeal when he feels like it, for the men who own him know that he cannot be driven away from the "band waggon." He is a danger to his country and a menace to good government. Fortunately his power is waning, and even his leaders, who contemptuously calculate upon his fidelity, are bound to be governed wholly by the views of the independents whose support they seek.

Big Roosevelt Hunt A l l on British Soil

Washington, Oct. 30.—While President Roosevelt's plans for his African hunting trip have not been entirely completed and will not be fully determined upon for several months, some general idea of his expedition was gained to-day from Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell, for twelve years in charge of the Methodist church in Africa, who spent some time with the President and talked over the hunting trip in addition to discussing the work of the missionaries in that country.

The general route to be taken by the president when he reaches Africa will be from Alexandria by steamer, probably of the German East Africa Line, through the Suez Canal, the Red Sea and down the east coast of Africa to the port of Mombasa, the capital of British East Africa. At Mombasa the outfit of the expedition, which has been purchased in London, will be assembled and shipped by rail to Lake Victoria Nyanza. The President and his party will make the trip to Lake Victoria Nyanza by rail, stopping off at various points along the route to make hunting excursions into the interior, away from the railway. The country traversed by the railway is of the wildest sort and all kinds of big game can be found along the line.

The real work of the expedition will not begin, however, until the party reaches the plateau of Uganda, after crossing Lake Victoria Nyanza, where elephants game to be found nowhere else in the world. It is not known exactly how long the President will remain in this region. When the homeward trip begins the party will strike out along the headwaters of the White Nile River, following the stream down to Khartum and thence to Cairo.

The President's party is to consist of his son Kermit, who is to be the official photographer of the expedition, and two naturalists from the National Museum. No other persons will be taken from this country. When he reaches Africa Mr. Roosevelt will employ the services of natives and guides. A caravan will be organized for the trip from the railway terminus in Uganda to the Nile. The naturalists will prepare such specimens as it is thought the National Museum will want, and these will be shipped immediately to the United States.

Whether Mrs. Roosevelt will meet the party at Khartum will not be definitely decided until the trip is begun.

IN BRITISH TERRITORY.

During the entire trip the President will be on English territory and the English officials along the route will do everything in their power to assist the party. The President has had correspondance with some of these officials who have given him valuable information and advice.

It has not been decided yet what route the President will take in crossing the Atlantic.

Bishop Hartzell said the President expressed the greatest interest in the work being done by the American missionaries in Africa. The President promised that during his trip he would visit as many of the mission stations as possible and would use his influence in the interest of the work.

The bishop was asked whether he had invited the President to do some missionary work while he was on his hunting expedition. He replied that he would like to see the President doing such work, but he had not made the proposal to him.

HOCKEY

Stratford, Oct. 30.—The annual meeting of the Stratford Hockey Club will be held within the next ten days. There is little prospect of a professional team here, and prospects are that Stratford will be represented in the O.H.A. with senior and junior teams.

There was a rumor that some of the amateur players might be induced to join the professional ranks, but there have been only rumors. Two of last year's speedy juniors, Richards, point man, and "Reg" Hankin, the invaluable goal, will be advanced to senior standing owing to the age limit, but the other speedy five, F. Hankin, Bradshaw, McCallum, F. and J. Simpson, and Dorland, and almost innumerable dark horses from the various city clubs, will be candidates for the junior teams. Roberts, the speedy senior, will be out of town, and it is not sure that MacLaren will be here, but the entire forward line of last year, Kilks, Edmunds, Bern, and Easson, are here, and will likely be in the game

News in Brief

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—When Thomas Fox, after a terrible struggle with D. J. Reardon on the edge of a cliff at Primrose Hill on Sept. 3rd, threw him over, he did the proper thing, and was warmly commended by Magistrate O'Keefe this morning. Fox was walking with his sweetheart on a moonlight evening, when Reardon who was a married man, insulted her. A desperate struggle ensued, during which Reardon was thrown over a forty feet cliff. Fox fell with him. Reardon was instantly killed, but Fox, falling uppermost, was only injured. The straight-forward story he told the coroner's jury, said the magistrate, entirely exonerates him of any charge of having caused the death of Reardon. Fox was acquitted.

Suffolk, Va., Oct. 30.—Rev. Ernest Lyons was arrested here this afternoon on a warrant charging him with the murder of Rev. John L. Smith, who has been missing from his charge at Reid's Ferry, Va., for several months. Smith's body was found floating in Nansemond River, and the coroner's inquest developed that the preacher had been murdered, that his body had been buried and later unearthed and thrown into the water.

Lyons was the last person seen with Smith before his death. The ministers are exponents of the Sanctified Free Love sect.

Smith's continued absence alarmed the members of his congregation, who employed a detective to go on the case. The detective traced the crime to Lyons. It is alleged that the two ministers were jealous of each other and that Lyons, who has held Smith's charge since his disappearance, committed the act to inherit his storied estate.

Then, with the new comers in the saloon, the latter set out, following the road that led up the river to the ferry landing. At the cut he climbed the bank at a leisurely pace and continued his way eastward, making straight across the snow toward the squat shack of the Lancasters.

His approach was instantly marked. Marylyn was once more at her post studying the square landscape framed

"Who can it be?" she asked.

by a window. When he made a quick figure on that landscape she saw him and called to Dallas.

"Here's some one coming," she announced, inwardly glad at the possibility of diversion.

Dallas hurriedly joined her. "Who can it be?" she asked.

The door was unbolted, the other window not fastened. Yet so far were her thoughts from molestation that she left them so.

"Going to ask him in?" questioned Marylyn.

"Not till I find out who he is."

They fell silent, conjecturing.

When Matthews reached the drift before the shack he halted and signaled for them to open their window. That attitude toward them—clearly he did not expect a welcome—at once roused Dallas' suspicion.

"Marylyn," she said, making as if to obey their visitor, "draw the bolt of the door."

The younger girl, quick to be alarmed, instantly did as she was told, and Dallas then shoved the sash aside. Both girls looked from the opening.

With all Matthews' hostile intent it must be said that the moment found him disconcerted. He had learned on arriving that the section boss had two daughters. The news did not alter his determination one whit. Had any one suggested such a thing he would have been moved to laughter. But now he noted the prettiness of the younger girl, and a certain conceited desire to appear chivalrous, which had earned him the title of "lady killer" among his associates, made him involuntarily spruce. He smiled ingratiatingly and prepared to launch into flowery speech when—he met Dallas' grave, steady eyes and suddenly found himself at a loss for words.

"How d' do, miss?" he said at last.

"How d' y' do?" she returned. In spite of herself her voice trembled.

That did not escape Matthews. He shamed his momentary embarrassment and resolutely grappled the matter that had brought him. "I want t' see your old man," he said. It was a demand.

"Dad can't see you today," she answered with ready caution. She thought it best to keep from him, whoever he was, the knowledge of her father's absence.

"Huh!" ejaculated Matthews in an ugly tone. He came a few paces nearer. "I got t' see him, jus' th' same."

"But you can't."

"Ain't he t' home?"

Marylyn pressed close to her sister. "Tell him yes," she begged nervously.

Dallas hesitated. Then she answered: "He's not home. Will you please come again—some other time?"

The gambler chuckled. "My dear young lady," he said, his tone the extreme of insolence, "I can't come no other time. Th' business I got t' do has got t' be done t'day. I might as well tell you that my name's Matthews—Nick Matthews. This claim you're on is mine, an' I mean t' have it. What's more, I mean t' have it t'day."

"Ah!" Dallas was thinking fast. At her shoulder, aware all at once that they were in danger, was Marylyn, clinging in pitiful terror.

"Yes," added Matthews, as if that clinched the matter.

Dallas looked at him without speaking.

"I jus' come from Dodge City," he went on. "My intention is t' live on my land all winter. I'm very sorry"—this ironically—"your old man took th' trouble to build on it. He ought t' inquired about th' claim before he done that. But long's it's all one with my plans for improvin' I don't see's I ought t' kick." He chuckled again and spat.

"I know and so does dad," said Dallas, "that a man filed upon this quarter section in July. We didn't find it out, though, till long after we built this house. We know his six months is almost up too. But if you're him, and even if you've got back only a few hours before it's up, I'm willing, and I think dad 'll be, for you to have the claim. But you must pay for what "I never ast y' t' go anything on it."

"That's so. But the law says"—

"Aw, th' law be d——d! I don't pay a cent!"

"Then I know dad won't leave."

"Oh, you do?"

"Yes," very quietly.

"Well, let me tell y', my dear, that you're dead wrong. You're goin' t' git your duds an' grub t'gether right now. In half a' hour you leave this cabin!"

At this Marylyn began to sob.

"Come, get a move on!" ordered Matthews threateningly. He knew that if he wished to regain the land there would be no time better than the present. He began to walk up and down, flinging his arms about to start the circulation.

Dallas turned to comfort Marylyn, putting an arm about her protectingly. "Hush!" she said. "Keep quiet, honey!"

"Oh, let's go, let's go!" wailed the younger girl.

Matthews came forward again and took out his watch, a large open faced timepiece hung to a braided buckskin chain. "Now, look a-here," he said peremptorily, "I don't want no more funny business. This claim's mine. Your old man ain't got a solitary right to it. So you got t' go. I'll give you jes' ten minutes." With this he resumed his pacing, comforting his beat with occasional drafts from a flask.

Dallas strove hard to collect herself. "I can't do anything till dad comes," she called to him finally. "You want us to leave. Why, we haven't got any place to go, and it's cold"—

"Guess I know that," interrupted Matthews. "I'm almost frz."

"And you've got no right to ask us to go till you've paid for this house and the well—and—and my plowing."

"I pay fer nothin' I don't see an' fer no hole in th' ground," he said. "And as far 's a place to go is concerned"—this with a leer—"there's Shanty Town

MOUNTAIN SLIDING.

Hawaiian Small Boys Simply "Drop Down the Edge of the Scenery."

Water sports are by no means the only vigorous athletics indulged in by the boys of Hawaii. Mountain climbing is a favorite pastime, for there are peaks 4,000 feet high within easy walking distance of any part of Honolulu, and on the island of Hawaii there are two mountains fully 14,000 feet in height. Not infrequently the Honolulu schools give picnics on the mountain sides that the pupils may gather land shells. It is on these excursions in search of land shells that the Hawaiian schoolboys revel in the once national sport, mountain sliding.

A very steep mountain side is selected, where the grass is long and sloping downward. Every one gathers his own ti leaves. The ti leaf is something like the banana leaf, but not nearly so long. With a bunch of ti leaves in his hand the first boy steps to the edge of the side, grasps the leaves by the stems in both hands, places the leafy part under him and sits down, gives himself a start and drops down the edge of the scenery like a flash. I was assured that it was an easy matter to regulate the speed of descent by merely grasping the ti stems firmly and lifting them upward, this acting as a brake. I longed for the thrill of dropping down over the edge of a mountain and upon my brief sled of ti leaves began the descent. I went like the wind. It seemed as though my breath would be taken away from me or that I would plunge head over heels, to be dashed to pieces among the trees below. I thought of my brake and drew up on the ti leaves with all my might and came up with a jerk that jarred every bone in my body. There I sat, looking downward almost perpendicularly, held in position only by a few leaves resting on the smooth, slippery grass, but the sliding grass is nearly a foot long, and it is only after it has been repeatedly ridden over and beaten down that it approaches perfection in the eyes of the Hawaiian small boy and sometimes leads to accidents. When, for instance, the thin layer of ti leaves wears out beneath the slide a gentle tug at the stalks parts the sled and sends the slider whizzing downward in a most uncomfortable and ungraceful manner, all arms and legs. Lucky is the victim of such an accident if he is not stopped in his downward career by the trunk of a tree.—St. Nicholas.

SCARED THE ROBBERS.

Odd Incident in England in the Eighteenth Century.

For a time during the eighteenth century in England there was a lull in the robbery industry owing to an odd incident. Shortly after the execution of an English burglar named Elliston a curious communication purporting to have been written by him was put into circulation. "Now, as I am a dying man," it ran, "I have done something which may be of good use to the public. I have left with an honest man—the only honest man I was ever acquainted with—the names of all my wicked brethren, the places of their abode, with a short account of the chief crimes they have committed, in many of which I have been the accomplice and heard the rest from their own mouths. I have likewise set down the names of those we call our fathers, of the houses we frequent and all of those who receive and buy our stolen goods. I have solemnly charged this honest man and have received his promise upon oath that whenever he hears of any rogue to be tried for robbery or housebreaking he will look into his list and if he finds there the name of the thief committed to send the whole paper to the government. Of this I have give my companions fair and public warning and hope they will take it." It is said the hint was so effectual that for a long time afterward pockets and burglars in that part of England went into panic stricken retirement. And, this being so, it is just as well they did not know that the letter was a clever forgery, the work of that prince of wits and humorists, Dean Swift.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and fame to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and pallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet the requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Climatic Changes.

There is plenty of evidence of the very best sort which goes to prove that not only Europe and North America, but the lands situated within the arctic circle, must have enjoyed a tropical climate. The numerous fossil remains found in those regions are those of plants and animals which, according to the present state of our knowledge, must have lived under conditions now found only in the equatorial belt. Nothing is clearer than the fact that the polar cold is steadily gaining on the temperate and tropical zones and that eventually the land will be all ice fields.

Donald Knew.

Margaret, aged ten, was a beginner in history. "Mamma," she asked, "what does 'behead' mean?"

"To cut off a man's head, dear."

There was a moment of silent study, then another question.

"What does 'defeat' mean, mamma?"

Little Donald, aged four, was interested.

"I know, mamma," was his logical conclusion. "'Defeat' means to cut a man's feet off."—Delineator.

Very Different.

"In the olden days a reformer was liable to be burnt at the stake."

"Yes, and now we put him on the lecture platform and give him 50 per cent of the gross receipts!"

Talking and eloquence are not the same. To speak and to speak well are two things.—Ben Jonson.

Burma's Popular Sports.

A form of speculation very popular in Burma is bull racing. A certain native sportsman is the owner of one of these bulls, for which he has refused an offer of 10,000 rupees. It has won several races and is looked after and as carefully tended as a Derby favorite. The owner values it at 25,000 rupees, and, it is said, it brings him an annual income of from 12,000 to 15,000 rupees. It is carefully guarded by four men lest it may be got at and "doctored."

Burmans also patronize boxing eagerly, but the art can scarcely be practiced according to Queensberry rules, for we are told by a provincial reporter that he has observed that "even the best boxers strike out with their eyes tightly shut, and if they do hit each other it is more by chance than anything else."—Calcutta Statesman.

The Wrong Lady.

Some young idlers had been enjoying the fun of hailing passing shopgirls with rather doubtful compliments, and from some of the answers returned it was evident that not all of those addressed were taking things kindly. Presently one of the older boys, seeing it was going too far, spoke up. "Look a' here now, fellers," he added, "youse might think youse is wise guys an' all that, but just keep on an' the wrong lady'll come along, an' she'll break yer face, see?"—Argonaut.

A Parthian Shot.

"Even though you are my brother's son I am obliged to discharge you. But I am sorry for your mother's sake."

"Oh, that's all right, sir. Mother says she don't see how I've put up with you as long as I have."—Judge.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one, and one-half-miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state, read what J. W. Jervell, well known in Merrickville, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgic attacks over the complete, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills,—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize debeated glands, scorch out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Orangemen's Concert

The Orangemen will hold their annual concert in Foresters' Hall on Thursday night.

Tonight

All members of the Y.W.C.A. are cordially invited to the Masquerade Party to-night. A good time is promised.

Gunpowder Plot

The Orangemen will celebrate the fifth of November in their Simcoe street hall this evening by a commemoration service. Rev. Mr. Trumpour will conduct the service and Rev Mr. Pogue will deliver the address.

Small Blaze

A small fire was caused by a spark from the chimney falling on the roof at 95 Aylmer street yesterday morning about a quarter to twelve. The brigade got it out, however, before any damage was done.

Union Thanksgiving

A movement is on foot among the local ministers to hold a union Thanksgiving service in the city next Monday morning. The Ministerial Association will meet on Thursday to complete arrangements.

Broke His Wrist

The many friends of Mrs. Geo. W. Fitzgerald of London street, will regret to learn that he met with a painful accident on Sunday. He slipped and fell and in falling threw out his arm with the result that his wrist was broken.

Apsley Men in the City

Mr. Wm. Galbon and Mr. Duncan Brown of Apsley, were in the city yesterday on business in connection with the new telephone line, recently constructed from Burleigh to Apsley. This line is now in operation, and is proving a great boon to the people in the northern district.

Class Organized

The matriculation class in connection with the Y.M.C.A. work was organized last night when five became members. Some of these will matriculate in July next, and others a year from July. The class is now open and any who desire to take up the work will be given the very best assistance.

Basket Ball

Two splendid basketball games were pulled off last night in the Y.M.C.A. The first game was between the Cinefrains and the Maple Leafs and was won by the former. Score 30—21.

The second game was between the Brownies and Turners and was won by the former.

New Telephone Connection

The private telephone line extending to Dunsford, Downeyville, Kings Wharf, Pleasant Point, Arcona, Red Rock, Bury's Green, Fairburn and Nogie Creek, has been connected with the lines of the Bell Telephone Company at Bobcaygeon. It is interesting to note that these points can now be reached over the Bell lines.

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak Stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the Stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out his error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve". When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all druggists.

Have You Got Your Tag Yet? Don't Delay.

Fellowship Tea

A very pleasant time was spent by some 25 young men who were guests of the Strangers' Fellowship Club at the Y.M.C.A. banquet hall on Sunday evening last. This was the first tea this season and the menu was provided by the ladies of St. Andrew's church. After church in the evening, several of the young men returned to the Y.M.C.A. and took part in the study of Sir George Williams, the founder of the institution.

Carnation Night

Miss Jewell and Mr. Duncan won the prize for graceful skating at the roller rink last night. They were presented with a beautiful bouquet of carnations. The attraction of the evening was flower night, and each skater was presented with a carnation. A large number were present and everyone was well satisfied. The next attraction will be the race on Thursday night between Boagland the famous pedestrian and Prof. Genno and others. The course is two miles for Boagland, while Prof. Genno will skate four miles. The race will also be put on on Friday night. The band concert will also be rendered that night. The race between the walker and skater should prove a great drawing card.
